4 'COPTERS CRASH, 6 MEN DIE

ADM. BURKE WARNS:

Half of Fleet to Be Obsolete

By BILL BROOM
Independent, Press-Telegram Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—Uncle Sam is plowing full speed ahead on a nuclear-powered guided missile fleet for the Navy, half of whose ships will be obsolete in five more years.

The new ships will be better than anything the enemy—or our allies—have. They will incorporate every principle of the atomic age.

But at the present rate of construction, the new models will be far too few to replace World War II vessels which will be approaching decay by 1963.

Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, says the nation will be in "very serious trouble" by the mid-1960s unless more nuclear-age ships are built.

One hundred three of the Navy's present fleet of 967 ships will be dropped out of commission by June 30, 1959. More importantly, 450 of the 864 remaining will soon be 20 years old.

Two decades is considered a full life for any ship by Burke and other naval authorities. Submarines, whose hulls deteriorate more rapidly, last an even shorter period.

* * * *

THE REPLACEMENTS under construction are glamorous. All the new fighting vessels will carry at least one brand of missile. Some, including the cruiser U.S.S. Long Beach, and especially submarines, will be nuclear-propelled.

Atomic power gives not only unlimited range and flexibility of operation but also permits full-speed maneuver.

Most of the Navy's punch today is concentrated behind the muzzles of these major ships: 15 attack aircraft car-

HST, Adlai Assail GOP for 'Failure'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Harry S. Truman and Adlai E. Stevenson ripped into the Eisenhower administration Saturday night as tainted with failure and responsible for an economic slump at home and sagging confidence abroad.

Hundreds on hundreds of party partisans, assembled from over the nation, roared approval as the pair of veteran Democratic war horses jumped to the political firing line.

This was the start of the 1958 campaign to strengthen the Democratic grip on Congress in next fall's elections.

* * * *

TRUMAN ACCUSED the Eisenhower administration of imposing five years of "economic misrule" on the nation. The result, said the peppery former President, has been a "Republican recession" in this country and a "crisis of confidence" overseas.

Stevenson, who tried twice for the White House and fell short, slashed at the Republican record as "stained by heavy failure in many areas." He, too, singled out what he termed declining economic and military strength and "the loss of confidence in us abroad."

* * * *

AND, IN A PREVIEW of what the country can expect from the Democrats in the coming campaign, this same theme throbbed through speeches of other party spokesmen — such men as House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senate Leader Lyndon Johnson, a pair of Texans.

It was a switch from the party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners to a gala "Harry S. Truman Dinner." Upwards of 3,000 Democratic big wheels, party leaders said, shelled out $100 apiece to eat filet mignon, wash it down with wine, help fill Democratic coffers and cheer every jab at the GOP.

Many came in formal dress, others in business and informal attire—in such numbers that the ballroom at the Sheraton Park Hotel was too small to hold them all. Half the crowd was in the banquet hall beneath.

Governor Warns on Ideology

VAN NUYS (UP)— Gov. Goodwin J. Knight warned Saturday night that the "whole concept of capitalism" is now facing its most serious tests in the battle against Communism.

In an address at a Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce meeting, marking the 10th anniversary observance of a Chevrolet Fisher Body plant, Knight discussed for the most part, General Motors Corporation's part in economics of the nation and California.

"We know that capitalism has been benefiting mankind and nations," he said, "but, because it has been functioning so well so many years, there are many who mistakenly think that it cannot be overpowered by an alien ideology."

* * * *

THE GOVERNOR complimented GM on its scholarship program and said he believes business "has a vested interest in seeing more people educated to take over the increasingly complex jobs of today's industry."

Earlier, Knight said in Fresno that his recommended three-per-cent pay raise for civil service workers may face tough going in the Legislature. He spoke at the California State Employees' Association convention.

L.A.C. Says:

Women in College

Considerable furor has been caused by the suggestion that there be greater restrictions as to the number of women permitted to attend co-educational schools. The professor of journalism at Syracuse University started the furor. It is his method of solving the overcrowding of our colleges now and the tremendous increases expected in the immediate years ahead.

He bases his suggestion on two points. (1) Men need the college degrees more than women, and (2) most women have less sensible or less demanding reasons for a college education. At present, about a third of the students in college are women. Total college enrollment last year was 3,200,000. At present rate that number will double during the next 10 years. Present facilities and instructors cannot take care of

'Maybe We Can Smoke Out His Ace'

Firemen Burn Down House for Training

TORRANCE—Firemen turned arsonists here last week, but it all was in the line of duty.

The smokeaters started a score of blazes in a frame house at 2620 W. 182nd St. Then they set about putting them out.

The structure, located on land planned for an elementary school site, had been condemned as unfit for further use. So the Board of Education gave the Fire Dept. permission to burn it.

* * * *

SMALL FIRES set in various parts of the building gave the blaze-busters experience in coping with problems they're likely to encounter in protecting valuable property.

"A week of work like this is worth five years of fighting accidental fires," said Fire Chief J. J. Benner.

The firemen finally let the house burn to the ground Friday. They had planned to do it Wednesday, but were prevented by a heavy rainstorm.

"Our matches got wet," Benner explained.

Cop Killer Suspect is Ex-Patient

SAN BERNARDINO (AP)—A man held on suspicion of murdering a policeman was identified Saturday as a former patient in Arkansas, Louisiana and California mental hospitals.

Police said fingerprints identified him as Lester Dean Bonds, 39, of Clinton, Ark.

He was booked on suspicion of murdering Detective Russell Grower, 34. Grower was shot Friday when he and two other officers went to a shack in a canyon near Chino to investigate tire thefts.

Bonds was arrested early Saturday in a nearby house.

* * * *

ARRESTING officers said he told them his name was Jefferson Davis, that he was a cotton picker and could not tell them anything about the shooting.

Court records show Bonds was committed to Patton State Hospital here in 1952 after threatening to shoot a Riverside bartender. He escaped in 1953.

Police said their next encounter with him was when he climbed a cliff and rolled a boulder onto a patrol car, breaking a deputy sheriff's leg. The officers said he stabbed two other deputies with an ice pick before being captured.

Business Is Picking Up

A $470 cash register, containing about $150 in cash and checks, was "lifted" Saturday from a service station at 2295 Santa Fe Ave. by a man who drove up in a pick-up truck, grabbed the register and fled before the startled attendant could stop him, police reported.

Britain, U.S. Set on Bases

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States and Britain agreed Saturday on terms for basing 60 U. S.-built 1,500-mile nuclear missiles in England and Scotland.

At the British government's request, authorities tried to impose a 48-hour secrecy blackout on the agreement so that it could be announced to the House of Commons Monday by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

Before the unprecedented secrecy plan went into effect, however, newsmen in Washington and London were briefed on the historic pact's key terms.

Midwest, East Hit by Thaw

By United Press

A winter "heat wave" thawed much of the eastern half of the nation Saturday, posing possible flood threats from the melting of heavy snows.

But another cold wave—mild by comparison to the extreme cold of the past week—moved through the Midwest into the East and was expected to lessen the flood threat temporarily over the Ohio Valley and the Northeast.

* * * *

FOLLOWING behind the fresh sweep of arctic air, however, was a mild front which shot the mercury to 60 degrees at mid-day at Dickinson, N. D., where normally the temperatures would be below freezing. The warm front, flowing across the nation's mid-section from the West, was expected to rocket temperatures upward for most of the weekend in the Midwest.

Meanwhile, the arctic blast—after plunging temperatures to near zero in northern Minnesota and Michigan—pushed toward the St. Lawrence valley and the northeast, where the

U.S. Manned Spaceship Orbit Seen

ATLANTA (UP) — Dr. Ernst Stuhlinger, research chief of Army missile program, said Saturday the United States can blast a manned spaceship into orbit within five years and send a rocket to the moon 20 years from now.

Stuhlinger, who played a crucial role in the launching of the U. S. Explorer satellite last month, said these achievements are possible under a timetable that "sounds and looks reasonable today." But he added that "I'm afraid the Russians will beat us" to launching a manned rocket.

He said that to overtake the Russian lead in rocketry, the "many excellent (missile) teams at work now" must be "joined and directed by one central agency."

Formation Flies Into Foggy Hill

Craft Hit Near Red Bluff; Two Fall in Flames

RED BLUFF (UP)—Four Army helicopters out of a formation of seven smashed into a fog-shrouded California hillside here Saturday, demolishing three of them and killing six crew members.

The Sixth Army, which claimed to have no information until hours after the crash, said that three-man crews of two of the 'copters were killed and that the three men in another helicopter were slightly injured.

The fourth whirlybird was damaged but managed to land safely and the Sixth Army said it could be repaired on the spot and continue to Ft. Lewis, Wash., the destination of the seven.

* * * *

THE HELICOPTERS were in Flight Two of three flights of seven craft each which left Ft. Riley, Kan., for Ft. Lewis.

The Sixth Army reluctantly disclosed that the two death-craft had burned when they hit the hillside. Apparently the other crashed helicopter had not caught fire.

The crash scene, 10 miles southeast of Red Bluff, was in an almost inaccessible area and the Tehama County sheriff's office sent a posse to the scene.

* * * *

The Sixth Army said that the helicopters had been flying in fairly good weather when they suddenly ran into a thick bank of fog during a rainstorm and crashed. The craft did not run together in the air, the Sixth Army said.

Sixth Army headquarters in San Francisco confirmed that six of the crewmen were killed, but refused to disclose further details. However, a check with sheriff's officers and civilian pilots who flew over the crash scene indicated crews of two of the choppers perished when their craft exploded into flames.

* * * *

HERB DENNIS, operator of of a flying service in Chico, Calif., south of here, flew over the wrecked aircraft a few hours after they ploughed into the rugged hill country.

Dennis said three of the undamaged craft had made landings nearby.

AF Forced to Drop Missile Job After $34 Million Spent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Air Force spent 34 million dollars developing an antimissile missile it was forced to discard, according to testimony made public Saturday by the House Armed Services Committee.

Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, deputy chief of staff for research, told the committee the Air Force dropped its Wizard antimissile missile one day after Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy's order last month to press work on the Army's Nike-Zeus missile instead.

The committee made public a censored version of his testimony, given at a closed-door session Wednesday.

* * * *

IN EARLIER testimony, Putt called McElroy's order premature and voiced doubt that the Zeus could successfully combat an enemy missile attack.

Under further questioning Wednesday, Putt estimated it would take about a year before enough information is gained to determine whether it would be wise to put the Nike-Zeus system, costing around six billion dollars, into operation.

He said there is "a terrific amount of development work still to be done" on radar equipment.

Putt said the Air Force started preliminary work leading up to the Wizard in 1946. Out of its 34-million-dollar investment, he added, it achieved a "technological breakthrough" on high-powered transmitters and made numerous developments that will form "the foundation for whatever system is finally evolved to do the antiballistic-missile job."

Release of Putt's testimony coincided with what appeared to be a developing inter-service squabble over which branch has the best antimissile missiles.

Putt said he doubts that the Nike-Zeus could successfully combat a Russian missile attack.

On Jan. 18, McElroy had told the Air Force to keep working on detection and control systems it was planning for the Wizard. But he said the Army would proceed with work on the Nike-Zeus as the nation's prime antimissile weapon.

this increased demand. They, too, must be doubled—greater restrictions placed on student enrollment.

At a time when unemployment is spreading one hears the argument that working wives should leave the employment ranks so men could take their jobs. With approximately a third of our working force women, it is argued our unemployment figures include too many two-income families. The old argument that the woman's place is in the home is being repeated more generally.

It is doubtful these arguments will have much effect. The fact is, employers find women workers more dependable than men in the jobs they hold. As to college education, it is argued that it is important for the woman to have a college education because she spreads it to the whole family. It is suggested that more rigid screening of all students would be the best way to cut down college enrollment and thereby eliminate those who are less likely to make maximum use of college facilities.

The reluctance of some universities to expand student enrollment is shown in the annual report and president's message of Caltech. It says: "It appears that our most important contribution to national strength will be to select a few superb students and provide them with educational opportunities of very unusual quality."

Caltech is of course a great scientific school. It is not comparable with the great state and private colleges which prepare students for many other important vocations. Many of these vocations are adaptable to women as well as men—some more so. Some now have rigid requirements for entrance. Others are more lax. But the requirements are the same for women as they are for men. It would seem reasonable that a choice of students should be based on requirements of ability rather than sex.

California is doing much to take care of the ever increasing college population. Its state colleges located throughout the state are now taking care of the demands. They are taking the load off the more glamorous universities and providing as good educational facilities in most subjects as are found in the universities. But many other states are far behind in this activity.

One college observer said: "Which is more important—that the mother have a college degree or that the father have one." Another said: "It would be better to bar stupid men from college than it would be to bar intelligent women." These points are being widely discussed in colleges throughout the nation. —L.A.C.

mercury climbed above freezing Saturday for the first time in many days.

The mercury shot into the 40s from southern New England to Virginia in advance of the arctic air, which was expected to develop cold wave conditions over portions of New York state and trigger about 1-3 inches of new snow over western New York.

Patches of light, sometimes freezing, rain marked the arrival of the chilly air and, in parts of western Pennsylvania, snow borne on northwesterly winds of 40 miles per hour in gusts cut visibility to fractions of a mile.

WARM MOIST air swept out of the western gulf regions, jumping temperatures into the 60s across Dixie and breaking a prolonged seige of cold and snow throughout Dixie.

Locally heavy rains erupted in a band from New Mexico to the mid-Atlantic states.

Embezzler Ready to Face Music

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—John James Tobin, who planned eventually to seek election as mayor of Youngstown, Ohio, waived extradition Saturday for his return to the Ohio city to face a $250,000 embezzlement charge.

The 29-year-old insurance adjuster admitted freely to police and reporters that he had engineered a false claims scheme that netted thousands of dollars from a Newark, N. J., firm.

"I audited one phony claim for $57,000 and was praised for the way I handled it," he said. "But they did finally wise up. It's cut and dried. They got me fair. I knew they'd catch up with me."

Tobin, who was to have taken office last month as a Youngstown city councilman, was arrested Friday night in a Houston apartment. His election campaign manager, Paul E. Shade, 30, escaped. Shade is charged with aiding and abetting an embezzlement.

SEATON REPORTS TO CONGRESS

Progress Seen in Desalting of Sea Water

WASHINGTON (UP) — Interior Secretary Fred A. Seaton reported Saturday that "significant progress" has been made in the past year on reducing the cost of converting saline water to fresh water.

Rapidly increasing use of water within a few years "may make adequate provision of pure water our greatest domestic problem, perhaps even the greatest problem of the world at large," Seaton said.

* * * *

HE MADE the statement in a report to the President and Congress on the work of the Office of Saline Water.

Seaton indicated the need for a proper perspective on costs of conversion of saline waters.

"The actual cost of large output conversion of sea water today by conventional processes is $2 to $3 per thousand gallons," he said. "In recent months some optimistic announcement of conversion costs running as low as 10 cents to 20 cents per thousand gallons have been made, but these have been carefully investigated by the department and have been found to represent only a minor portion of the total costs."

He said that scientists have made such a start on the problem of converting salt water into fresh "that the initial period of exploratory research in the laboratory must now in part be replaced by pilot-plant operation and field testing of the more promising processes."

* * * *

THE MOST promising of the conversion methods now under development include several distillation and membrane-separation processes, and one form of salt-water separation by freezing. Seaton said pilot-plant work is needed to work out these processes, "and in part is already in progress, in order to explore their economic feasibility and potential fields of application."

Some of the best processes, Seaton said, may be adapted to supply an individual farmstead or home, others to furnishing millions of gallons per day to a city or an industry.

* * * *

LABORATORY and economic study already has narrowed the field from some 20 processes to five broad groups:

Distillation through artificial heat; solar heat distillation; separation of salt by membrane processes; freezing and other chemical or electrical means of separation, including solvent extraction.

Two modified distillation processes, one based on vapor-compression, the other on multiple - effect evaporation, progressed during the past year to initial field testing in December at a seashore location at the test station of the International Nickel Co., Harbor Island, N. C.

Seaton also reported that the potentialities and limitations of solar distillation have been outlined, and investigation of ways to use nuclear heat for sea-water conversion is under way.

STIMULATION of technical interest outside of government was apparent, Seaton said, in the recent international symposium on saline water conversion.

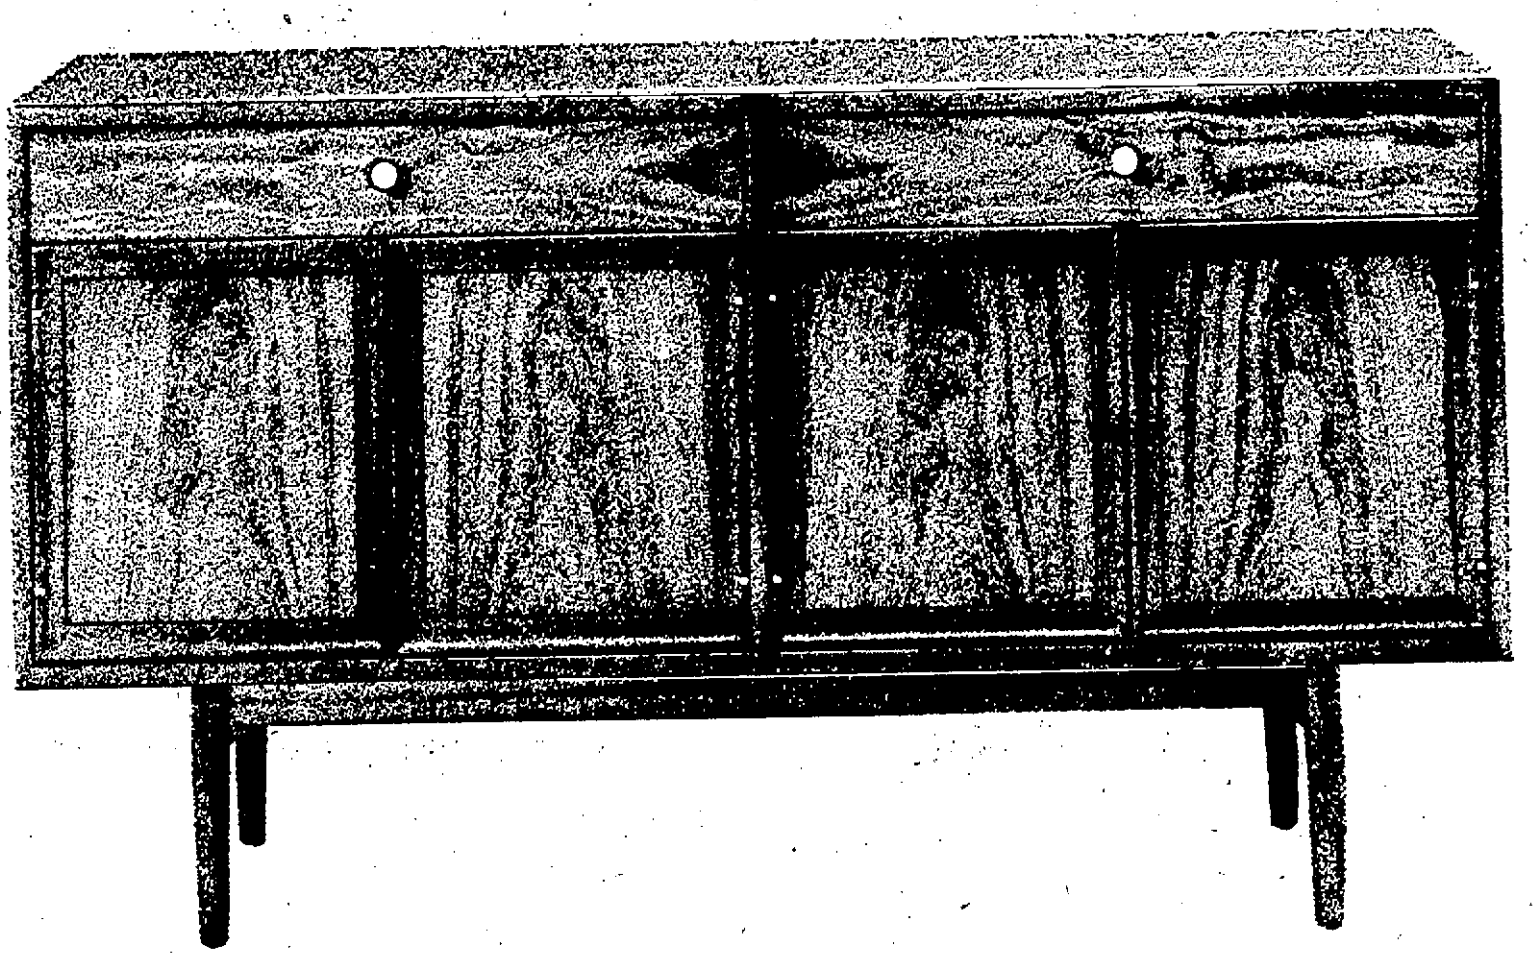

The symposium was held last November under the joint sponsorship of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council and the Office of Saline Water.

Burke Urges More Ships

Atom Fleet Vital, Says Navy Leader

riers, 10 anti-submarine carriers, 110 submarines, 14 cruisers and some 200 destroyers.

Today's nuclear force consists of three submarines—the Nautilus, the Seawolf and the Skate. Only three guided missile ships are operational — the cruisers Boston and Canberra, and the destroyer, Gyatt. They are conventionally powered.

* * * *

NUCLEAR-POWERED ships under construction are the Long Beach and an aircraft carrier, both scheduled for completion in 1961, and 12 submarines.

The Navy had planned to ask for a second carrier this year, but instead put 300 million dollars into anti-submarine ships. Now it is seeking funds from Congress for the first components of another carrier, for an atom frigate (destroyer leader), and more subs.

Besides the three nuclear subs on the seas and the 12 in shipyards, four more have been authorized, including three for the Regulus missile and one as an attack sub. The supplemental budget just passed by Congress calls for the first three to also carry the Polaris missile.

Another five subs—four attack and one a Regulus II launcher—are sought in the fiscal 1959 budget soon to be considered by Congress.

Nuclear power is only one side of the new Navy. Missiles are the other. All atomic-powered surface ships will be equipped with them, but the Navy is also converting conventional cruisers and frigates into missile-bearers.

* * * *

THERE IS LITTLE criticism of the Navy for not having a larger missile fleet in the works, because missile technology is too recent. Some congressmen are raising the question of whether there should not now be an acceleration. Adm. Burke would like to double the production rate of submarines, frigates, and destroyers.

Here is the outlook in the near future:

The next missile vessel to hit the waves will be the cruiser Galveston, first of three cruisers being converted to handle the Talos anti-aircraft missile. It will be finished in the fall.

In the autumn of 1959, an advanced model of the Terrier missile will appear on the first new frigate of the Farragut class. Ten such frigates are under construction, another eight have been authorized. All are conventionally powered.

* * * *

ABOUT THE SAME time, three more converted cruisers will join the Canberra and the Boston. They will be equipped with Terriers also. An additional three cruiser conversions have been approved.

Thirteen destroyers equipped with the Tartar missile will be ready in 1960 and 1961.

Three subs are now being built to carry the 600-1,000 mile Regulus II ship-to-shore guided missile. One is the atomic Halibut and the others the conventionally powered Grayback and Growler.

The U.S.S. Long Beach will be the Navy's only ship equipped with both attack and anti-aircraft missiles. It will carry the long-range Talos AA weapon, the medium-range Terrier and the Regulus II.

Besides the nuclear frigate and the five atomic subs, the fiscal 1959 budget requests money for starting 14 other new major ships and converting eight.

Now operational — three atomic submarines, two conventional subs with Regulus I guided missiles, two converted cruisers, and one destroyer.

In the shipyards or in current requests—24 submarines, one carrier, one cruiser and one frigate.

Conventional with guided missiles — 11 cruisers, 18 destroyers, 24 frigates and two submarines, all requested for construction or actually being built.

Within 10 to 15 years, the Navy sees a need for 150 atomic-driven ships and another 200 with surface-to-air missiles. All combat vessels would have either anti-sub aircraft or anti-sub missiles.

YOUTHS GET TASTE OF SEA DUTY ABOARD FRIGATE

Anaheim Cadets Warship's Guests

Thirty-nine members of the Anaheim Union High School Cadet Corps got a glimpse of life aboard one of the Navy's newest types of ships—the frigate USS Wilkinson—Friday off Long Beach.

The Wilkinson, skippered by Cmdr. Oliver S. Dwire, is the tactical flagship of Rear Adm. Glynn R. Donaho, commander of Long Beach-based Destroyer Flotilla 3.

The cadets saw the frigate from her firerooms and engine rooms, deep down in her hull, to her bridge towering more than 60 feet above the waterline. They witnessed depth-charging and the firing of the ship's automatic-loading, rapid-firing guns and saw how the warship lays down a smoke screen to conceal an amphibious assault.

* * * *

THE WILKINSON has firepower far beyond a standard destroyer, submarine-detection devices and weapons more complete and modern than those of specialized A/S destroyers and radar and combat-information installation superior to that of most cruisers. She is all our destroyers rolled into one—and more added.

The Wilkinson's engine plant has many advanced features never before used in warships. Her boilers deliver steam at 1,200 pounds per square inch, compared with 600 pounds for destroyers. Her main turbines develop 80,000 horsepower, as against 120,000 for new U.S. cruisers. She can make better than 35 knots and can stay with fast carriers.

* * * *

THE WARSHIP is 493 feet in length, has a 50-foot beam and standard displacement of 3,640 tons. All living spaces are air-conditioned and berthing and messing facilities have been enlarged and improved greatly over those of standard destroyers.

The Wilkinson is the third frigate of the Mitscher class to be commissioned. She originally was called a destroyer, was rerated a destroyer leader while building and was reclassified as a frigate in 1955.

The ship belongs to the largest class of destroyers ever built in the world and is larger than some foreign cruisers. She was designed specifically as a long-range fleet-type antisubmarine vessel.

The Navy is building new ships of the type to be equipped for guided-missile launching.

Youth Held for 'Stabbing by Mistake'

NEW YORK (UP)—A Bronx teenager was charged Saturday with stabbing a youth he mistook for another boy in a new outbreak of juvenile terror on the sidewalks of New York.

Police said the stabber, who inflicted a critical wound with a seven-inch-long letter opener, was on the prowl for his girl friend's brother. He sought revenge, police said, because the brother was trying to break up the romance.

Instead of stabbing the brother, the young tough wounded Ronald Rudker, 16, after a wild candy-store brawl in the Bronx.

Rudker was in fair condition at a hospital. He suffered a lung wound when the letter opener was plunged into his back by Ronald Murano, 16, police said.

SPUTNIK BIG SUCCESS AT TOY FESTIVAL

NUERNBERG, Germany (UP)—Russia's Sputnik made its toyland debut Saturday at the opening of the international Nuernberg Toy fair.

Among the multitude of electronically guided midget cars, dolls and other technical toy gadgets the Sputniks were the biggest hits.

One of them can be shot 500 feet into the air with a chemical fuel. The rest, mostly made of plastic, are earthbound.

LOOK OUT! HERE COMES OBNOXIOUS!

MONTEBELLO (UP) — Obnoxious, a 3-year-old ram, lived up to his name. As a result, he was sentenced to death Saturday.

George Davis complained to police that he had been butted by the ram belonging to his neighbor, Fred Merkel.

Policeman Hank Couch went to investigate. As he entered Merkel's yard, Obnoxious charged. Couch leaped into a truck and then retired.

Couch had a talk with Merkel—by telephone.

Merkel agreed that Obnoxious was too obnoxious to keep around any longer.

Warning on Theft of Deadly Venom

MIAMI (UP) — A mysterious phone caller told a snake farmer Saturday he stole $5,700 worth of deadly venom because he was "plagued by snakes."

The poison—enough to kill 600 persons — was stolen from the Miami Serpentarium Friday. William E. Haast, owner of the farm and tourist attraction, said the containers apparently were taken from a laboratory table while he was "milking" venom from a cobra in another area.

* * * *

TWO BROWN sealed bottles and two lightly colored vials were taken. The bottles contained dried copperhead and water moccasin venom, while one of the vials contained liquor copperhead venom, and the other venom from a rare African rhinoceros viper.

Mrs. Haast, who works with her husband, said she received a mysterious phone call Saturday morning from a man who admitted stealing the lethal poison, which represents a year and a half of work. The venom is worth an estimated $5,700 according to the sheriff's office.

Mrs. Haast said the phone-caller would "not give his name, but he said he took the venom for his own protection—he said he was plagued by snakes. I don't know what he meant."

* * * *

MRS. HAAST said she tried to explain to the mysterious caller that the venom he allegedly stole was not the specially-prepared serum used in treating snake bites or combating various illnesses. But she said he slammed the receiver down when she warned him the venom was extremely dangerous.

Slick Airways Quits Cargo Service Field

Slick Airways, which was started in Long Beach 12 years ago, disclosed Saturday it is dropping its nationwide scheduled cargo service—a field in which it once was the leader.

The announcement was coupled with an attack on the government's policy toward cargo airlines.

Delos W. Rentzel, board chairman and president, said the company would continue its military charter business and the service and supply activities it now operates at San Antonio, Tex.

Rentzel said the cessation of Slick's common carrier freight service would involve the immediate release of more than 200 persons, reducing the remaining employment to about 400. The company had a peak employment last May of 1,800 persons.

* * * *

HE SAID THAT "failure of the government to give the same permanency of operating rights and quality of treatment enjoyed by the subsidized passenger airlines to the all-cargo airlines, and refusal of the defense establishment to use the commercial airlines on a sound economic basis" were the main reasons behind the Slick's action.

Both Slick and another leading cargo service, the Flying Tiger Line, got their start at Long Beach Municipal Airport just after World War II.

Slick was founded by Earl F. Slick, a Dallas oilman and wartime Air Transport Command pilot, and a group of associates. Many of his pilots were men who had served with him in the ferry squadron stationed here during the war.

Both the Slick and Flying Tiger lines moved to Burbank in 1947 when their growth forced them to seek larger facilities.

In 1953 and '54, the two made plans to merge. The plans later were canceled.

Leopold . . . A Genius Who Killed

Slayer of Bobby Franks Commands 27 Languages

By BERNARD GAVZER

JOLIET, Ill. (AP)—After 33 years behind bars for a senseless murder, Nathan Leopold is a free man—or nearly so. And the quality within himself he feared would forever deny him freedom turned out to be perhaps his greatest asset.

BOBBY FRANKS
Slain for Thrill

That quality is his undeniable brilliance.

The Nathan Leopold who at 19 callously joined in a plot to snuff out the life of 14-year-old Bobby Franks for sheer excitement is gifted with rare intellect.

He possesses an intelligence quotient — the psychologists' measure of mental capacity—of 208. The genius plateau is far less—160. He is master of 27 languages. He is an authority on several sciences, ranging from ornithology to mathematics.

The great men of many fields of study, including the late Albert Einstein, hailed his exceptional mind.

Yet Leopold himself, through a long campaign for freedom, feared this very brilliance was his greatest enemy.

* * * *

THIS IS DISCLOSED by Elmer Gertz, the attorney who presented Leopold's plea to the Illinois Parole and Pardon Board. The board granted the plea Thursday.

Gertz said Leopold begged off any presentation that would represent him as a genius, saying:

"Gee, if you want me to stay in prison forever, just create the impression I'm a genius." He feared this would turn people against him.

Gertz said Leopold wants to be forgotten. "He wants to blend into the normal stream of society and serve his fellow man, quietly, efficiently, gratefully."

It was with a pledge of devotion to his fellowmen that Leopold — now 53 — acknowledged the parole awarded him. He'll leave prison after necessary technical procedures are completed in possibly three or four weeks.

Leopold did not appear personally Thursday before newsmen at the penitentiary here. But he issued a typewritten statement which said:

"I am acutely conscious that more than my own future hangs in the balance. Thousands of prisoners, especially long-term prisoners, look to me to vindicate the rehabilitation theory of imprisonment. I will do my best not to fail in that trust."

And in cautious, precise terms, he expressed gratefulness and determination. He said:

"I am grateful first of all to God. For men can do only what God permits them to do.

"And I am determined to do my utmost to justify the faith shown in me."

* * * *

LEOPOLD HOPES to do this by spending his five-year parole working as a laboratory technician in a remote village hospital in Puerto Rico. It is a 30-bed clinic operated by the Church of the Brethern Service near the mountain town of Adjuntas.

When he entered prison, Leopold already had won recognition as an ornithologist and knew 14 languages.

"Today, he knows 27 languages," Gertz said. "He found years ago that he knew little about mathematics, so he bent his efforts in that direction and then into other sciences. He corresponded with the learned and the authorities everywhere. Einstein said of him that, put in a free world with his brilliance, Leopold could make an important contribution in the field of science.

"It turned out that he benefitted unexpectedly from things that he did. For instance, there was a blind prisoner who needed to be led around and helped with everything. Leopold decided to help him and learned Braille so he could teach it to the blind man. Later, Leopold found that with this ability he could study after 'light out' by reading books in Braille."

* * * *

LEOPOLD ALSO authored a book recounting his prison life. Titled "Life Plus 99 Years," it is due for release March 6. Leopold has decided that royalties from the book will be distributed to worthwhile philanthropic organizations.

The lawyer also said that devotion on the part of Leopold's family played "an immense part in his magnificent rehabilitation."

There was never a single visiting day in all those years, Gertz said, that some member of the family failed to visit Leopold.

Through all the years of imprisonment, the attorney said, Leopold has never attempted to dismiss "his sense of responsibility for the Franks murder."

"As he said when he was before the parole board early this month, he has carried grief and remorse with him for 12,000 days and 12,000 nights. He has never presumed to ask to be forgiven. He was only asked for mercy."

A spirit of gratefulness has directed Leopold's life ever since the moment he entered prison as a youth in 1924, Gertz said.

* * * *

LEOPOLD AND RICHARD LOEB, who was then 18, were co-authors of a crime which shocked the nation. On May 21, 1924, they picked at random Robert (Bobby) Franks as victim of a "perfect crime." The boy, like each of them, came from a wealthy South Side Chicago family. They killed him as part of a scheme to study their own reactions to the deed.

They were saved from the gallows through the strategy of famed attorney Clarence Darrow, who had them plead guilty. Each was sentenced to life for murder and 99 years for kidnaping.

Loeb, who had been described as the archvillain of the plot, came to a violent end. Another inmate, James Day, 23, slashed him 56 times with a razor in 1936. Day claimed Loeb wanted him to engage in perversion.

Leopold, meanwhile, plunged into prison activity. He established a prison correspondence school which today offers more than 100 courses.

MURDER TRIAL PRINCIPAL THEN . . . AND NOW

Richard Loeb (left) and Nathan Leopold are shown in picture at left as they looked during their sensational trial in 1924 for the thrill murder of 14-year-old Bobby Franks. The famous attorney Charles Darrow saved them from the death sentence though each drew life sentences for murder and 99 years for kidnaping. Loeb was slashed to death in prison in 1936. Leopold, shown at right as he looked last summer, finally won parole last week after serving 33 years as a model prisoner.—(AP Wirephoto.)

"Penologists considered the school the greatest and most significant contribution ever made by a prisoner," Gertz said.

LEOPOLD ALSO participated in World War II malaria experiments as a human guinea pig. For this, former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson reduced the kidnaping sentence to 85 years.

This was the first easing of sentiment that had gone against any mercy for Leopold since the day he was imprisoned. Judge John E. Caverly, in sentencing the two "thrill" slayers in 1924, had called upon officials of the future "never to admit these defendants to parole."

After Stevenson's decree, Leopold and his attorney made three earnest attempts to win parole or executive clemency. Leopold last appeared before the board Feb. 5.

The board obviously was impressed by Leopold's intellectual and humanitarian achievements as a prisoner, achievements which a man of lesser mental capacity would not — could not—have attempted. He was a man who could contribute to the welfare of society.

Still, the conscienceless slaying of the Franks boy—and the slayers' attitude of being above the law—have angered persons who weren't even alive when the child was killed.

* * * *

BOBBY FRANKS was lured from a sidewalk into a car occupied by Leopold and Loeb on May 21, 1924.

He was bludgeoned to death —each of the slayers later said the other had struck the blow — and his body cast into a South Side culvert. Leopold and Loeb sought ransom but, before they could collect, Bobby's body was discovered.

Also found near the body were Leopold's spectacles. This clue led to his arrest, and to Loeb's seizure, and to their ultimate confession.

Arraigned before Judge Caverly, they first pleaded innocent, then on Darrow's strategy —changed their plea to guilty.

At their trial, the testimony of psychologists, then known as alienists, played a big part.

In the end, the judge went along with Darrow's hope that "hatred and cruelty will not (forever) control the hearts of men."

But so loathsome was the crime that Judge Caverly felt it incumbent upon him to urge that freedom be denied forever to both Leopold and Loeb.

For Richard Loeb, who died in prison, this injunction was upheld.

For Nathan Leopold, it has been mercifully lifted.

CONSUMERS' MEAT STRIKE BOOMERANGS

GENEVA (AP)—Civic leaders ruefully conceded Saturday a meat consumers' strike they organized to protest high prices was a boomerang.

Housewives stocked up on meat because they thought "meat strike" meant a butchers' strike.

Geneva butchers happily reported the biggest sales in months.

Nature Lovers Halt Bombings

BONN, Germany (U.P.) — The British and U. S. Air Forces have bowed to pleas of nature lovers and have agreed not to drop any more bombs on the Grosse Knechtsand, a sand spit off the North Sea Coast.

The West German Foreign Office said the agreement to use the Knechtsand as a practice bombing target ran out last year and will not be renewed. Nature lovers have protested for years that the bombings have killed wild fowl and fishermen complained that the bombs scared the fish.

Polio Shots Advised Now for Tiny Tots

WASHINGTON (U.P.) — The Public Health Service Saturday launched an all-out nationwide drive to persuade parents to have children under five vaccinated against polio.

Surgeon General LeRoy Burney announced the stepped-up campaign in the wake of new evidence that 5-year-olds and under are the most susceptible to paralytic polio.

He said it is up to the parents to take the initiative in getting preschool children vaccinated and getting antipolio shots themselves.

He said preliminary figures on paralytic-polio-attack rates last year indicate a "substantially higher rate" among children under five than in other susceptible age groups.

The highest attack rate—5.7 per 100,000—was among 1-year-old children. The next highest rate—5.5—was among 2-year-olds. For all children through the age of 4 the rate averaged 4.4, compared with 1.4 for the 5-through-19 age group and 0.8 for those 20-through-39.

Griffin Seeks Assembly Seat

By THE LOOKOUT

Democratic competition for endorsement for 70th District State Assemblyman warmed up Saturday when Thomas Griffin, Long Beach attorney, announced his candidacy.

Griffin, 38, is asking endorsement of the 70th Democratic Council convention to be held March 7. He will file for the Democratic nomination if the convention gives him its ok. Other Democratic candidates to be before the convention are Fred Chel and Paul Strader, also attorneys.

The 70th Assemblyman is Republican W. S. Grant, who is expected to seek reelection. There is no indication of Republican opposition to Grant.

Griffin attended Washington Junior High and Poly High schools here, received a degree at San Jose State College, spent three years in the Navy and then went to University of California, where he got a law degree in 1949. His law offices are in the Times Building.

The candidate has been active in the bar association, YMCA, Lakewood-Belmont Toastmasters Club, and served two terms as president of the Lakewood Plaza Citizens Improvement Association. He and Mrs. Griffin, the former April Wingard, live at 2912 Nipomo Ave.

KLOCKSIEM BUSY — Assemblyman Herbert R. Klocksiem is home from Sacramento for 10 days of reelection campaigning. Klocksiem, a member of Ways and Means in the Assembly, has been busy with committee work so far this month.

On the Assembly subcommittee he voted for continued child welfare centers, voted for an $800,000 augmentation to build Youth Authority camps, voted against $300,000 to reflectorize auto plates, voted against a $600,000 appropriation to put pictures on driver's license cards. He said there has been no proof of good results from experimenting with reflectorized plates.

Klocksiem said there is no apparent solution to the statewide water problem in sight. "Too many ideas and too much confusion," he said.

BONELLI DRIVE — Assemblyman Frank Bonelli's campaign for First District County Supervisor was carried into a dozen communities Saturday with the candidate in a whirlwind drive for votes.

The day's activities started with a breakfast at the Lafayette Hotel in Long Beach, with an enthusiastic crowd cheering the Assemblyman on his way.

Bonelli and his party then moved northward through the district, hitting Santa Fe Springs at noon and concluding the day at Pomona with dinner.

TEMPERS IN A SNARL

Ike, Mamie Guests of Elizabeth Arden

ELIZABETH ARDEN
Presidential Hostess

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (UP) — President Eisenhower will accompany his wife today to Phoenix, Ariz., where she is going for a rest, a White House spokesman announced Saturday at a press parley where tempers grew edgy over details of the trip.

The President will fly with Mrs. Eisenhower from his vacation headquarters here and spend about eight hours in Phoenix, then fly back to Washington in his personal plane, the Columbine III.

The presidential couple has visited here 10 days with former Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey. It was to have been a quail-shooting holiday but one of the worst cold spells in Dixie history kept the party indoors until the last few days.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said that the President would fly out with his wife to Phoenix, where Mrs. Eisenhower will rest at the Maine Chance Farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham, noted cosmetician and sportswoman.

* * * *

MRS. EISENHOWER will stay in a cottage that normally rents for $400 to $700 a week in the resort located at the foot of the famed Camelback Mountain near Phoenix. This price includes meals and also beauty treatments, a feature of the exclusive women's resort.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon last week visited one night in the nearby home of Publisher Henry R. Luce. Mrs. Claire Boothe Luce stayed at Maine Chance for a rest after the "poison paint" incident in Rome while she was ambassador to Italy.

Reporters questioned Hagerty closely about the reasons for the President making the trip and the press secretary grew noticeably irritated.

Asked why Eisenhower did not take another plane directly to Washington, Hagerty replied:

"I think that when the President of the United States wants to go any place that he wants to with his wife, that is his business and nobody else's."

* * * *

HAGERTY THEN engaged in an exchange with Laurence Burd, White House reporter for the Chicago Tribune who said "I think I have a right" to ask such a question.

When the President "has to account for that or make any reporting on that, I think you are getting a little out of bounds," Hagerty said.

Burd and Hagerty exchanged a few more words before the topic shifted.

Hagerty said that Mrs. Eisenhower will be accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Gordon Moore of Washington, and Mrs. Ellis D. Slater of New York, wife of a retired distillery executive.

Reporters asked if Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Slater "will be billed" for their trip on the presidential plane and Hagerty stiffened again.

"Of course they don't get billed," he replied. "This is the President's plane and they are the President's guests."

The party will take off from Spence Field at nearby Moultrie, Ga., at 6 a.m. (EST) and arrive at Phoenix at 1 p.m. (PST). After spending the rest of the day there, Eisenhower will take off from Sky Harbor Airport scheduled to arrive in Washington at about 4 a.m. (PST) Monday.

THAT SHOTGUN WAS EMPTY, HAGERTY SAYS

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP)—James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said Saturday President Eisenhower's shotgun wasn't loaded when he held the muzzle in the direction of his face.

Newsmen questioned Hagerty about pictures showing Eisenhower sitting in a hunting surrey with his 20-gauge double-barreled shotgun between his knees, muzzle pointed upward into his face.

Hagerty said, "The gun was not loaded. The President was asked to hold the gun up by the photographers and he did."

AMNESIA VICTIM?

Police Can't Identify Blonde

Police were at a loss Saturday night to identify a blue-eyed blonde about 20-25 who says she "can't remember anything."

The young woman, who says her head hurts almost constantly, was found by an elderly woman Friday night on Alamitos Ave. near 10th St.

A surgeon who examined the girl said she was unharmed and apparently was suffering amnesia.

Police said the young woman was found about 7 p.m. She was taken to Mrs. Jewel Cunningham, wife of the pastor of First Assembly of God Church. Mrs. Cunningham called police.

"I seemed to recall the name 'Lou' and the name 'Fluff'" she said. And she remembers "something" about Utah, although she doesn't know if she has lived there.

When she was found, the girl was wearing green and red capri pants with white dots, a white short-sleeved blouse and low-cut black shoes. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 135 pounds.

She is being sheltered at City Jail.

Hoover Advises Self-Reliance, Independence in Time of Trial

Ex-President Receives Honor at Valley Forge

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover, repeating an address he made 27 years ago at historic Valley Forge, observed Saturday that Americans are "confused and some are discouraged" but that the nation will rise again "to a period of greatness."

Hoover, at 83 still resolute, alert and abreast of America's problems, told a nationwide television audience from Freedoms Foundation headquarters here that "the way to the nation's greatness is the path of self-reliance, independence and steadfastness in time of trial and stress."

* * * *

THESE WERE the identical words he used in his 1931 Memorial Day speech on a similar spot overlooking the rolling hills where George Washington's Revolutionary War army spent the bitter winter of 1777-78 and "kept alive the spark of liberty in the world."

Hoover returned to this hallowed campsite Saturday to accept the Freedoms Foundation "George Washington Award" for the most important contribution in 1957 toward "the improvement of the American structure of freedom."

The occasion, too, commemorated the 226th birthday anniversary of America's first President—a day on which the foundation annually honors hundreds of individuals, organizations and schools for writing, talking and doing things to promote the American way of life. Awards went to 768 this year.

* * * *

THE EX-PRESIDENT was the second man ever to receive the foundation's highest award. Another Hoover won it last year. He was J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief.

Hoover delivered his 1,500-word address after noting at the start that he'd have a surprise at the end. Then he revealed that, "with slight elimination of less pertinent paragraphs," it was the same talk he made in 1931 "in the depths of that period of anxiety and discouragement."

He did make one significant addition when he pointed out that the depression of the 1930s "was an inheritance from mistakes in the peace and the aftermath of destruction from the First World War," adding:

"Again today we inherit the mistakes of the peace and the aftermaths of destruction from the Second World War. Our people are today again confused and some are discouraged."

* * * *

BUT HE FOUND his 1931 words still pertinent in looking ahead:

"Many have doubt and grave concern for the future," he said. "But no one who reviews the past and realizes the vast strength of our people can doubt, this, like a score of similar experiences in our history, is a passing trial.

"The nation is beset with difficulties and confusions. These temporary reverses in the march of progress have been in part the penalty of the malign inheritances of world forces beyond our control."

Hoover said Washington and Valley Forge met the challenge in times of war but that it is America's test now "to meet this challenge in times and terms of peace."

* * * *

"IF WE ARE firm and far-sighted, as were Washington and his men, we shall be writing the introduction to a yet more glorious epoch in our nation's progress."

Freedoms Foundation handed out $39,900 in cash, including the $5,000 award to Hoover. An additional $60,000 will go for medals, libraries for schools and expenses for teachers and pupils making annual pilgrimages to Valley Forge.

Other winners included:

The Florida Bar Assn. of Tallahassee for Community Programs; the American Farm Bureau Federation of Chicago; the American Legion and Kiwanis International for programs designed to involve more Americans in public and patriotic activities; the Rev. Frederick M. Meek of Boston for a sermon; Harding College, Searcy, Ark., for college campus program.

FORMER CHIEF REPEATS SPEECH 27 YEARS LATER

Former President Herbert Hoover, receiving the top award in the annual Freedoms Foundation ceremony at Valley Forge, Saturday, delivered the same speech he gave there in 1931. Seated under a painting of George Washington are Dr. Kenneth D. Wells (left), foundation president, and Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, vice chief of the U. S. Air Force who also received an award. —(AP Wirephoto.)

Zellerbach Gives Plaque to Pope

VATICAN CITY (UP)—James D. Zellerback, U.S. ambassador to Itlay, Saturday presented Pope Pius XII with the 1957 gold plaque of the George Washington Carver Institute for his "outstanding contribution to the betterment of race relations and human welfare."

Zellerbach made the presentation in a 15-minute audience with the Pope, their first meeting in a year.

Engineer to Retire

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of the Interior Seaton announced Saturday that Leslie N. McClellan, assistant commissioner and chief engineer of the Reclamation Bureau at Denver, will retire Feb. 28.

Draft Damper Stops Bottles' Popping Act

SEAFORD, N.Y. (UP)—Police said Saturday they thought they finally had put the lid on the 18-day-old case of the popping bottles.

If they have, a 74-year-old Revere, Mass., widow will get all the credit.

It was just 18 days ago, but it seems like an eternity to the James Herrmann family, that bottles, jars and other containers began flipping their lids in their six-room Long Island home.

* * * *

TELEPHONE CALLS and letters poured into the home of Herrmann, an Air France executive, his wife and their two children. All sorts of information was volunteered, including theories that the house was haunted.

Finally the Herrmanns got what they considered good advice a few days ago. Mrs. Helen Connolly telephoned from Revere to tell the distraught family about a similar experience that befell her last April.

Mrs. Connolly said a building inspector told her there was a downdraft in her chimney that swept hot gases into the house. This made dishes jump and the furniture jiggle, she said.

* * * *

THE HERRMANNS, fed up with all the bottle-popping and the telephone calls, moved out temporarily Friday. They spent Friday night with friends, getting their first good sleep in 18 days.

Herrmann, with the aid of Detective Joseph Tozzi, decided to act on this advice. They installed a turbine-style ventilator in the chimney on the Herrmann home.

"I hope it works," he said.

Tunisian Feud End Discussed

LONDON (UP) — A British-U. S. effort to end the feud between France and Tunisia began rolling here Saturday under the wary eyes of a worried French government.

U. S. Deputy Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy flew into London and quickly opened talks with Harold Beeley, Middle East expert assigned by Britain to help resolve the bitter French-Tunisia dispute.

Their official assignment is to provide good offices in easing relations between France and its former North African protectorate. The two nations have been at odds since the French bombing two weeks ago of a Tunisian village believed harboring rebels from neighboring Algeria.

Murphy and Beeley met amid rising fears in France they may be considering measures to halt the Algerian conflict as well as settle the French-Tunisian dispute.

Any such move to introduce the tender topic of Algeria would be certain to arouse hostile reaction in France, still locked in a bitter war against rebels fighting for independence.

Marines Land Carrier Style on Desert

'Mirror Trick' of Navy Adapted to Halt Planes

By JAMES ALLEN

The Marine Corps has adapted the Navy's aircraft carrier for use on dry land.

This has been done by making mobile the carrier's mirror landing equipment and arresting gear, two essentials of plane recovery aboard the most modern flattops. A mobile catapult is under development.

* * * *

THE SQUADRON, which pioneered the F3D Skynight fighter and brought it to combat worthiness, is the first F3D squadron on the West Coast and the first El Toro unit to use the two devices on a maneuver.

Mirror landing equipment consists of a large concave mirror from which extend two arms about eight feet long. Each arm has a number of green lights, which a pilot can see from a great distance. Red lights bordering the mirror are used only when a plane is waved off.

Amber lights are placed facing the mirror, 150 feet down the runway. These lights are reflected from the mirror, creating a large orange "meatball" which the pilot can see about one-and-a-half miles away on his landing approach.

* * * *

THE PILOT TRIMS HIS plane by keeping it and the "meatball" in line with the two extended arms on the mirror. If the plane veers off, the pilot can see the error and make instantaneous correction.

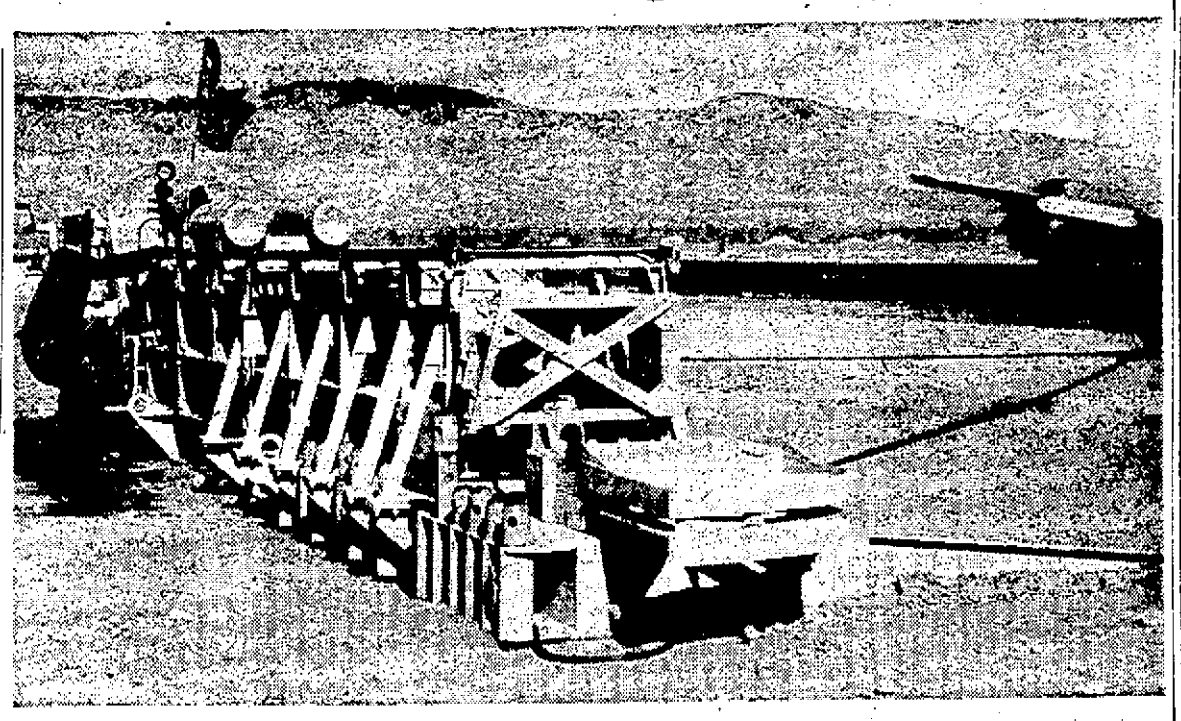

The mirror system removes the element of error which exists when a landing signal officer gives signals to the pilot by swing paddles. Jets come in at such a high rate of speed that any time lost in transmitting signals could be fatal.

After the pilot lines up with the runway by means of the mirror, he drops his tail hook. This engages a cable of the mobile arresting equipment and the plane is pulled to a stop quickly.

* * * *

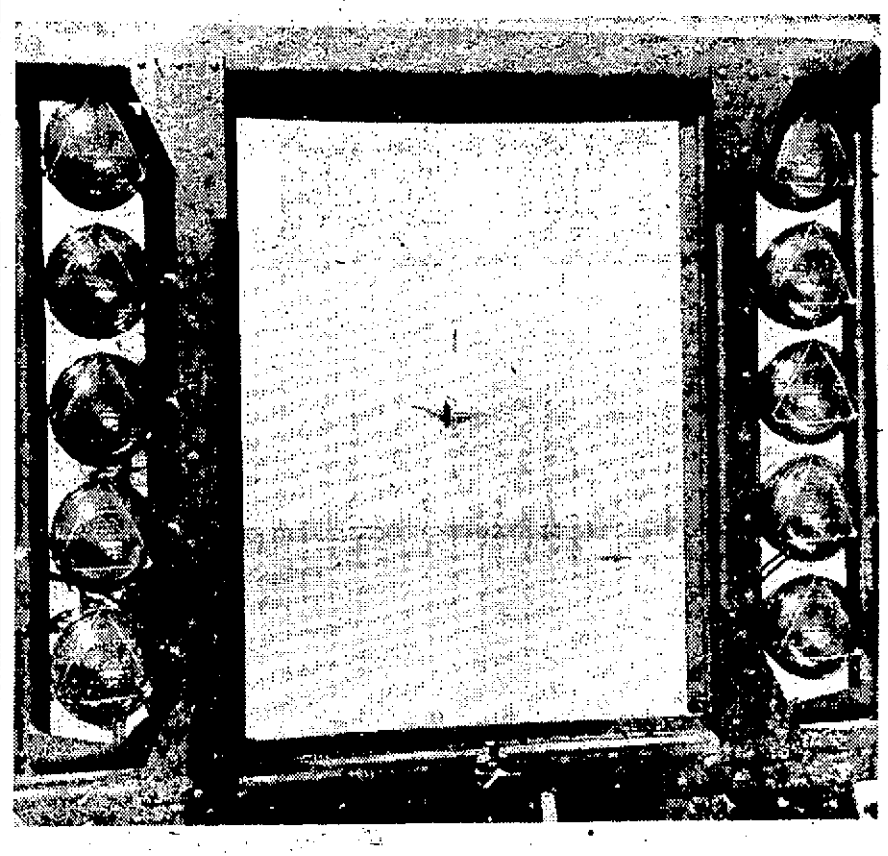

PLANES NORMALLY requiring a landing run of about a mile can be stopped in 300 feet by the arresting equipment. The system uses two arresting engines, one on each side of the runway. The engines are connected by two steel cables, called deck pendants, which are about five inches above the runway. Aircraft can be arrested at intervals of 40 to 50 seconds.

The equipment can be installed rapidly on small landing strips and adjusted to handle planes of various weights and landing speeds. This provides an important contribution to the primary mission of Marine Corps aviation: Close air support for the troops.

HOW TO LAND A JET IN A HURRY

This mobile adaption of the aircraft carrier's arresting gear is being used by the Marine Corps to land jet planes on extremely short air strips. The tail hook of this El Toro plane has just engaged one of the cables of the equipment, which will halt it in 300 feet.—(Marine Corps Photo)

THEY DO IT WITH A MIRROR

Amber lights 150 feet up the runway are reflected in this concave mirror and seen by the pilot as an orange "meatball." He keeps plane and "meatball" in line with lights on two arms extending from the mirror and guides himself in for the landing. Red lights bordering mirror are used to wave off planes. The pilot sees neither his plane or the mirror.—(Marine Corps Photo)

Expelled Little Rock Negro Girl Arrives in N.Y. to Enter School

NEW YORK (U.P.)—Minnijean Brown, 16-year-old Negro girl expelled from Little Rock's Central High School, said Saturday she was ousted for breaking an agreement with the school superintendent not to retaliate in any way to words or deeds of white students in the school.

Minnijean said the agreement was made with Superintendent Virgil Blossom when he met with the nine Negro students admitted to the school last year and their parents.

The agreement was reached, she said, before the school was integrated at the start of the fall term.

* * * *

MINNIJEAN held a news conference at La Guardia Airport after arriving here by airplane to enroll on a full scholarship in the New Lincoln School, an interracial private school with tuitions ranging from $695 to $1,050 a year.

The American Airlines plane on which Minnijean and her mother traveled was delayed 40 minutes in taking off from Little Rock because of an anonymous telephone call from a man who said a bomb would be aboard the aircraft.

Police and FBI agents found nothing suspicious in a search of the plane.

Minnijean, with her mother, Mrs. W. B. Brown at her side, answered newsmen's questions readily.

* * * *

WHEN SHE WAS asked whether there had been an agreement by the Negroes not to retaliate, she replied:

"That was the agreement—not to talk back and not to do anything to those kids no matter what happened. We had to take it.

"I was the target for most of the segregationist acts during most of the school year. I don't know why they picked on me.

"I took abuse from them. I was kicked twice. I was called all kinds of terrible names, but I always walked away and laughed at it. But finally, I couldn't. After so much provocation, I got mad and decided I was going to do something."

* * * *

AS A RESULT of this decision, Minnijean was suspended for six days for dumping a bowl of chili on two students in the school cafeteria. Another time, a student spilled a bowl of hot soup on her. She later was suspended Feb. 6 for fighting with a white girl.

"The day Minnijean was suspended, we got the news over the radio," Mrs. Brown said. "We called Mr. Blossom and he said he didn't know anything about it, but it turned out that she was suspended.

NEGRO STUDENT WELCOMED IN NORTH

"Mrs. Blossom said later he recommended permanent suspension. We appealed before the board but were not allowed to bring an attorney."

Minnijean said the official reason for her expulsion was "failure to adjust to the situation and talking back."

* * * *

"I MADE AN agreement not to talk back," she said, "and I took kicks and verbal abuse."

Minnijean said she thought the eight other Negroes at Central would "stick it out," and added:

"It's very tough. They get notes left in the locker saying 'You're next.' I've received cards in the mail—a cemetery card and a Chirstmas card that was the opposite meaning of Christmas."

Fifty of New Lincoln's 410 students, both Negro and white, greeted Minnijean and her mother and presented each with on orchid corsage.

He's 'Toughest'

LONDON (U.P.)—Lance Cpl. Thomas Hutton said Saturday his 14-day, 600-mile hike from London to Newcastle and back proved he was the "toughest lance corporal in the army." Hutton said he felt fine—except for the blisters.

Fog Hampers Air and Sea Search for 22

LAGES AIR BASE, Azores, —(U.P.)— Bad weather Saturday hampered a search by a huge group of air and surface vessels for survivors of a U.S. Navy plane which disappeared with 22 aboard.

A spokesman at the joint U.S.-Portuguese base here said the poor visibility has prevented the searchers from finding even a trace of the plane.

He said the search would be continued north and west of the Azores until there was absolutely no hope left. The Constellation disappeared Thursday after giving its last position as 110 miles west of Corvo Island in the Azores.

A ship reported sighting flares Friday 500 miles southwest of Flores Island but other ships that raced to the scene found nothing.

More than 50 planes and 15 ships are involved in the search.

One of the crew members aboard the missing craft was identified at Lt. (jg) Paul Leo Brousseau, brother of Mrs. Joan Derochea, 1873 Harbor Ave., Long Beach. Brousseau, 25, has a wife and child in Pensacola, Fla.

Snark Range Hits 6,300 Mi.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturers of the Northrop Snark guided missile said Saturday the weapon now has a range of more than 6,300 miles. It heretofore has been credited with 5,000 miles.

Able to cruise for 10 hours at almost the speed of sound, the Snark was described as the only current weapon capable of low altitude attack upon virtually any target in Soviet Russia.

A powerful tool for "massive intercontinental deterrent" purposes was the way Northrup Vice President John R. Alison of Los Angeles described it.

New or little known facts about the pilotless bomber were brought out by Alison and other Northrup Aircraft officials at a briefing here designed to correct what they said was "widespread misunderstanding" of the Snark's mission and performance.

They said a new electronic device, specially installed on the Snark, can trick enemy radar into mistaking the fighter-size missile for the largest of the jet bombers. Thus Snarks can be flown ahead of a B52 bomber attack as decoys to cut down enemy interception of U.S. strategic bombers.

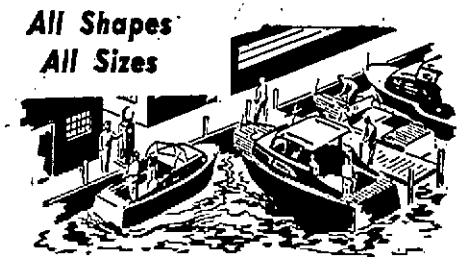

A "big load carrier," they said the Snark can plunge a large thermo-nuclear warhead into enemy targets with "truly amazing accuracy."

Once it has left the ground, a Snark is on its own. A preset self contained inertial guidance system directs it on a straight, zigzag or looped course.

Although the Snark cannot be "jammed" by the enemy, it can be called back from its mission if a suspected enemy attack turns out to be a false alarm.

More than 50 Snarks have been launched from the Air Force missile test center at Cape Canaveral, Fla. Altogether they have flown the equivalent of three times around the world at the equator.

Public Hit for Apathy on Schools

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Secretary Marion B. Folsom Saturday night rapped the American public across the knuckles for not caring enough about education.

The trouble with education is that the American people don't respect it enough, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said in a speech prepared for the American Assn. of School Administrators.

"Finding fault with our schools has recently become a somewhat popular pastime," Folsom said in a sharp-tongued speech at the start of the four-day regional convention attended by 9,000 school administrators.

• • • •

THE SECRETARY received the organization's "Golden Key Award" for making a "significant contribution to the national welfare."

Last year's winners were Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, and economist Beardsley Ruml. Also receiving the same award Saturday night was Miss Lila Windsor, 82, of McRae, Ga., who was Folsom's fourth-grade teacher.

"What is needed most of all is a new emphasis by the American public on the pursuit of learning," Folsom analyzed. "America's stake in good teaching is freedom, itself."

The Secretary said that too often teachers are considered "errand boys or workhorses" for all kinds of community activity.

All 5 Want to Be Chief

BROOKFIELD, Mo. (AP)—There's no ill-feeling among the five members of Brookfield's police force, Chief James W. Clark explained Saturday—they just all want to be chief.

Clark and his four patrolmen have all filed for the office at the non-partisan April 1 election. Clark is completing his first 2-year term.

"There is harmony in the police force and everyone has the same ideas on how the department should be run," Clark said.

The chief's job in this northern Missouri town of 6,000 pays $220 a month. Patrolmen get $200.

Experience among the candidates ranges from a year to 10 years. Chief Clark has been on the force five years. The patrolmen and their years of service are Olen E. Gates, 10 years; Luther Thompson and H. O. Nickerson, seven years, and Eldon Holloway one year.

HST Rips 'Five-Year Misrule'

was holding forth in the ballroom. Truman gave his address in the ballroom. Closed-circuit television carried his image and words to the crowd below, and CBS televised and broadcast the speech nationally.

Before the oratory got under way, Stevenson and Truman meandered through the twin parties, shaking hands and greeting friends.

Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas brought Gov. Orval Faubus up to Truman and the two posed for photographers, with clasped hands. Truman told a reporter he had known the controversial Arkansas governor for years and the meeting had no particular significance.

* * * *

THERE WERE some earlier reports that, because of the Little Rock school-integration issue, Faubus wouldn't be too welcome at the affair.

Looking over the wall-bulging turnout, Truman grinned and remarked that when the dinner was named for him, "I was dead sure it wouldn't have a half a dozen customers."

The big turnout, he said, "means we are on our way to restore our country to the people, for their benefit."

Truman ad libbed a line that he was used to criticism, and "whenever the press quits abusing me, I know I'm in the wrong. When they start throwing bricks at me, I'm pretty good at that myself."

* * * *

FINALLY, HE swung into his prepared speech. The Republican leadership, Truman said, is weak, timid, complacent, has failed to advance with the times. Now, he said, the American people are fed up, disillusioned, disturbed, "tired of being bamboozled by the Republicans."

His sallies at the GOP drew laughter at some points, applause at others.

Stevenson got his biggest hand when he said the Eisenhower administration has an almost unprecedented "systematic and unblushing misrepresentation, concealment and half-truth."

Democratic Westerners Urge Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Democratic National Committee from 11 western states Saturday called for "bold action" to create new jobs in their region.

They adopted a resolution urging members of Congress from their states to seek sufficient appropriations to continue western irrigation and reclamation projects already approved as one way to combat unemployment.

The resolution said President Eisenhower originally asked for funds for certain work in the Upper Colorado Basin, but is now proposing to substitute such projects as post office-building improvements to ease unemployment.

* * * *

CALVIN W. RAWLINGS, Utah national committeeman, said the conference also decided to meet in Los Angeles, May 17, when more definite action will be taken to make the "voice of the West" more audible in Washington for development of western resources.

The Los Angeles meeting, Rawlings added, also will decide where to locate a western regional headquarters for the 1958 election campaign.

The western states conference is made up of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, plus Alaska and Hawaii.

TRUMAN, FAUBUS SHAKE HANDS

Former President Harry S. Truman (left) and Arkansas' controversial Gov. Orval Faubus clasp hands across the flower-decorated head table at a Democratic party dinner Saturday night in Washington. Faubus, a central figure in the Little Rock school integration controversy, said he was treated "most graciously" by other guests and that Truman is "a wonderful guy."—(AP).

Knowland Spurns Franking Privileges

By WALTER T. RIDDER, R. E. LEE, BILL BROOM
Independent, Press-Telegram Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—Sen. Bill Knowland, a candidate for governor in California, is bending over backwards to avoid using his congressional mail franking privilege to push his candidacy.

Knowland refuses to use his free mail privilege to send out press releases, speeches and other information to the press, even when it has nothing to do with his campaign. If a constituent writes about a congressional issue, Knowland's reply bears a regular 3-cent stamp if the question has concerned any issue he has discussed in the gubernatorial campaign.

The senator avoids campaign duties during his regular work day in the Senate. These matters are held in abeyance until 8 p.m. in the evening after the other work is cleaned up.

All California calls on the campaign are charged to a special private line Knowland has had installed in his office for personal use.

REP. KEN KEATING (R-NY) says the partisan spirit that wins elections is the kind shown by a friend of his who went to the hospital for an operation.

The nurse asked him what kind of ward he wanted to be put in.

"I don't care what kind of ward it is," said Ken's friend, "as long as it's in a Republican precinct."

* * * *

THE POLITICALLY explosive probe of influence peddling around the Federal Communications Commission is certain to have one happy by-product—at least for the members of Congress.

Senators and representatives are constantly hounded by constituents who want errand-boy chores performed around various government agencies. Sometimes only an introduction to "the right person" is requested. Often the request is to "put in a word for me."

All congressmen pride themselves on the services they render, but too often an excess of pressure is demanded.

Now, however, it will be easier for congressmen to get insistent constituents off their necks by pointing to the unfavorable publicity from the current FCC hearings.

LETTERS UNEARTHED these days in the hearings on federal regulatory agencies and from such remote points as Texas remind us of the old warning to young men: "Do right, and fear no man; don't write, and fear no woman."

That might well be extended to include not writing anything which can conceivably be dug up by congressional hawkshaws. We don't know it for a fact, but we suspect that as the current investigation unfolds, a whole lot of letter-burning is being carried on.

Nevada Leaders Seek Re-Election

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—Three of Nevada's top Republican office holders announced their plans Saturday to seek re-election.

Gov. Charles Russel, Sen. George W. Malone and State Controller Peter Merialdo all advised the Republican State Central Committee meeting here they will seek third terms this year.

Only one other Nevada governor—Democrat L. R. Bradley—has sought a third term in office. That was in 1878. Bradley lost to Republican John H. Kinkead.

Reds Delay Trucks en Route to Berlin

HELMSTEDT, Germany (AP)—Berlin-bound trucks queued up on the Autobahn at the East German interzonal checkpoint of Marieborn Saturday as Communist border guards tightened their control of cargoes.

Officials at the West German checkpoint here said Communist guards were concentrating on whether the payload registered in the freight-documents checked exactly with the weight of the cargo.

AMERICANS GETTING SOFT?

Hardy Horse Players Say 'Neigh'

By WALTER T. RIDDER
Of I. P-T Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—The recent snowstorm — nay, blizzard — which engulfed Washington has been and remains the leading topic of conversation in this town which is never at loss for words. The conversational pitch has changed from how each one of us fared during the horrendous aftermath of the snow to the heroism or cowardice of those whose job it was to serve us and to reestablish communication between our homes and the outside world.

There were, to the mind of this reporter, lots of heroes and convincing displays of courage and stamina. On thinking it all over, though, perhaps the finest exhibition of the human being's resolve to triumph over nature was put on by the horse racing fans at Bowie, Md., who allowed not snow nor cold nor anything else to interfere with completion of their appointed bets.

While one may question their judgment, one cannot deny the raw courage and stick-to-itiveness of the improvers of the breed as they egged on the ghostly quadrupeds dashing silently and presumably unseen through the mantle of snow which ultimately buried the racetrack, the stables and most important of all the automobiles of the horse players. As far as one can make out from survivors' accounts, when the seventh and final race had been concluded, the bettors who numbered more than 5,000 suddenly awakened, as it were, from their reverie and discovered the harrowing fact that it had indeed been snowing.

THE ATTEMPTED return home trips bogged down in snow drifts and the uncontrolled skidding which bespeaks the amateur snow driver and a good portion of the race-lovers settled down for a long stay at the Bowie clubhouse. The Pennsylvania Railroad, its heart properly bleeding for the plight of the $2-on-the-nosers, sent a couple of rescue trains which took care of most, but not all, of the stranded. Those who were left spent the night in rehashing whatever horse players rehash and scrambled home by one means or another the next day.

As tribute to their grit and staying power, however, it is worth while pointing out that several of the unexpected overnight guests, far from being relieved at their rescue, were in high dudgeon because the course stewards viewing 14 to 20 inches of snow piled over the course had reluctantly canceled the race program for the next day or so, thereby cheating the would-be bettors of that, which by their presence, was rightfully theirs.

The saga of the sturdy racegoers would not be worth repeating did it not so demonstrably contradict the oft-repeated assertion that Americans are going soft. We have, particularly in recent months, heard much of the sorry debilitation of the American species. It has been said we have become corpulent, lazy, fatigued, infatuated with the blandishments of an economy in which the living has become easy.

Doctors Let Sir Winston Sip Brandy

ROQUEBRUNE, Cap Martin, France (UP) — Sir Winston Churchill was all but out of danger Saturday in his bout with pneumonia and pleurisy. Physicians permitted him to resume his usual after-dinner cigars, brandy and conversation.

Except for the fact that the 83-year-old British statesman must remain in bed at his vacation villa in this Riviera community, he has "nearly returned to normal routine," according to his secretary, Anthony Montague Browne.

A brief medical bulletin, edited by Churchill himself, said: "The improvement in Sir Winston Churchill's condition is fully maintained. The temperature has fallen and his progress is satisfactory."

Nab 8 Yacht Pirates

QUITO, Ecuador (AP)—Eight escaped Galapagos Islands convicts among the 21 who hijacked an American yacht for three days, have been recaptured, prison authorities reported Saturday.

Six convicts were seized Friday night in Esmeraldas and two more were captured in Guayaquil Saturday. Two others fled after an exchange of shots with police.

The convicts in their flight took over two island prison camps, then seized two fishing boats Feb. 12 and put to sea.

On Feb. 15 they sighted a yacht belonging to William Rhodes Hervey Jr., of Los Angeles and Balboa, Calif., and seized it, forcing the crew at pistol point to take them to a point on the coast near Esmeraldas.

Master of the yacht is Capt. William McKay, 62, of 2008 San Anselino Ave., Long Beach, Calif.

Hervey and his party reported their seizure and freeing by radio and then proceeded to Panama where they conferred with U. S. authorities and Panama port officials.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Indonesia Radio Stations Bombed

PADANG, Sumatra (U.P.)—U. S.-built Indonesian air force planes Saturday bombed, rocketed and strafed key rebel cities and silenced the two rebel radios in the second day of aerial raids that brought closer the threat of all-out civil war.

DR. ARTURO FRONDIZI
Argentina Candidate

The government in Jakarta admitted that in its attack Friday on the rebel stronghold in central Sumatra one bomb accidentally was dropped on the town of Jambi in southern Sumatra, which still is loyal to the Jakarta regime. The government promised to make restitution, but it did not mention casualties.

In the attack Saturday, three P51 fighters and a B25 bomber, all of World War II vintage, bombed and strafed Padang and Bukittinggi in central Sumatra, seats of the revolutionary government established last Saturday in opposition to President Sukarno in Jakarta.

Argentine Election Today

BUENOS AIRES (U.P.)—Six thousand soldiers and sailors were mobilized Saturday with orders to guarantee a peaceful, honest presidential election today which will be Argentina's first completely free balloting in 30 years and its most crucial. 1956, revolution that overthrew Dictator Juan D. Peron. There are 13 parties running for the votes of 10 million Argentines. But experts predict a close race between only two:

—Dr. Ricardo Balbin of the People's Radical Party. He has moderate and rightwing support and stands for free enterprise, wage increases, and investment of more foreign capital.

Dr. Arturo Frondizi of the Radical Civic Unin. He has the support of a conglomeration of parties ranging from Communist to Peronist.

Ike Names New Envoy

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP)—President Eisenhower Saturday picked career diplomat John M. Allison to be ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

Allison, who has been serving as ambassador to Indonesia, will succeed U. Alexis Johnson in Prague. James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said he had no information on a new assignment for Johnson.

Hard of Hearing?

Do you know that a great many people who have a hearing loss also have sinus trouble, catarrh or both? Many of these cases could have part or even all of their hearing loss restored; many who now have sinus trouble and no hearing loss may develop a hearing loss later on in life.

Many of our patients now listen to TV and radio at volume that the family enjoys.

Thanks to the new system now being used in all of the Basic Diagnostic Offices throughout California, many who have tried this proven method are overjoyed. Just like magic in many cases, improvement is shown after the first treatment.

If you have a hearing loss, no matter how slight or how bad, it may be due to sinus trouble or catarrh. Why not find out?

Don't delay, we will give you the first treatment and our complete sinus and catarrh examination for the small sum of only $3.00.

We are one of the busiest offices in Southern California, so if we cannot help you, be assured that we will not take your case.

The total charge is only $3.00 for the first treatment and the examination, and if you see no improvement from the first treatment we do not want you back. This offer will be withdrawn in ten days.

By BEN ZINSER

Russia has a working intercontinental ballistic missile in the 12,000-mile range, believes a German missileman who now lives in Palos Verdes Estates.

Furthermore, says Dr. Hugo H. Woerdemann, who worked on the German V2 rocket at Peenemuende in World War II days, the Soviets probably are turning out their ICBM at an underground factory in the Urals.

If their missile is as far-reaching as he thinks it is, Dr. Woerdemann says it could be launched from the factory site.

* * * *

"MOBILITY NO longer would be a problem for them," he observes.

Dr. Woerdemann, 42, of 1532 Paseo del Mar, came to the United States in 1946 with a group of 125 German scientists and engineers. He first was assigned to missile instrumentation work at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Since 1952 he has been president of Magnetic Research Corp., with headquarters in Hawthorne. The firm designs, develops and produces magnetic components for industry, the U. S. missile program and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Magnetic Research furnished some of the parts for the Jupiter-C rocket which launched America's first artificial satellite. Now the firm is bulding an emergency shutdown and alarm system for reactors on nuclear submarines.

* * * *

DR. WOERDEMANN, an electrical engineer, says Russia has had intermediate-range ballistic missiles "sitting around" for at least two years. "Lots of them," he says.

He adds that the United States is five years behind Russia in missile development.

Reason: A difference in viewpoints, he says.

After World War II the Russians immediately set to work on missiles. To aid them they had Germany's "futuristic plans concerning rockets," Dr. Woerdemann says.

But in the United States, he adds, German scientists "were put on ice."

* * * *

THIS HARRASSMENT was nothing new to Dr. Woerdemann. He can remember when the German Army Ordnance Rocket Research Center at Peenemuende had a "low priority."

"The story went out," he recalls, "that Hitler had dreamed that rockets wouldn't work and that Peenemuende was to become a truck factory."

DR. WOERDEMANN
A Time to Hurry

"America didn't get into the rocket business until 1950 or 1951," he says, "and even then not with the zest required.

"To draw even," he continues, "the United States must increase its missile activity 20 per cent over that of Russia's—whatever that figure may be.

"This will take all of five years."

And it's going to cost us, he says.

* * * *

"THE UNFORTUNATE HOOKER," he says, "is that time is of the essence. A crash program always is more costly."

He has two suggestions for accelerating the program:

1. "Maintain a double-development program. Set as a goal development of two ICBMs and two IREMs. For the ICBMs, have a target of 5,000 miles. All this will cost more, but it will be money well spent."

Dr. Woerdemann recalls that in 1948 "we had a budget of one million dollars. After salaries, this left $250,000. This isn't even a starvation diet. This is death."

2. "Another missile proving ground is needed. A nearby ground would do a lot to enhance morale of missile workers. Three thousand miles is too far away."

* * * *

"WHEN YOU HAVE a concentration of people—proving-ground participation of engineers—it gives you a feeling of belonging, a feeling of dedication.

"This is an invaluable thing. Any other system is awkward. Here, we have separate expert groups, but I suppose it has to be this way because private industry has a say-so in the program. I doubt if Douglas and North American would agree to putting their people in the same housing project.

"But a man who works on a missile should be given the opportunity to see the rocket's smoke."

Dr. Woerdemann believes space conquest will come "sooner than we think, thanks to Sputnik and the competition that has resulted."

* * * *

BECAUSE OF Sputnik, he says, "you can say 'space' nowadays and still maintain the status of a scientist. I can remember when they called Wernher von Braun 'fiction boy' and 'Disney man.' They don't do it anymore."

To conquer space the United States is going to have to produce "tremendously larger rocket engines," he says. "I mean engines far larger than what we can put together now. At present Russia probably has engines 10 times larger than what we have.

"Otherwise the problems are all known. The theoretical solutions are well established. Now comes the cumbersome part: Putting all this into technical hardware."

Tide Takes Pilot Body Out to Sea

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) — A midnight joyride in a plane reported stolen at Van Nuys ended in a crash in the ocean about a half mile off San Clemente early Saturday.

The pilot is presumably dead in the ocean. His male companion is in jail.

Peter Holloway, 40, Van Nuys, who swam to the beach and was found by two Camp Pendleton marines about 2 a. m., was taken to Van Nuys —75 miles north of here—and booked on suspicion of grand theft of the plane.

* * * *

DETECTIVE John Garrick of Van Nuys police said fishermen saw a body pitching in the surf near where Holloway left John L. Sipple, 34, Reseda, clinging to the plane. An outgoing tide carried the body to sea before it could be recovered, Garrick said.

Van Nuys police said Holloway gave this account:

He and Sipple, whom he knew only as "Whitey," met at a restaurant-bar near the Van Nuys Municipal Airport shortly after midnight.

"We had both just cashed our checks and were having a few drinks when Whitey suggested we fly to San Diego. I assumed he was a pilot and had his own plane and had nothing better to do, so I decided to go along."

Sipple taxied the four-place Piper cub to the back door of the bar and Holloway got aboard.

"I remember seeing the San Pedro harbor lights. Next thing I recall is the motor sputtering. Whitey shifted to the other tank, but nothing happened, so he tried to glide the plane down."

Holloway said Sipple apparently was seriously hurt when the plane hit the water. Holloway received minor scratches and bruises. The plane sank.

Van Nuys police said it was stolen from a charter and rental flight service at the Van Nuys airport.

Nikita Dons Uniform, Heaps Lavish Praise on Soviet Army

MOSCOW (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev, decked out in a bright blue lieutenant general's uniform, Saturday heaped praise on the Soviet armed forces on their 40th anniversary.

The Soviet communist party leader spoke at the huge sports palace in Lenin Stadium surrounded by other uniformed Soviet chieftains.

He said the Communist Party organizations in the armed forces are rallying servicemen around the party's central committee.

He called on Soviet forces to "strengthen military collaboration with the soldiers of the socialist countries who stand shoulder to shoulder with our army to guard the peace and security of the people."

Khrushchev's address was a message to the armed services from the Central Committee, the Supreme Soviet and the Council of Ministers.

* * * *

MARSHAL RODION Malinovsky, the defense minister, gave the main speech. He charged the United States, Britain and "other capitalist countries" with following a foreign policy that strives to "aggravate international relations and continue the arms race and preparations for war against the Soviet Union and the countries of the peoples democracies."

Malinovsky said the December NATO meeting in Paris proved the western powers plan to continue the arms race and "hatch plans for an attack against the Soviet Union and the socialist camp countries."

But he said the Soviet Union is prepared to repulse any attack. Soviet forces have missiles which can take a hydrogen charge to any point on earth, he asserted.

WASHINGTON (AP)—American military officials saw nothing new in a claim Saturday by Soviet Defense Minister Malinovsky that Russia has missiles able to hit any point on earth with nuclear explosives.

In general, Malinovsky's reference, in a speech marking the Soviet armed forces' 40th anniversary, seemed to follow closely what Soviet Boss Nikita Khrushchev said last summer.

There is no disposition by U. S. experts to deny that Russia may have tested rockets of 5,000-mile range. But Air Force officials and others raise the question of whether such Soviet missiles are operational, reliable and accurate—or still in the development and perfection phase.

GM Veep Launches Crusade

Edward T. Ragsdale, vice president of General Motors and general manager of Buick, will start a nationwide economic "crusade of confidence" Monday to spur car sales and "get our economy rolling again."

Ragsdale has charged a great deal of the lack of confidence in the economy has been caused by the over-emphasis of gloomy economic news and de-emphasis of good news.

Possibly in line with this philosophy, General Motors last week continued its policy of declining to report layoffs and plant closedowns unless confronted with information about a specific facility.

Ragsdale and his general sales manager, Edward C. Kennard, during the next three months will meet with many of Buick's 3,500 dealers in 26 cities in all sections of the country.

* * * *

RAGSDALE SAID he has asked each dealer to sell two more cars in February than were delivered in January and most have agreed.

"The President says we have reached the bottom of the business downturn," Ragsdale said. "But we won't have, unless something is done to bolster the people's confidence and get them to buy the things they need.

"Everytime anyone buys a new car he provides 30 days employment for an automobile worker, plus additional employment for workers in allied industries.

"The same is true when you buy a new suit of clothes, or a new home. You are contributing to the economy of the country. A little extra effort by a lot of people will get our economy rolling again," he said.

And, speaking of Jamestown, the heavy wind last Wednesday morning scalped the big neon sign off the top of the agency building at 1350 American Ave. The huge structure crashed down on the sidewalk right at the service entrance but, fortunately caught no pedestrians or cars.

There are two new faces at C. Standlee Martin's Oldsmobile emporium here. Elmer Romeyn, Cyril McTighe and Gordon Roberts have joined the new car sales staff and will be happy to help their friends "out of the ordinary and into an Olds."

Cadillac

The Decision That Needs No Explanation!

There are relatively few personal decisions a man can make that command the unanimous approval of his friends and acquaintances.

And among these is his choice of a Cadillac car.

For the things that inspire a man to Cadillac are simply too numerous to be overlooked.

Considered from a standpoint of its beauty—or its Fleetwood luxury—or its performance—or its craftsmanship—or its soundness of investment—Cadillac occupies a position entirely its own.

At the heart of this great goodness is, of course, Cadillac's experience in the creation of quality cars.

For more than half a century, Cadillac's sole concern in the manufacture of its products has been to make them as fine as automotive science would permit.

It is out of this unique constancy of purpose that has come Cadillac's international recognition as the Standard of the World.

We invite you to see, both in the showroom and on the highway, how brilliantly this latest Cadillac exemplifies all of these great traditions.

Whether you might choose the Sixty-Two Coupe or the Eldorado Brougham—you will find your decision beyond the realm of argument.

Naples-Bay Flood Curb Proposed

WELL, I found out who among our fellow citizens are wearing the finest clothes and why.

The dapper manager of the men's department of a store where I stopped for a look at some suits told me all about it.

He wrapped me in the coat of an imported fabric number and had me look in the glass.

"Now that," he said, "is the best. That's the suit worn by judges, lawyers and doctors. They wear suits like that to impress people. Buy that suit and you'll look like judges, doctors and lawyers. You'll be right there with the best dressed men in town."

It happened that I was rather roughly dressed when I went into the place—Pendleton jacket, slacks, no necktie. It was obvious to the salesman that I wasn't any judge, doctor or lawyer in casual attire. Probably he smelled an editor, for he said discreetly, when commenting on the rather substantial price of the suit:

"How often do you buy a suit—once every four or five years? You can afford this one so you can impress people the way judges, doctors and lawyers do."

DURING a State College English class discussion of the character and habits of Edgar Allen Poe, a student volunteered some information obtained from psychological research regarding the poet's imbibing.

Soon the conversation turned to the question of heredity, and someone suggested that drinking—or more precisely, the tendency to be a drinker — might be inherited.

Another student added to that the following thought-provoking comment:

"A man I know drinks martinis, and his little boy has a special appetite for olives."

Gin-soaked, I'll bet.

I'M INDEBTED to old newsman Roy McMillan for some interesting facts about George Washington, whose birthday was celebrated yesterday:

He never wore long trousers. Madison was the first president to do so.

Washington suffered from toothache. He finally had false teeth made which opened with springs and closed by jaw pressure. This made it difficult to smile—or maybe to stop smiling once he started. So he was usually grave.

He was one of America's first wheat growers. He planted wheat in 1762, by 1792 was growing 5,000 bushels a year.

He founded mule raising in the U. S.

He foresaw the crossing of the oceans by air. In 1784 he wrote: "I have only accounts of air balloons, to which I do not know what credence to give; as the tales related of them are marvelous, as they lead me to expect our friends in Paris in a little time will be ploughing through the air instead of the ocean to get to America."

Bro. McMillan picked out these two quotations from Washington as among those worth remembering:

"We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purposes of profiting by dear-bought experiences."

"Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."

THE TELEPHONE, according to a fellow I was chatting with yesterday, is an enemy of courtesy.

"I took the trouble," he said "to come here and speak to you in person.

"We were in the middle of our conversation when the telephone rang. You took the telephone off the hook and began listening to somebody else who had made no appointment, had not taken the trouble to come here in person, and who just simply butted in between us."

He said he knew the remedy, though.

Hereafter, he's just going to telephone me.

YOUTHS TO BE guests of individual adult scouting workers are those from units in Long Beach, Lakewood, Bellflower, Signal Hill and Dominguez who have achieved scouting's highest rank.

Other Eagle Scout participants in the program include Don Crain, 860 Newport Ave., who will give the pledge of allegiance, and Steve Streger, 3843 Lomina Ave., who will deliver the invocation.

Dr. Theron Freese is in charge of the dinner. H. E. (Bud) Ridings Jr. will act as master of ceremonies and Mayor Ray Kealer will aid in ceremonies with Harold W. Arnold, scouting executive of the Long Beach Council.

Burglar's Life Dreary One

Poor Pay, Jail Terms Reward His Long Hours

By FRED BOLINGER

There must be something very attractive about burglary because it is one of the most common crimes. About one-fifth of all Long Beach police work has to do with burglaries.

There were 2,522 reported here in 1957.

Easy work? Big pay? Detective Inspector Charles C. Sullans pointed out Saturday that it's really just the opposite.

"Burglary is one of the poorest paying jobs in the world," Sullans revealed.

This is agreed to by Detective Inspectors Don C. McMahan, Maurice Z. Wishon and Pat A. Paris, who also work on burglary investigations.

SULLANS FEELS that if more people knew how dreary the life of a burglar can be, fewer persons would want to become one.

"It's also one of the loneliest jobs," Sullans adds. "And for a night burglar the hours of work are disagreeable. He usually has to work alone, so he can keep whatever small profit accrues."

If a burglar realizes 10 per cent in cash of the value of a stolen article, he's lucky, according to Sullans.

He may average 25 cents an hour, if he keeps busy all the time.

Recently, a $600 motion picture camera was stolen in Long Beach. The crime was pinned on four youthful burglars. Detectives found that the camera was sold by the gang to a supply house for $58.

That amount split four ways comes to only $14.50 for each burglar.

A NIGHT-TIME burglar will pay a more severe penalty when he gets caught than a day-time operator.

Suspects who stole the camera could serve 5 years to life, for first conviction, if the article was stolen at night; 1 to 15 years, if it was a daytime job.

A burglar who specializes in stealing only money earns even less than one who steals household articles and merchandise.

"If $20 is found in a housewife's purse, it's a good haul," Sullans said. "Most burglars sometime or other swear never to steal anything but money, because it's easier to trace a burglar through cameras, jewelry, TV sets and what have you, when they're disposed of."

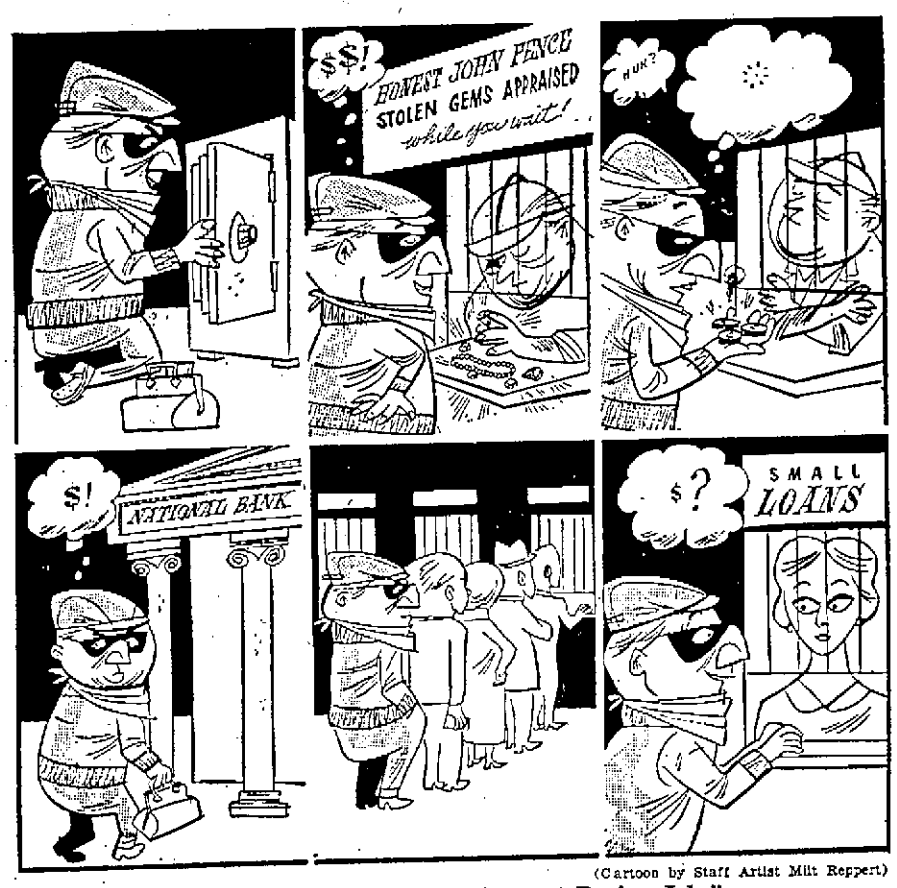

However, the temptation generally is too great and a burglar will snatch up other things along with money if he gets a chance, Sullans revealed.

BURGLARY ALSO is a hazardous occupation.

It may lead to crimes of violence. A burglar who is surprised by his victim may shoot him in a moment or panic, or the victim may shoot the burglar.

Or the burglar may hit the victim on the head with a butt of a revolver. That swing with the gun can turn a nice quiet burglary into an ADW—assault with deadly weapon.

(Cartoon by Staff Artist Milt Reppert)

"Burglary Is One of the Poorest Paying Jobs"

As to how most burglars get their start, Sullans explained: "They begin as sneak thieves, or petty shoplifters—all misdemeanors. But it's mighty easy to 'graduate' into burglary and that's a felony."

ABOUT 60 PER CENT of the 2,522 burglaries were committed by so-called professionals.

The other jobs were what detectives describe as "left-handed burglaries."

These were pulled by boy friends, youngsters, or "guests" who may have roomed in the victim's house, or stayed to dinner long enough to spot some choice loot.

As to solving burglaries, Sullans observed that the arrest of one suspect may solve a single burglary, or a hundred.

"That's why it's fun to catch a suspect. We never know how many jobs he'll clear up."

Sullans concluded: "It's easy to break into a house after dark, where no one's home. But it's tough to go to prison for 15 years."

New Walls Planned to Guard Shore

By GEORGE WEEKS

An $835,000 subsidence remedial program to prevent recurrence of recent tidal flooding in the Alamitos Bay-Naples area has been proposed by City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson.

Timing of the projects is uncertain, however, because the State Lands Commission has refused to authorize expenditure of tideland oil funds for similar works in that area.

City Mgr. Sam E. Vickers said he will attempt to get such an authorization and then recommend City Council approval.

Gilkerson's proposal calls for expenditure of $625,000 for protection of Alamitos Bay peninsula and $210,000 for Naples.

* * * *

MAIN ITEM in the peninsula program is a new bulkhead along Bay Shore Walk from 55th Pl. to 69th Pl.

The existing sheet-pile bulkhead is in poor repair with leaks at many of the joints, Gilkerson said.

Design of the new bulkhead is intended to make available a permanent beach on state park land between the existing wall and the new wall. Its location also would eliminate any question of its being within the tidelands—one of the legal objections raised against a proposal to heighten the existing wall.

* * * *

FOR NAPLES, the engineer has recommended the construction atop the existing wall coping of a reinforced concrete parapet wall two feet high and 10 inches wide. Tide gates to be installed at the end of existing storm drain outlets also are suggested.

A similar plan for increasing the height of the Bay Shore Walk seawall was submitted to the Lands Commission in 1956 but rejected as not being a subsidence remedial measure of the type that can be financed from oil money.

"The peninsula has subsided between 15 and 18 inches in the period from 1928 to the present, and the annual rate of subsidence is continuing at approximately one-half inch per year," said Gilkerson.

"Inasmuch as the original protective walls, both on the peninsula and in the Naples area, were constructed to an initial elevation of from 18 to 24 inches above high tide, this subsidence has virtually eliminated protection in these areas from tidal overflow at extreme high tides."

* * * *

HE RECALLED that on Feb. 4 the entire seawall along Bay Shore Walk was submerged by the sea, the flooded area covering a substantial portion of the peninsula. Flooding occurred at the same time in Naples but not to the same extent. The tide was reported at 6.2 feet, some 8 inches below the highest on record.

Gilkerson recommended against an alternative remedy, the proposed installation of tide gates with a navigational lock in the entrance to Alamitos Bay.

Such a facility would increase operational problems in small-craft activity.

Hastings Stricken Fatally

Glen Elmer Hastings, 55, long-time Long Beach businessman, died Saturday after a heart attack at his office, 430 E. Ocean Blvd.

Hastings, whose home was at 3511 E. 1st St., had resided in Long Beach since 1908. He was graduated in 1921 from Poly High School where he was a star athlete, playing on the school's first state championship basketball team.

He attended Washington State College.

With his wife, Wilma, Hastings owned finishing and modeling schools, beauty salons and a dress shop.

Judges Lengthen Work Day to Ease Court Congestion

By DON MADDOCK

Long Beach Superior Court judges will begin work 15 minutes earlier, effective March 3.

No Increase in Taxes If Charter Changed

There's no tax boost involved in passage of a charter amendment at the March 4 city special election, City Tax Collector Frank Brejcha pointed out Saturday. On the contrary, he indicated, failure of the purpose of the election could result ultimately in tax increases.

The election has been called for the single purpose of adopting a charter amendment to permit unitization of the Wilmington Oil Field by the city in cooperation with private oil operators to stop land sinkage.

"Since the city's share in the unitization program will be paid for out of Tideland Trust Funds and no part of the repressurization work is to be financed out of tax moneys, this plan, if adhered to, can have no effect upon the tax rate," Brejcha said.

* * * *

"ON THE OTHER HAND, if the oil field is not repressurized and subsidence stopped, future land sinkage could damage property and reduce the tax base materially, thus increasing the tax rate.

"Also the loss of the Naval Shipyard is a real possibility, if land sinkage is not halted. That would put several thousand persons out of work."

Rustler Steals Horse, Leaves Lariat on Post

Podnah, there's a hoss thief loose in Long Beach.

The rustlin' culprit' lassoed the critter, name of Kitten, from a pasture — that's right, a pasture — at Hammond Ave. and Artesia St. and made off with it.

He left his lasso on the gate post.

Kitten is about 8 years old, dark brown with three white stocking feet and a white crescent on its head and stands nigh onto 15 hands.

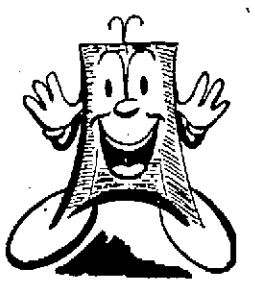

The owner, Judy A. Dedmon, 18, of 6837 San Luis Ave., Compton, told police Saturday that Kitten "looks more like a mule than a horse."

Girl, 9, Hurt by Car

The Road to Party Suicide

SOME CALIFORNIA Republican leaders seem determinedly bent on party suicide.

Despite a constructive move by Gov. Goodwin Knight to restore Republican harmony—disrupted by acts not of the Governor's doing—they are persisting in a course that spells division, chaos and the danger of defeat.

This is a year for which the Republicans needed a united front. Their best bet was to run the incumbents, and therefore the strongest candidates, for Governor and United States Senator.

BUT AFTER GOV. KNIGHT, the California party's top man, declared for re-election, Sen. W. F. Knowland announced his candidacy for the same position. Gov. Knight pointed out this conflict was unnecessary and that each incumbent should stick to his own position. But Knowland and his supporters refused to withdraw and Gov. Knight, placing party harmony above personal preference, himself withdrew from the governorship race and declared for U. S. Senator.

Instead of welcoming this attempt to close ranks for a harmonious campaign, Republican leaders hostile to Knight saw a chance to purge him entirely. Having first run out on him as a candidate for Governor, some of them ran out on him as a Senatorial candidate.

Thus at the California Republican Assembly's fact-finding committee meeting, members summoned to recommend an endorsement on Senator split 18 to 18 on the issue of supporting Knight against Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco. This left the recommendation undecided and the final decision on endorsement must be made at a convention of the CRA to be held in San Jose in mid-March.

GOV. KNIGHT HAS HAD 20 years of public service in the judiciary and in the legislative and executive branches of the state government. He has achieved a remarkable record of public support. As a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1950, he won both Republican and Democratic nominations. In the 1954 gubernatorial primary election, he not only won 1,198,896 Republican votes but 718,695 Democrats marked their ballots for him. In the general election of that year, Gov. Knight ran up the remarkable total of 2,290,519 votes, winning the election by a margin of over half a million votes.

With a Senatorial candidate of such demonstrated statewide popularity available to them, the only explanation of the action of the 18 CRA "fact finders" must be the desire to weaken the liberal wing of the Republican Party.

The Republican voters will have a chance to show their sentiments at the primary. If they want to repudiate the candidate-juggling that has been going on and to vote for the record and on the record, they should give Gov. Knight an overwhelming victory.

They Say It Won't Be Long

Happy Memories Encourage '58 Crossfiling Candidates

CANDIDATES for the top offices to be filled by California voters this year—the U. S. Senatorship and the Governorship—have indicated they will crossfile, seeking support in both parties at the June primary.

And it happens that the experiences of these men in past elections lend encouragement to all of them in their bids for votes in and out of their own parties.

EPLEY

In the Senate contest, only Gov. Knight has been in statewide races, where his record for bipartisan support has been exceptionally favorable.

In 1950, when he ran for re-election as lieutenant governor, Republican Knight won both the GOP and Democratic nominations at the primary. His Democratic opponent that year was Sen. George Miller of Contra Costa County, who trailed Knight in the Democratic voting by 173,000 votes. Knight, of course, won the GOP nomination by a big sweep.

In the 1954 primary, when he was running for governor, Knight got several hundred thousand Democratic votes in the primary. They weren't enough to give him a double nomination over Democrat Richard Graves, but it was an impressive showing that carried through to the general election, which he won handily.

REP. ENGLE, the Democrat in this year's Senatorial race, has not been in a statewide contest. But Engle has regularly been getting double nominations in his bids for re-election in the Second Congressional District, where he has become virtually a fixture.

Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, battling Knight for the GOP Senatorial nomination, has not been in a statewide election, but he is mayor of a major city and in the non-partisan contest for that office presumably received substantial Democratic support.

MOVING over into the governorship race, we find that both Republican Sen. Knowland and Democratic Atty. Gen. Brown, can look back on some happy experiences as candidates for double nominations.

Knowland was returned to the U. S. Senate in 1952 with the nominations of both Republican and Democratic Parties. His Democratic opponent that year was Clinton McKinnon, who made a pitiful showing.

Then in 1954, Democrat Brown romped off with the Republican as well as the Democratic nominations in his bid for re-election as Attorney General. He snowed under Fred Howser, Republican, in that primary. Brown even had considerable Republican newspaper support in that campaign.

CANDIDATES have long memories, and like all of us, their memories like to dwell on pleasant things. The men running for the top California jobs in this year's election have some pleasant things to think about as they review the past, and no doubt these happy experiences bolster their morale for the tough struggles ahead in 1958.

FCC Investigators Bent on Making Martyr of M'Carthy

WASHINGTON.—They seem to be intent here on making a martyr out of the late Sen. McCarthy. For never in the heyday of his anti-Communist crusade through congressional committee procedures did he indulge in the amount of hearsay stuff, innuendo and "guilt by association" which has characterized the hearings currently being held by the congressional subcommittee now investigating the affairs of the Federal Communications Commission.

Someone writes a letter to someone else saying it might be a good idea to contact a senator or a presidential assistant or the office staff of the Vice President to get some influence brought to bear on the subject of the grant of a TV license. Someone else says he hears through a friend that another friend heard that maybe some relative of the President by marriage may have been importuned to help to exert influence. Promptly the headlines are filled with the innuendoes, and the public is led to believe there is "guilt by association."

* * * *

FEW ON THE so-called "liberal" side—not even the various civil liberties organizations which are zealous defenders of individual rights when persons are seemingly accused unjustly of association with Communist "fronts"—are clamoring for a fair and orderly way of conducting the congressional hearing in question.

M'CARTHY
In His Footsteps

It's just too bad that the persons involved in the TV-license controversy were not accused of some sort of Communist connection. They would have had lots of defenders. The speechmaking would have been loud and long on the subject of the violation of personal liberties and the Bill of Rights.

To take refuge in an aphorism of the days of the McCarthy controversy, it isn't the "objective" of the House committee's current investigation which is to be criticized but only the "methods" used.

Certainly every corrupt influence should be exposed. But there is a right way and a wrong way to expose the improprieties whereby such pressure is exerted.

The right way, when stumbling on a name mentioned in a letter or in an executive session hearing, is to get hold of the person involved and get his side so it can be simultaneously presented to the public for what it's worth. Instead, there has been a lapse of several days between the time of the disclosure of some alleged connection or improper pressure and the establishment of the exact facts. The "leaking" to the press of staff memoranda prepared for a congressional committee has become a favorite device by which innocent persons are crucified.

IF OFFICIALS are to be held up to the public as charged with some wrongdoing, they should have an opportunity to confront those who make the charges and even to cross-examine them through counsel. This is supposed to have been the net result of the debate which arose in connection with the hearings conducted by the late Senator from Wisconsin.

Every wrong allegedly committed in the McCarthy hearings has been committed over again in recent hearings but with even less basis for the charges than in the controversy over Communist activities and associations.

Bureaus Blind to Spirit of Law

TO THE EDITOR:

Recently an unemployed aircraft worker was denied his weekly unemployment payment because he was "unavailable for employment" on the day he and his family were held prisoners by a couple of convicts.

One reason state bureaus are often discredited in the public's mind is that they appear blind to the difference between the letter and and the spirit of the law.

Politics and Strontium-90

TO THE EDITOR:

Having recently read in the editorial writer's own newspaper that the rate of increase of cancer-producing strontium-90 in the bones of children is increasing at a surprising rate, one can only assume it is the editorial writer who is naive and not the hundreds of scientists who advocate abolishing nuclear tests.

OUR GREAT scientific minds have been educated in the humanities as well as in science. It was his concern for humanity as well as his scientific discoveries that made Albert Einstein truly great.

The fallacy that scientists are not competent in the affairs of human living is just another way to discredit men who are at least as capable and often more so than politicians and editorial writers.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We only wish the alarmists would worry as much about Russian strontium-90 as they do about U. S. strontium-90. If we cease development of our nuclear weapons, and the Russians hit us, we will no longer have strontium-90 to worry about. We won't have anything to worry about.)

A Handout Is a Handout

TO THE EDITOR:

I like Eisenhower's proposals for expanding our military powers and curtailing some of the frills we enjoy, but apparently Sen. Kuchel doesn't.

Let's start at home. You are lampooning the farmer constantly about his subsidy (and I agree with you) but who stands to benefit most from the water storage project for California's San Joaquin Valley? Californians, of course, and Southern Californians in particular. Then let us solve our own problem. We're asking $225 million from the federal government.

In this subsidy business, I believe the grants to California have exceeded those of any other state, and in some instances have exceeded those of entire areas of other parts of the country. And it is subsidy. A handout in whatever guise is still a handout.

SENATOR SOAPER SAYS:

Sports-Car Driver Best Space Travel Candidate

By BILL VAUGHAN

A MICHIGAN professor thinks that the two-car family soon will be the rule. On the other hand, with more young people getting married and living with the folks, isn't there a trend toward the two-family car?

* * * *

MEN WHO can operate complicated controls while crowded into restricted quarters will make the best space travelers. So we may expect that the first humans to reach the moon will be sports-car drivers.

IN A WAY, we wish the politicians wouldn't talk about a tax cut. It would be easier on everybody's nerves if they'd just keep quiet and surprise us with it some morning.

DREW PEARSON

Halleck Hits Loose Talk on Economics

WASHINGTON—The big economic meeting at the White House between cabinet members and Republican congressional leaders was enlivened by some blunt, realistic lecturing by Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana, assistant GOP chief of the House.

"I'm getting a little fed up with all this loose talk from both sides on our economic problems," declared Halleck. "From the Republican side, it's a mistake, in my opinion, for our guys to be sounding off continually with these optimistic assurances to the nation. If we keep it up, people will begin to wonder if we are protesting too much.

REP. HALLECK
A Plague on Both Sides

"They will wonder if we are telling them the score, and they may get the idea maybe that we don't know the score ourselves.

"On the other hand, I think we ought to begin calling some of these professional gloom doctors on the Democratic side. They were predicting the same gloomy prospects in 1953, but they were wrong. We pulled out of the 1953-54 downturn, when unemployment averaged about what it is today, into the prosperous years of 1955-56-57.

"We are hearing the same free-swinging statements from the other side today, that we are going to pieces economically. It only makes matters worse by upsetting the confidence of the people."

Secretary of the Treasury Robert Anderson told the conferees that he didn't want to commit himself at this time on a tax reduction, adding that he hoped and felt business conditions would improve sufficiently by midyear to preclude the necessity of a tax cut. However, the conferees were dubious that "pump priming" public works alone would be enough to lift us out of the slump.

"THE DEMOCRATS WENT IN for a lot of this so-called 'pump priming' between 1933 and 1939," snapped Senate GOP Leader William Knowland, "but it didn't do much good. There were over 10 million people out of work in 1938. That's more than twice the number of unemployed we have today. The Democrats had another recession under Truman in 1949-50 when the unemployment average also was higher than it is today."

"Well, let's tell them about it when their calamity howlers moan about how the Republicans are selling the country down the river," broke in Halleck. "But we ought to put a brake on these constant protestations of optimism from our own side. If I was hunting in the mountains somewhere and had a guide who kept constantly assuring me that he knew the way, I would begin to doubt that he did."

L. L. COLBERT, PRESIDENT of Chrysler, has been lobbying both in Congress and the Pentagon to stop Secretary of Defense McElroy from cutting back the production of Jupiter missiles. Chrysler is supposed to manufacture the same number of Jupiters for the Army as Douglas Aircraft is making Thors for the Air Force. But lately, McElroy has considered cutting back the Jupiter because it will be more expensive and take longer to get into production than the Thor.

The Big Bidding Contest: Dollars vs. Rubles — How Long Will It Last?

IS IT FOREIGN AID, or mutual security?

Is the President's $3.9 billion request a foolish giveaway, or is the money "fully as important to our national defense as expenditures for our own forces"?

JOHN S. KNIGHT

Mr. Eisenhower says the safety of our families, the future of our children and even our continued existence as a nation depend upon the Mutual Security program he is submitting to Congress.

There are many patriotic Americans who disagree with this view. But their voices will not be heard in Washington next Tuesday when a bi-partisan all day meeting will be held under the high-sounding name of the National Conference on Foreign Aspects of U. S. National Security.

The purpose of the NCFAUSNS is to "sell" foreign aid to Congress and the American public.

* * * *

IT SEEMS that some "unenlightened" people are asking why the $60 billion already spent in foreign assistance hasn't persuaded our allies that we are a kindly, generous and peaceful nation.

How will more billions of our money buy their loyalty if they are still susceptible to Soviet blandishments?

Must the bidding contest—dollars vs. rubles — go on forever?

To answer these questions — and many more — President Eisenhower commissioned Eric Johnston to invite some 700 leading citizens to hear the NCFAUSNS sales pitch.

Of this number, approximately 100 have accepted "places of honor" on the platform.

Former President Harry Truman, ex-Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Adlai Stevenson will carry the work load for the Democrats.

On the Republican side, there will be the President and Vice President, the Secretary of State and Neil McElroy, the Secretary of Defense.

Eric Johnston has had a very gratifying response from those who were asked to attend. Few people decline an inviation written on White House stationery.

It will be interesting to see, however, what effect Johnston's sales promotion will have on the Congress.

Many Senators and Congressmen are questioning the magnitude of the recommended program, especially with a recession at home.

SOME OF THEM may wish to ask Mr. Dulles, who has been predicting a crack-up of the Soviet economy, how the Russians are able to outdo us in economic handouts.

Everyone will concede the necessity of maintaining our military installations abroad. But must we, in order to make friends, exhaust our own resources to prop up the economies of 67 nations presently receiving our assistance?

10 Key Scientists Grads of Schools in California

WASHINGTON—Ten of the 16 key scientists who developed America's first satellite at California Institute of Technology are graduates of California public schools.

The National Education Association, which sent out letters commending the 15 public schools, said this underscores the relationship of the nation's public school system to America's scientific achievements.

NEA Executive Secretary William G. Carr commended the school systems for "academic programs that over the years have helped to educate men of such calibre."

The 16 Cal Tech men are associated with the Institute's jet propulsion laboratory, which shares credit for the launching of the Explorer I satellite. Laboratory Director William H. Pickering, born and educated in New Zealand, is the only member of the crew who is not a U. S. high school product.

Californians and the high schools they attended are:

John G. Porter, supervisor of the data analysis section, 24th Street High School and Pasadena Junior College.

Jack E. Froehlich, project director, Burbank High School.

Henry L. Richter, a native of Long Beach, coordinator of International Geophysical Year experiments, Narbonne High School in Lomita.

Manfred Eimer, assistant supervisor of satellite observations, Dorsey High School, Los Angeles.

Karl W. Linnes, supervisor of tracking station development, Francis Polytechnic High School, Los Angeles.

Robert J. Parks, supervisor of equipment tests, Newport Harbor High School in Newport Beach.

Eberhardt Rechtin, a consultant, Redondo Beach high school.

John G. Small, in charge of missile operations, San Rafael High School.

Robertson Stevens, in charge of microlock and satellite antenna, Herbert Hoover High School, San Diego.

Allen E. Wolfe, supervisor of electric circuitry, University High School, Oakland.

All of them are young—in the early and middle thirties.

Urge End to 3 C.C. 'Luxury Services'

A proposal to end three "luxury services" provided by the City of Long Beach is expected to be presented to the City Council by the Chamber of Commerce board of directors next month.

Majority sentiment of nearly 1,000 answers to a Chamber questionnaire favored discontinuing the Long Beach Municipal Band, city tax assessment services and the outdoor school camp program, according to the Chamber.

* * * *

CHAMBER COMMITTEES are planning a study of the questionnaire results this week and are expected to recommend to their board that the City Council be asked to halt the services.

Savings of $619,538 could be realized by ending the three programs and would nearly halve the city's $1,500,000 budget deficit expected this year, Chamber members point out.

Costs of operating the services annually include $201,839 for the city band, $262,000 for the city's tax collecting and assessment services and $155,699 for the outdoor camp program.

* * * *

CRITICS OF THE tax supported programs say:

The band is a luxury which cannot be afforded by the taxpayers.

The tax assessment program should be in the hands of the county, eliminating duplication.

Long Beach taxpayers provide all outdoor school camp capital improvements while other areas in the district make use of them without financial support, the Chamber report said.

Four-Cent Mail Rate Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) predicted Saturday that the Senate will vote next week for a four-cent stamp on all letters instead of the five cents asked by President Eisenhower on nonlocal mail.

The issue is to be fought out on the Senate floor, starting Tuesday, when a postal-rate-increase bill comes up for debate.

The present three-cent stamp, in effect since 1932, appears to be on its way out by July 1.

The House voted last year for a flat four-cent rate as part of a postal-revenue-increase bill. Then the Senate Post Office Committee voted 7-6 last Thursday to amend this measure to put a five-cent rate on intercity letters for a three-year period, July 1, 1958, to June 30, 1961.

* * * *

MONRONEY AND Chairman Olin Johnston (D-SC) of the Post Office Committee plan to lead a fight to knock off the five-cent-stamp amendment.

Senate Republican Leader Knowland of California told reporters he expects "a fairly close vote" on the issue. Knowland said there is a "good chance of retaining" the amendment as long as the additional one-cent increase is for a limited number of years and revenue from it goes for modernization and construction of new Post Office buildings and facilities.

IT'S UP—AND IN!

Dodger Hurlers Uncork as Florida Sun Arrives

By GEORGE LEDERER
(I, P-T Staff Writer)

VERO BEACH, Fla. — The sunshine state lived up to its name Saturday for the first time in weeks, and along with rays of warmth from old sol came rays of encouragement from Dodgertown.

Stringbean Stan Williams, a 6-4 righthander, drew the rave notices as the Dodgers went through a four-hour workout in temperature that reached the mid-70s.

Manager Walter Alston, Coach Charlie Dressen and chief scout Al Campanis are extremely high on Williams, who cut loose with some fastballs that took off like a grasshopper.

* * * *

"WILLIAMS is exceptionally fast," commented Alston. "His curve is only fair, but he has great potential. He needs only a change in speed to be a big winner."

The change, a valuable pitch that helped Johnny Podres handcuff the Yankees twice in the 1955 World Series, is what Alston and Dressen were trying to add to Williams' repertoire Saturday.

Williams, only 21, had a 19-7 record and 3.04 ERA with St. Paul last year. He struck out 223 batters in 246 innings.

* * * *

ANOTHER BRIGHT spot during the second full day of workouts was the performance of veteran Carl Erskine, plagued by a sore shoulder most of last year.

Erskine, who claimed he was throwing only at "medium batting practice speed" Friday, put a little more zip into it Saturday and reported his arm felt fine and his shoulder was free of pain.

Alston observed that Erskine was pitching better and with more ease Saturday than he did in the first three months of the 1957 season.

"There's really no way of rating our pitchers until they start bearing down in about two weeks. I can't tell yet just how many pitchers we'll carry, but we'll probably go north—I mean west—with about 12 or 13.

* * * *

"BUT IT ALL depends. If Erskine, Don Newcombe and Clem Labine are sound, we may carry fewer pitchers. It will depend on where we need more bench strength—in the infield or outfield."

Except for the usual stiffness, pitcher Danny McDevitt is the only early training casualty. He has been bothered by blisters on his pitching hand and feet.

Alston divided his pitchers into three squads of six each for competition workouts under coaches Dressen, Joe Becker and Greg Mulleavy.

Coaches keep score of this unique workout, which includes fielding bunts, running, bunting (most fair balls of 25) and pitching strikes (most out of 25). The winning squad is allowed to quit one-half hour ahead of the others.

Today's drill is scheduled at 1 p.m., but with the weather turning warmer Alston announced he will switch the starting time to 11 a.m. beginning Monday.

* * * *

Alston claims he has no shortage of outfielders even though only five, including pinch-hitter Elmer Valo, are listed on the roster. "Don't forget," Alston said, "we also have available Junior Gilliam and John Rosebore . . . Gilliam, a switch-hitter, played on the picket line frequently last year. Rosebore originally was an outfielder before he was converted to a catcher. . . . Connie Grob (6-8 at L.A. and 5-8 at Montreal) and Bill Harris (16-10 at Montreal and 0-1 with the Dodgers) arrived Saturday to bring the squad to 25 players. . . . Pitcher Jackie Coffman remains a holdout, while the two Renes, outfielder Friol and pitcher Valdes, are among the missing because of visa difficulties.

OSC Drubs UCLA, 77-61; SC Spilled

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

Led by Dave Gambee, who pumped in 30 points to become the all-time scoring king in Pacific Coast Conference history, the Oregon State Beavers handed UCLA a 77-61 whipping in their "fight for survival" in the conference title race here Saturday before 3,500 fans in the Long Beach City College gym. Stanford toppled the Trojans of SC, 69-61, in the first game of the doubleheader.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The 6-7 Gambee surpassed the old record of 855 points held by Bob Houbregs of Washington with 27 seconds left to go when he dropped in two free throws . . . and then boosted his three-year conference scoring total to a record 858 with a sensational 40-foot set shot as the gun ended the game.

* * * *

EARLIER this season, Gambee became Oregon State's all-time scorer and has now run his total for all games—both non-conference and conference—during his three varsity seasons at Corvallis to 1398 points, which is 143 more than the old mark set by Cliff Crandall in the late 1940s.

The Gambee-inspired triumph over the Bruins was Oregon State's ninth conference win against three defeats and keeps them hot on the heels of the pace-setting California Bears. Meanwhile, the loss was the fourth for UCLA against nine victories, leaving them only a slim hope of overtaking either Cal or the Beavers in the final two weeks.

UCLA opened with a rush and forged into an early 8-2 lead, but the Beavers with their superior speed, rebounding strength and Gambee's scoring punch gradually assumed command in the next few minutes.

Oregon State caught up with the Bruins at 9-9 and then charged into a lead they never relinquished after only seven minutes had elapsed when Lee Harmon netted a 10-foot jump and Jim Anderson followed with a 15-footer.

FROM THAT POINT, the Beavers pulled out to a 13-point advantage in the next 12½ minutes which the Bruins managed to slice to nine points at

Hanna Glad to Be 'Home'

By JERRY WYNN

Hanna, Hanna . . . rah, rah, rah . . . the cheers swept like wild fire through the City College gym as big Jim Hanna scored 34 points to lead the Rabbits of Poly High to the Southern California CIF prep championship.

That was a little more than two years ago. This weekend Hanna returned to the scene of his greatest triumph for the first time as a member of the University of Southern California basketball team. A fraction of an inch taller (6-7¾), many pounds heavier (235) and a mature married young man of 19, he was happy to be back.

"I just love this place," he said, surveying the glistening hardwood, empty stands and tall rafters. "I still get goose pimples thinking about those CIF games. We sure wanted to win badly for the coach (Del Walker). I don't know if I'll ever have a greater thrill."

* * * *

CIF CO-PLAYER of the year in basketball and a triple letter winner (football and baseball) at Poly, Hanna left Long Beach for SC as one of the most sought-after prep cagers in local history. He had great size, good speed and quick hands. He couldn't miss.

Jim lived up to his promise as a freshman, pacing the Trobabes to a 14-1 record with a 17.0 scoring average and 46.1 shooting percentage. But this year on the varsity—although second leading scorer with a 10.8 average and a good rebounder—his success has been limited.

"I think I'll do much better now that I'm playing offensively at forward instead of center," he observed. "I like to shoot facing the basket and moving in. At center, you have to hook. Since our team works off the forwards, I was often left out of the play. At forward, I'll be able to dribble, move around and play as I did in high school."

* * * *

HAVE THE TROJANS played up to expectations?

"No. We haven't hustled enough and our inexperience has hurt. The PCC is awful rough you know. You've got to hustle all the time. You just can't let up without getting hurt."

Hanna bent back his strong, crew-cut head, paused, then earnestly said:

"I'll tell you something. The boys on this team are real close, and that's what makes for a championship club. I wouldn't be surprised if we took it all the next two years."

Which has been the best team you have played?"

"USF. They've got great balance, move the ball well and

Konrads Sets Four Records

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Konrads, 15-year-old Latvian-born swimmer, won the 1,650-yard freestyle swim in the Australian National Championship Saturday night, setting four world records en route to his easy triumph. His time was 17 minutes 28.7 seconds, world records for both 1,650 yards and 1,500 meters.

Along the way he was timed in nine minutes 17.7 seconds for the 880-yard and 800-meter distances.

If Konrads' four times are approved, it will give Australia every world record in men's freestyle swimming.

It was only the second time that Konrads, whose parents now are Australian citizens, had gone 1,650 yards. The first was two years ago at the Olympic trials when his time was 19:13. Since then he has grown four inches and added 28 pounds.

Dawn Fraser, Australian Olympic mermaid, shaved three full seconds off her own world record in winning the 220-yard freestyle in two minutes, 14.7 seconds. Lorraine Crapp, another Olympian, was second in 2:22.

The men's 110-yard freestyle went to John Devitt, who was timed in 55.9 seconds.

All My Troubles Are Behind Me--Newk

By GEORGE LEDERER
(I, P-T Staff Writer)

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Big Don Newcombe, a Dodger disappointment last year, believes all his troubles are behind him.

Looking exceptionally trim at 240 pounds, his lightest spring reporting weight in five years, Newk revealed Saturday that his back and right elbow, which plagued him during most of 1957, are cured.

After pitching the Dodgers to the pennant in 1956 with 27 victories and only seven defeats, Newk slipped to an 11-12 record last year as the Dodgers fell to third place.

The new Newcombe, relieved by a hypnotist of his mental block against flying, also vows he'll never again sleep in an air-conditioned room without a shirt. This was but one of many incidents leading to his downfall last year.

* * * *

"I CAUGHT COLD sleeping in that air-conditioned hotel room last August and as a result my arm was a bit stiff," Don recalled. "When I tried to favor the arm, I pulled a muscle in my back. I wasn't the same after that."

Prior to that, Newk had a bad elbow and then injured the middle finger of his pitching hand. For three weeks Newcombe had to change his grip on the ball. "But it was impossible to pitch with just the thumb and index finger. I couldn't get anything on the ball.

"Now I feel fine and I'm looking forward to playing in the Coliseum. It'll be a tremendous thing."

* * * *

NEWCOMBE is not a stranger to Southland fans. He has pitched five times in post-season exhibition games at Wrigley Field under the promotion of Bill Veistner.

"I've always pitched well at Wrigley. I had one of my best games there when I beat Bob Lemon's All-Stars, 2-1, in '53."

Newcombe has not turned a ball since the end of last season. He turned down an offer to barnstorm with Willie Mays' Major League All-Stars and instead was advised to take regular steam baths and exercises in a gym.

"I weighed in at 248 at the end of the season. I'm already down to 240 and that's my best playing weight."

Newcombe has not seen the Coliseum and its controversial 251-foot leftfield foul line. But he isn't particularly worried about a deluge of home runs.

* * * *

"LET'S FACE IT," Newk says. "A hitter will pull the inside pitch no matter how hard the pitchers throw. But in the Coliseum the emphasis will be on control, keeping the ball away from the righthanders. And the pitcher will be more conscious of the homer hurting him."

Since Newcombe is one of the league's finest control pitchers he should have no rea-

Delany Scores in 4:03.7

NEW YORK (UP) — Late-charging Ron Delany scored his 21st straight indoor mile triumph Saturday night when he ran Hungary's Istvan Rozsavolgyi into the boards with two laps to go in four minutes, 3.7 seconds in the National AAU championships at Madison Square Garden.

Missing Gunnar Nielsen's three-year-old world indoor record by only one-tenth of a second, the Irish whippet from Villanova who became the first man to win three straight AAU miles indoors, sprinted home 15 yards in front of Rozsavolgyi. Jim Grelle of the University of Oregon was third.

* * * *

ROZSAVOLGYI thrilled a crowd of 13,500 as he sprinted into the lead with two laps to go and bolted 10 yards in front. But Delany overtook him with a brilliant burst of speed, roared into the lead with one lap to go and never was threatened from there on in.

In other events, Bob Backus of the New York A. C. set a world record of 65 ft. 4¼ in. in the 35-pound weight throw; Parry O'Brien won the 16-pound shotput with a heave of 60 ft. 1¾ in.; and Greg Bell of Indiana took the broad jump at 25 ft. 5¼ in.

In running events, Hayes Jones, 19-year-old Eastern Michigan sophomore, set a meet record of 7.1 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles; Ed Collymore of Villanova won the 60-yard dash in 6.2 seconds; Yugoslavia's Velisa Mugosa won the three-mile run in 13:54.2; Charlie Jenkins of Villanova took the 60-yard run in 1:11.3; and Zbigniew Orywal of Poland captured the 1000-yard run in 2:14.1.

A WILD TALE

Bowler Hits 300 Game

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A bowler sought help from an instructor to cure a wild hook.

Conrad Wild of Milwaukee, who averages a net 183, told Ray Schanen about his flighty ball.

"Roll the first one and I'll try to see what's wrong," Schanen said.

It was a solid strike.

"See anything wrong?" asked Wild. Schanen shook his head. Two, three, four, five more balls—all strikes.

"See anything wrong yet?" Wild inquired, a bit embarrassed by now. Schanen said he hadn't.

Wild's strike string stretched to 8, 9, 10, 11 and finally 12—every one in the 1-3 socket for his first 300 game.

LBCC Tramples Bakersfield

Sports Merry-Go-Round

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

"I don't know why I'm sitting next to you, the way you newspaper fellows from Long Beach have treated me. But, here I am!"

Such was the introduction of Kenny Fagans, the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) commissioner, Friday night as he pulled up a chair at the press table next to yours truly and prepared to view the SC-Oregon State basketball game.

Fagans had just worked the UCLA-Stanford game with Lou Batmale and admitted he didn't want to talk shop, but just to sit back and enjoy the Trojan-Beaver affair.

However, midway through the first half, Fagans realized—as did everyone else in the City College gym—that the one-sided game wasn't too enjoyable and he proceeded to "talk shop."

"You fellows in Long Beach certainly keep a fellow on his toes, especially at the end of football season," chuckled Fagans. "Why, do you know that your newspapers have been on my back for the last three football seasons. It's getting to be a game now."

I don't know how much of a game it is, but we've certainly been on Mr. Fagans' back for the past three seasons. The first two "debates" centered around certification of St. Anthony High School for the post-season playoffs and last year's concerned an asserted slugging match between Fagans and Long Beach State College gridder, Jerry Sullivan. Fagans was officiating the 49er-L.A. State game when the latter incident was ignited.

What will this coming football season bring?

"I shudder to think, my friend," Fagans roared, "I shudder to think."

FAGANS CONFESSED the Stanford-UCLA game was a rough one for an official.

"I'd rather officiate a fast-moving game, even when I'm forced to blow my whistle more," stated Kenneth, "than a deliberate game like Stanford and UCLA played. We're used to officiating at a fast pace out here and a comparatively slow game makes it real rough on us.

"We took some fancy jockeying from one fellow at this press table during that first game, but I think we did a good job officiating. When do you find a boy ending a game these days with a free throw and not having the 1-and-1 advantage?"

What Fagans meant was that he and Batmale called a foul-free game. For a player to have a two-shot free throw opportunity, the other team must have committed seven fouls during that half. Stanford hadn't when UCLA's Jim Halsten ended the game with a free throw.

As for that "one fellow at this press table," Fagans was referring to the second game's telecaster, who was "relaxing" during the first contest. The relaxed Sam had a hazardous time steering UCLA to that 46-43 victory. He almost didn't.

NOTABLE QUOTES . . .

"Milwaukee will NOT romp to the National League title this season," snapped the Braves' captain, catcher Del Crandall, in Fullerton. "We may win the title, but we won't romp. Stuff I've been reading like that from the East makes me sick. We're in a tough league. And those Dodgers will be murder this year. Oh, they may miss guys like Campanella and Snider—if Duke's knee doesn't come around—but they'll be tougher to beat in the Coliseum than they ever were in Ebbets Field. With that tremendous fan enthusiasm that's bound to rub off on the players, the Bums will be 50 per cent better than last season!"

"I was touched to read in your column a few days ago that your office was flooded, your files floating around like the lost animals on Noah's Ark, and that your assortment of record books had fallen victim to damp plaster that the rains nudged from the walls. I'll remember this when I cover a fire and the sparks are flying, when I cover a flood and the water's raging, or when I have to wade through hell and high water to snap a picture" — John Neagle, crime photographer.

"If I was in the American League, I'd worry myself to death about Cleveland," declared Dodger veep Buzzie Bavasi, in Los Angeles. "Frank Lane is sharp and tricky. He pulled off a deal two days ago that made everybody laugh at him. Why? In essence, he swapped an aging, no-hit catcher (Jim Hegan) for a kid with lots of potential (J. W. Porter). Do you know, we would have jumped at the chance to get Porter, who may be the big surprise in the American League this season?"

"When your time comes, it just comes, that's all. I cheated death twice in the last three months, but it wasn't my time, so I'm still here. In December, I ripped into a hay bale at Riverside and my midget auto flipped into the air. There was hardly a bolt worth salvaging when the dust settled, but, thanks to a sturdy safety belt, I'm still here. Then, two weeks ago, a stock car bumped me from behind at Phoenix and sent my car out of control. I went over and over again and the car was a total loss. I wasn't hurt a bit. So, I'll be out there again today"—George Amick, 5-foot-5 driver, who is entered in the Pomona 100-miler.

THE PONY EXPRESS is on time again:

"Tell Duke Snider that if he doesn't like to live too close to pitchers, so that he don't have to ride home with them after a game, that I'm sure the pitchers will hold up under the loss. I see Mr. Snider is still the quiet, unassuming young gentleman that he was when we played together at Compton High." (signed) An Ex-Tarbabe, Compton.

(Now that Duke's stationed in the Southland, you two friends should get together one of these summer days.)

"No wonder people hate you and Kelley. You always pick fights. Like when you get mad at Charley Church because he didn't let USF play Saturday night. Who came here first, Long Beach or San Francisco?" (signed) Dick Chapman, Long Beach YMCA.

(Now, there's a real $64,000 question!)

"So the Dodgers are mad because SC is protesting loss of their parking lots. Will you tell that larcenist., Slick O'Malley, to go right back to his gopher hole in Brooklyn where he can rob the tenement trash, and leave us civilized people alone. While you're at it, join him!" (signed) Clifford Powell, 1832 Junipero.

(What, and miss the fun when Don Newcombe tangles with one of those SC parking lot attendants?)

Vie for Crown Tuesday

By HAL ILLINGWORTH

Long Beach City College routed Bakersfield, 66-50, Saturday night and moved into a tie for the Metropolitan Conference basketball lead before 1500 fans in the Viking gym.

The Vikings and Valley JC are now tied with 11-2 records and meet next Tuesday at Valley for the title. Bakersfield is third with a 10-3 mark.

The game was never close as the Vikings took advantage of poor Bakersfield first-half shooting to grab a commanding lead. The Renegades tried 33 shots in the first half and hit only seven while Long Beach hit on 11 of 27. The Norse led 24-9 with 8:01 left in the half and held a 32-16 halftime advantage.

BAKERSFIELD made a gallant bid to get back into the game during the second half but could get no closer than five points, 49-44 with 5:44 remaining.

At that point, however, Bill Ellis hit a lay-in and Dick Markowitz a jump to push the Vikings back into a commanding nine-point lead. In the last three minutes the Vikings hit 13 points while Bakersfield could get only four.

Long Beach hit on 24 of 50 shots for the entire game and out-rebounded the Renegades, 42-32. Dave Jones was the top Norse man of the boards with 12 rebounds.

MARKOWITZ topped game scorers with 18 points while teammate Ellis scored 16. The Vikings are 22-4 for the season and did not lose a game at home.

Problems? Even Haney and Stengel Have Them

By BEN OLAN
The Associated Press

Problems? Every one of the 16 big league baseball managers has them.

And the headaches are bound to increase next Saturday with the official opening of the spring training season.

Even pennant-winning pilots Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves, and Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees won't be excepted from the demanding grind. Like the others they'll have to worry about Rookie trials, hectic exhibition schedules, player injuries and inevitable roster-trimming decisions.

Will the Bums of Brooklyn become the darlings of Los Angeles? Will the Giants come out of their fog in San Francisco? Can Walt Alston of the Dodgers find a catching replacement for the injured Roy Campanella? Can the Boston Red Sox count on another banner year by the 39-year-old Ted Williams? Will Cleveland's Herb Score be able to come back?

* * * *

THESE ARE only a few of the questions to be tackled in the next few weeks.

All 16 clubs will be back at their 1957 spring training camps this year. The only new manager hired since the close of the last campaign was Bobby Bragan. He caught on with the Cleveland Indians after the Pittsburgh Pirates dropped him in favor of Danny Murtaugh.

Let's look at some of the strong and weak points of each club as the official start of the training season approaches (clubs listed in order of last season's finish):

AMERICAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK—Good rookie crop to help Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra and Co. But Stengel must come up with left fielder and firm-up the shortstop situation involving Gil McDougald and Tony Kubek.

Chicago—Pitching definitely improved with the addition of Early Wynn and Ray Moore. But skipper Al Lopez needs power yielded in giving up Minnie Minoso and Larry Doby. The Sox hope Al Smith, obtained from Cleveland, and big first baseman Ron Jackson can pick up the slack.

Boston—Very little change. Infielder Pete Runnels seems only important new man and he'll likely only be used as a reserve. Second base and shortstop jobs are open although a strong comeback by Billy Klaus would help.

Detroit—Acquisition of Billy Martin, Jim Hegan, Gus Zernial and Tom Morgan appears to have strengthened club considerably. To go all the way, Tigers need improved performances by Harvey Kuenn, Billy Hoeft and Frank Lary.

Baltimore—Doby gives Orioles lefthanded power it lacked. And manager Paul Richards helped out by recommending shortening of home park fences. Southpaw Billy O'Dell may be ready to become big winner.

Cleveland — Frank Lane has helped each team he's been with. So why stop with Indians? Score must win 20 games for them to move into first division. Addition of Minoso and pinch-hitter Mickey Vernon should help.

Kansas City—Harry Craft has numerical pitching strength with 23 on roster. Duke Maas, acquired from Detroit, looms as ace of staff, backed up by Ralph Terry, Jack Urban, Ned Garver, Alex Kellner and Wally Burnette. Other new faces include outfielder Jim Small and catcher Frank House, also from Tigers.

Washington—Most important newcomer is big first sacker Norm Zauchin. Catching strongest point with three topflight men in Clint Courtney, Ed Fitzgerald and Lou Berberet. One of three may go in trade.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Milwaukee—Stronger, if anything. Exceptional pitching looks even better with addition of Bob Rush and Don Kaiser from Chicago and Joey Jay and Carleton Willey from Wichita farm. A healthy Billy Bruton will straighten out lone weak spot in outfield.

St. Louis—Still looking for first rate centerfielder. Also needs more pitching depth to match Braves. Some of stars such as Stan Musial, Al Dark and Del Ennis moving up in older age bracket.

Dodgers — Alston counting heavily on rookie Don Demeter to win outfield job. Pitching of Don Newcombe and John Podres figures to improve. But none of available catchers appear near Campanella's class.

Cincinnati — Numerically stronger in pitching bolstered in trades with Cardinals and Philadelphia. Harvey Haddix, from Phils, should fill southpaw needs. Infield strongest department with three good first basemen in Dec Fondy, George Crowe and Steve Bilko.

Philadelphia — Wally Post (from Cincinnati) gives club fine outfield. Ed Bouchee will be missed. Comeback by Robin Roberts could put Phils in the race.

San Francisco—Manager Bill Rigney counting on youngsters Willie Kirkland and Orlando Cepeda to back up Willie Mays. Pitching will be adequate if Johnny Antonelli recovers form. Catching is sore spot.

Pittsburgh — A healthy Ted Kluszewski coupled with right-handed punch supplied by Frank Thomas can move Pirates up a few notches. Fine double play combine in Bill Mazeroski and Dick Groat. Pitching is sound.

Chicago — (Tied Pittsburgh for 7th)—Taylor Phillips will have to come through with fine season to make deal with Braves pay off. Some promising rookies on roster, but looks as though team will have to count again on Ernie Banks and Walt Moryn for most of batting punch.

Alumni '9' Wrecks Vikes 20-3

Long Beach City College's Alumni broke a three-game loss streak and routed the Viking varsity, 20-3, in their annual clash Saturday.

The Alumni wrapped up the game in the first inning when it scored six runs on six hits, two errors and a hit batsman. The first five Alumni batters singled.

Gordon Seyfried, under contract to the Detroit Tigers, got credit for the win. The loss was the Vikings' second straight of the season.

STUNS KANSAS
Nebraska in Upset

LINCOLN (UP)—Little Jim Kubacki hit a long, twisting jump shot with two seconds left Saturday night to boost Nebraska to a 43-41 upset victory over fifth-rated Kansas.

The Huskers, who were beaten, 102-46, by the Jayhawks earlier, took time out with 1:10 remaining and went into a stall, waiting to take a chance with one good shot.

Kubacki, who minutes before had begged Coach Jerry Bush to let him suit up and had rushed from the stands to put on a uniform, took the ball and, with his back to the basket, twisted and sank the decider.

Wilt Chamberlain of Kansas scored 18 points.

Cal Rolls On, 59-48

PULLMAN (AP)—The confident California Bears were content to shoot only when clear Saturday night in beating Washington State, 59-48, to retain their lead in the Pacific Coast Conference basketball race.

It was a team victory for the Bears who appeared to hustle only when their comfortable margin, which they held most of the game, was threatened.

Paced by Jerry West, the Mountaineers surged to a 53-38 halftime lead and were ahead 63-45 early in the second half. But the Panthers roared back to cut the margin to six points—80-74—with only six minutes of play remaining.

Pajarito Cleared; Fight Definitely on for April 1

MEXICO CITY (AP)—An official said Saturday night the Mexican Boxing Commission has proof Ricardo "Pajarita" Moreno was not in a night club brawl, and that his suspension would be lifted Monday.

The popular young fighter is scheduled to meet Hogan "Kid" Bassey in a featherweight title fight April 1 in Los Angeles.

When he was reportedly involved in a night club brawl, the boxing commission Feb. 13 suspended him indefinitely pending an invesigation.

California boxing promoter George Parnassus, worried about the case, flew here early this week. After watching the Pajarito (Little Bird) in workouts, he said the fighter was in top form, and the fight would go ahead as scheduled.

Mexican newspapers sharply criticized the boxing commission, which has delayed action. Papers have charged that the night club incident was "sabotage" by opposing promoters who wanted the fight in Mexico.

Stan the Man Plays in Coliseum May 16

(31st and final article of a series on National League stars who will visit Los Angeles during the 1958 season.)

Stan the Man!

That's the well-earned title of Stanley Frank Musial, a modern-day ball player for whom the Hall of Fame's portals will be opened when he hangs up his St. Louis Cardinal spikes.

You'll be seeing him in the Coliseum Friday, May 16.

His bat does his talking:

* * * *

FIFTEEN straight seasons hitting .300 or better — a modern National League Record.

Seven batting championships (only one short of Honus Wagner's all-time mark).

A lifetime mark of .580 in slugging for an NL record.

One hundred or more runs in 12 different seasons, including 11 in a row—both NL marks.

He shares the league record with George Burns and Rogers Hornsby by having led the league in runs scored five seasons.

Thirteen seasons with 300-or-more total bases is a major league standard, also held by Lou Gehrig.

Ranking 10th in the all-time hit list, he is scheduled to join the 3,000-club with his 43rd 1958 safety. By leading the league in hits on six occasions, he set another league mark. He needs a single to tie Mel Ott's NL record of 5,041 total bases.

Ten seasons with 100-or-more RBIs is another of Musial's circuit standards.

He has led the league in doubles eight times, and if he does it again, he passes Wagner and Speaker for the major league record.

He's the only NL player ever

Idaho Rips Washington

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP)—Borrowing a page from the California Bears who defeated them Friday night, Idaho used similar tactics to surprise Washington, 85-63, in a Pacific Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Vandals took over midway in the first half and built a 42-31 intermission lead and steadily increased the margin in the second half.

Capt. Gary Simmons stopped all scorers with 30. Big Doug Smart of Washington, who has been runnerup to Simmons in the PCC scoring race, got 28.

5 YANK HURLERS HOLDOUTS

ST. PETERSBURG (AP)—Five members of the New York Yankees' pitching staff were officially listed as holdouts Saturday when they missed the American League champions' opening workout of the spring.

Righthanders Bob Turley, John Kucks and Bob Grim conferred with personnel director Lee MacPhail and walked out to think matters over.

Righthander Tom Sturdivant is enroute from his Oklahoma City home for a conference, probably today. Lefthander Tommy Byrne is at his Wake Forest, N.C., home and hasn't disclosed, as yet, whether or not he intends to play ball this year.

Only 13 pitchers and four catchers, 12 shy of full strength, were on hand Saturday as spring training began for the battery men of the world champion Milwaukee Braves.

Heading the list of absentees were six unsigned pitchers—Lew Burdette, Bob Buhl, Gene Conley, Don McMahon, Juan Pizarro and Humberto Robinson.

Joe Ginsberg, second string Baltimore catcher, was signed Saturday to a 1958 contract calling for a slight raise, reducing the list of unsigned Orioles to seven.

Once Over Lightly

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

This being the first spring that Southern California has ever had a major league team of its own in training—and, of all places, in Florida—fans will be far more interested in the stories and features coming out of the various training camps than in previous years.

Last spring when the prospect first loomed that we would have a major league club by this year, we queried the various writers coming through Los Angeles with their respective clubs—Red Sox, Indians, Giants, Cubs, etc.—what readers should expect in the way of coverage from the training bases.

Up to this year, spring training news in Southland papers, of course, just barely scratched the surface. Only major developments were reported.

Now, we'll be getting much more detailed reports.

What's it like in the typical Florida training camp? One Eastern writer summed it up perfectly. He guaranteed that the following situations are bound to be recorded this spring in the various camps:

A manager is an odds-on choice to announce "I'm ready to deal anyone on the club if it can help me."

The fast-baller will tell people he is now a "pitcher" instead of just a "trower."

THE TEAM PLAYBOY WILL DECLARE he has taken the pledge.

A kid pitcher will get some hitters out in an exhibition game and will be hailed as a new Bob Feller.

The sore-armed hurler will explain that a winter's rest has cured his ailment, but will add that it's too early yet for him to throw hard.

It's a cinch a catcher will get his finger split by a foul tip during batting practice.

The manager of a second-division team will declare that "every position on this club is wide open."

A player who showed up overweight will resent any mention of his surplus poundage.

At least one coach on every club will sit in the hotel lobby after dinner and stay there until it's time to go to bed.

A player who gripes about being worked too hard will head for the golf course the first time he has any leisure time.

There will be deep-sea fishing excursions with one or more players getting seasick.

A manager will get into an argument with an umpire in the lobby of the hotel about the interpretation of a rule.

THE OLD-TIMERS WILL TELL the rookies how tough it was years ago when they tried to break in.

There will be endless arguments on how to pitch to Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, etc.

Fans staying at the hotels will attempt to join groups of players even though they are uninvited.

There's always a player who will give free advice on the stock market.

Several managers will be quoted as saying "all I ask from a player is that he hustles."

And a pitching coach will repeat the old line—"you got to get it over."

The players who like Western movies will team up, as will those who like to attend the dog races or enjoy some other activity.

The players will complain about the size and tenderness of the steaks. It always happens.

The writers will predict a pitcher will win 25 games.

A bonus player will ride around in the flashiest car.

There will be screams from several sources that "they" were misquoted by reporters.

And there'll be the ever-present players who head for their rooms early with a few cans of beer concealed under their coats.

THE GUYS WHO HAD BAD YEARS will have reasons for them.

You'll always have a player around who will get up and sing if there is an orchestra in the hotel dining room.

More than one manager will say of a player, "I'll wait until he tells me he's in shape."

The various chamber of commerces will give boring dinners. The ballplayers hate 'em.

No matter where a club trains, the manager will praise the town as "the greatest training site in the country.

The players will grouse about the weather.

There will be stories galore about deals that never come off.

Several actors will show up in uniform to have their pictures taken with the star players.

Veteran reporters who cover the training camps claim that no matter how homely a girl is, she will get a play from the athletes if she owns a car. Cheaper than taxis, you know.

And (attention Walter O'Malley) if a team plays in Miami, it's a foregone conclusion that at least one player will be fined for violating the curfew.

The Dodgers, of course, open their exhibition season—in Miami!

EKABA TRAILS IN BIRTHDAY 'CAP

Longden Boots in Tall Chief

By HANK HOLLINGSWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

The $57,300 Washington's Birthday Handicap was chopped down fittingly enough Saturday at Santa Anita by the father of his turf world, ancient Johnny Longden, as "Old Moneybags" wheeled the 11-1 shot, Tall Chief II, to a thrilling half-length victory over Promised Land.

Longden's victory was his fourth in the seven-year history of the classic, as Grandpa John grabbed a real stranglehold on this particular race.

TALL CHIEF II, an Irish-bred former steeplechase horse that raced prominently in France a few years ago, had won only one race this season—the San Gabriel Handicap over the same grass course on New Year's Day.

The 6-year-old horse's time for the mile and one-half grass race Saturday was 2:30 1/5, a slow time in view of St. Vincent's track mark of 2:25 2/5. Tall Chief paid a sparkling $25.40.

Tall Chief was content to stay back in the 11-horse field until the pack wheeled around the backstretch. Then he waded through horses like a Sherman tank through beanstalks.

Tall Chief appeared a winner going-away through the stretch, until Promised Land made his belated bid. Jockey Manuel Ycaza's mount was driving hard at the finish and getting to Tall Chief, but time ran out.

Solid Son was third, one and one-quarter lengths behind Promised Land and nearly four lengths ahead of Hi Pardner, a 31-1 shot. The rest of the field finished in this order: Infantry, Born Rich, Eddie Schmidt, Ekaba, Special Look, Rumbo and Whatitoldyou.

* * * *

LONGDEN VISITED the press box after the race and said the victory was "one of the happiest of my life." He explained:

"Ever since I've returned to the saddle after my broken leg, I've had plenty of trouble finding that winner's circle. This is only my third win and lotsa people been saying I'm all done. I guess I kinda showed 'em today, eh?"

Regarding Saturday's victory, Longden said:

"Things came up real good for me. There was a pretty good jam on the far turn-and I had nowhere to go between horses, so I took my best shot and went around. I had to get into him pretty good at the end, because he started to pull up when he got to the front, and he was getting tired fast. I'm glad we didn't have to go no further, though."

Longden's other victories in this race were last year with St. Vincent, in '55 with St. Vincent again, and in '54 with Thirteen of Diamonds.

* * * *

FAVORED EKABA set the early pace, along with Infantry and Born Rich. Promised Land was running ninth, and Tall Chief 10th. After the first mile, Solid Son moved into the lead, with Ekaba and Infantry on his heels.

Entering the stretch, Tall Chief assumed command, with Solid Son hanging on gamely in second spot and Promised Land a charging third. Solid Son dropped back and the one-two horses battled right down to the wire.

Ekaba's poor race was a mystery even to his rider, Willie Shoemaker.

"The way Ekaba was running today, I knew we weren't going to get any of it when we made the first turn in the infield. He just wasn't running his race," sighed Willie.

* * * *

Ycaza had this to say: "I had a good position all the way, and at the three-eighths pole, I went to go to the inside and the hole closed on me and I had to take Promised Land off stride. If it hadn't been for that, I think I'd won it all."

Commented Ray York on Solid Son: "This horse has had three hard races in a row right now, and I'd say that after the things broke for me—that's what beat him. I got through on the inside on Ekaba turning into the backstretch and from there on I had things my own way—we just got outrun."

Said George Taniguchi on Hi Pardner: "I took the same path that Tall Chief did, but he got there first. I think my 31-1 shot ran a big race."

* * * *

THE CO-FEATURED $10,000 Thomas Thoroughbred Farm stake at a mile and one-sixteenth was captured by Rex Ellsworth's five-year-old star, Like Magic, in a stirring stretch duel with Caronat. Spotting Caronat an 11-pound weight advantage—122 to 111 — Willie Shoemaker whipped Like Magic frantically down the long stretch to catch the front-running Caronat right at the wire.

Like Magic paid $4.80, going off as an equal 3-2 favorite with Caronat.

Many longshot bettors placed a sentimental $2 wager on Last Row in this race, for 22 years ago to the day—Washington's Birthday—Last Row's daddy captured the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. Top Row came from nowhere in 1936 to nose out Time Supply and Rosemont in the Big 'Cap. The favored Discovery was seventh. Last Row was dead last Saturday.

Two jockey rulings were issued by the Board of Stewards Saturday. Both affected Jockey Henry Moreno. Hank was fined $50 for reporting late in the jockey's room Saturday, then was socked another $50 for hitting his horse, Dine Out, over the head with his whip during Friday's eighth race.

32 FOR ELGIN

Idaho State Nips Seattle

POCATELLO, Idaho (UP)— Idaho State College's NCAA tournament bound Bengals used only five men Saturday night in scoring a 71-68 overtime victory over Seattle University.

The victory came despite another brilliant scoring, rebounding and ball handling performance by Chieftain Center Elgin Baylor who poured in 32 points.

Oligarchy Nods 'Liege in Widener

MIAMI (UP) — Lightweight Oligarchy made the most of a 17-pound weight advantage Saturday to beat Kentucky Derby champion Iron Liege in the $130,000 Widener Handicap before a season-record crowd of 31,507.

Oligarchy, a strapping chestnut colt ably handled by Sammy Boulmetis, beat Iron Liege by a head. Willie Hartack got every ounce of power out of Iron Liege, a four-year-old colt which seemed to come again in a long stretch duel but fell short under high weight of 125 pounds.

Hoop Band, ridden by Hedley Woodhouse, beat Iron Liege's running mate from the Calumet Farms, Pintor Lea, by a neck for third money.

Iron Liege was the 4-5 favorite of the big crowd which lost a total of $99,487 bet on him to win.

Oligarchy, the third choice, paid $20.90, $6.70 and $4.50 for a two-dollar bet across the board. Iron Liege returned $2.70 and $2.30, while Hoop Band, 23-1 win choice, paid $6.60 to show.

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane picked up $92,800 for her Brookmeade Stable for Oligarchy's victory. The four-year-old son of Alibhai ran the mile and one-quarter in the sparkling time of 2:01 2/5, only 2/5 of a second off the track record.

* * * *

RACING RESUMED at Bowie after a five-day layoff due to snow but, because of the questionable condition of the track beforehand, two stakes originally scheduled were not run.

Tenacious held off late challenges by Bernburgoo and St. Amour II to win the featured race at the Fair Grounds. Tenacious was timed in 1:52 2/5 for the mile and one-eighth and paid $7.20.

Caliente Bills 2 Features

Wickerbill and River Clipper, two Caliente favorites, return to competition in the Beau Pere Combination which headlines today's program of 11 races at the border track.

The two stars will meet speedy opposition from two track record holders, Let's Match and Blue Rajah. The co-featured La Sierra Purse, a mile and 70 yards test, has drawn 11 starters.

Strong Bar won his second straight race Saturday at Caliente by galloping to a four-length victory in the featured Washington Birthday purse.

Mike's X, the favorite, finished second while Walt Hackett was third. Strong Bar was ridden by jockey Arthur Anderson of Long Beach and paid $7.40.

Kansas State Five Routs Missouri 82-61

COLUMBIA (AP)— Kansas State's overpowering Wildcats emphasized their No. 1 national ranking Saturday by defeating the Missouri Tigers 82-61 in a Big Eight Conference basketball game that all but assured them of a spot in the NCAA tournament.

It was Kansas State's eighth conference victory against no losses and, coupled with defending champion Kansas' 43-41 defeat by Nebraska at Lincoln Saturday night, put the Wildcats two and one-half games ahead of Kansas in the Big Eight race.

Stock Race to Turner

DAYTONA BEACH (UP)— Curtis Turner, Roanoke, Va., gunned his 1958 Ford stock car to an average speed of 98.563 miles per hour here Saturday to win the 160-mile National Convertible Championship race at the NASCAR safety and performance trials.

Lee Petty of Randleman, N.C., and Joe Weatherly of Norfolk, Va., gave the crowd plenty of thrills in their tight battle for second place a few hundred yards behind Turner. Petty, driving a 1957 Oldsmobile, finally won after both he and Weatherly went into a spin on a turn within 100 yards of the finish line.

Bell Captures So. Atlantic Golf

ORMOND BEACH (AP)—Judy Bell, 21-year-old college girl from Wichita, won the South Atlantic Women's Amateur golf tournament over Marge Burns of Greensboro, N.C., 1 up in 37 holes Saturday.

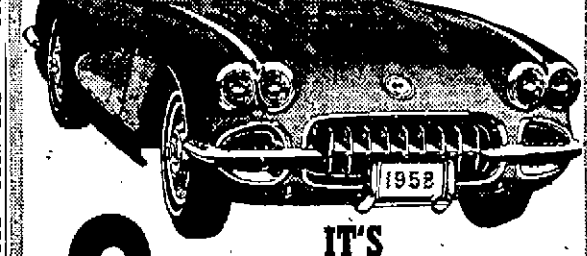

Miss Bell was 4 up after the morning 18 but lost control of her game in the afternoon.

Miss Burns, in her seventh year of campaigning for the South Atlantic title and playing in the final match for the first time, had the title within her grasp until she bogeyed both the 36th and 37th holes. In both cases she was short of the green with a second shot and couldn't chip up close enough for one putt.

Bob Kelley Says---

Did you notice the Telemeter Co. withdrew its request for a Pay-TV franchise, which had been granted by the Los Angeles City Council? Anti-Pay signatures had placed a referendum on the June 3 ballot.

Obviously, the Telemeter people figured they had no choice in the world when the voters strolled into the booths to be asked: "Do you favor the City Council ordinance granting franchises for pay television?" (Or words to that effect.)

It's almost a cinch the other Pay-TV outfit, Skiatron, will likewise withdraw from the ballot. Thus, it would appear free television is here to stay for the time being, and possibly some years to come.

Though I'm pulling for the Bruins, looks like Cal just about has the Coast Conference basketball race locked up. All they have to do is beat UCLA in the Bear gym, next weekend, and that's all she wrote.

Incidentally, the Trojans looked like an extremely ragged team Friday night. Apparently they fell apart when Jim Pugh was lost because of injuries . . .

DISC JOCKEY Dick Whittinghill, whose horse Mizzy Swaps has finished 14th, 10th and 13th in her three races, is planning to take her to Turf Paradise in Phoenix, Arizona. Since the Arizona group put over a betting coup at Santa Anita Friday, Whit figures he'll put over a "Sunset and Vine" coup of his own in their backyard . . .

Manuel Ycaza, the "Panamaniac," returns to Florida this week to ride Jewel's Reward. After his winning ride on the Kentucky Derby candidate at Hialeah last week, Ycaza said: "It real thrill to ride heem" . . .

I'll never second-guess Southern California ring officials again after watching the decision from New York Friday night. Alex Miteff took about nine out of 10 rounds from Nino Valdes, who did nothing but stagger around the ring and hold.

Yet one judge gave it to Valdes. And the decisive split decision ballot was cast only 5-4-1 in favor of Miteff . . .

OTHER NIGHT on the air, I remarked I'd love to tell the story of the referee (and sole judge) who laid 4-1, or $300 to $75, on the fight he was working. Though I know this to be a true story, further details are impossible to give because of certain laws in our country.

After the program, Aragon called up excitedly to ask: "Was it one of my fights?" That Arthur, I think the boxing hearings and the Goldstein trial have given him a guilt complex . . .

If the Dodgers are in contention closing day of the season, Saturday, Sept. 27, you might see some sort of a two-day record for crowds in the Coliseum. Because the Rams open the NFL season the next day against the Cleveland Browns. Could draw 85 or 90 thousand . . .

There may be a logical answer why response for San Francisco Giant season tickets has not been as frantic as for Dodger ducats. Up in the Bay Area, basketball is a big sport, and fans won't turn their minds fully to baseball till they find out how Cal and USF finish up.

Here in Southern California, basketball isn't that big a thing, hence the turn to baseball much earlier in the year . . .

PREDICTION: Keep an eye on Dodger pitcher Stan Williams as possible rookie of the year. The Cubs' John Holland told me last fall he couldn't understand how Williams managed to stay out of the majors so long.

EX-DIAMOND STAR

Barna in Knife Fight

CHARLESTON (AP) — Herbert (Babe) Barna, former major league baseball player, was stabbed Saturday in an altercation in a club he operates here.

Barna suffered a 14-inch penknife wound across the abdomen and cuts on both legs. A hospital said his condition was satisfactory.

Barna spent 16 seasons in professional baseball as an outfielder. He played with the New York Giants and Boston Red Sox. His last season in baseball was 1952 with the Charleston Senators.

VETERAN OPINION OF BLAIR FIELD: GOOD STADIUM

Relay Carnival Saturday

Collegiate track action gets under way this week with three of the nation's powerhouses featured.

Saturday morning at 10, the fourth annual SC-UCLA Relay Carnival at Westwood is scheduled, and power-packed Occidential hosts the Camp Pendleton Marines in the afternoon.

Oxy's Chuck Coker will unveil such stars as Rudy Alston, Ty Hadley, Todd White, Pat Logan and Bob Rye.

SC coach Jess Mortenson has a wealth of material, good enough, claim observers, to win the national title.

The Trojans have proven veterans in seven-foot high jumper Charlie Dumas, Olympic team member Max Truex in the distance events, Tom Anderson, school record-holder, in the half-mile, and hurdler Bob Lawson.

The Trojans figure to come up with a record-breaking two-mile quartet with Anderson, Murray Cockburn, Bob Shankland and Lanny Quigley.

But the Bruins of Ducky Drake won't be lacking for potent point-getters either. Slated to see action for the hosts are tried and true Stan King, John Seaman, Bob Holland, Ken Riding, George Roubanis, Ken Thompson and Marv Luster. The Bruins will pick up Rafer Johnson and Walt Torrance when the basketball season ends.

Fleitz Gains Tennis Finals

PALM SPRINGS (UP)—Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleitz of Long Beach Saturday defeated Miss Jackie Tegland, Los Angeles, 7-5, 6-2, in semi-finals of womens singles competition in the 7th annual Palm Desert Invitational Tennis Tournament at the Shadow Mountain Club.

Mrs. Fleitz, who is staging a comeback after retiring for a year to raise her family, won her quarter-final round match by default from Mrs. Warren Wilson.

Sally Moore, Bakersfield, defeated Dodo Cheney, Santa Monica, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, in another women singles match. The winners meet in the finals today.

Whitney Reed, San Francisco, who Friday beat John Fleitz of Long Beach, defeated Mike Franks, Los Angeles, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, and Alex Olmedo, Los Angeles, downed Mike Green, Miami, 6-1, 6-2, in mens semi-finals.

In mens doubles, Green-Olmedo defeated Noel Brown and Robert Delgado, both of Los Angeles, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Blair Field Premiere March 7

By JERRY HALL

From home plate to the furthest stretch of the outfield at the new Blair Field is 166 chubby strides by personal count and along the route is one of the finest baseball diamonds in the country.

There's still some manicuring to be done, but the sleek steel and concrete stadium is about ready for heavy duty on the local baseball front.

First game on the slate is March 7. Those in charge of the grass are a bit skeptical, but the rest of the workmen are right on schedule. A few more pancs of glass and some sweeping up will put things in order. And the people in the grass department assure they will not stand in the way of the inaugural.

* * * *

BLAIR FIELD, on the site of the splintery old Recreation Park grandstand across the street from Wilson High School, is in a manner of speaking a carbon copy of the Milwaukee County Stadium where half of the World Series was played last autumn.

"It's major league all the way, as far as the playing area is concerned," said Tom Marchese of the Long Beach City Engineering Dept. as he pored over the blueprints. "The Braves' stadium was the last major league field built (1953), so we tore a page of specifications out of a book and built our park around them," says Marchese.

"I think Blair Field has one of the finest playing surfaces in the nation," Marchese says. "The preparation (grading, etc.) for the playing area was first rate in every detail." The streamlined grandstand seats 3,500.

The field is large by any standard. While the Milwaukee park has a 315-foot foul line, it's 347 feet down both baselines at Blair Field and 400 straightaway to center. A 10-foot concrete block wall surrounds the park. A 10-foot gravel strip which soon will be widened to 20 feet warns outfielders when chasing fly balls.

* * * *

THERE WAS a provision in the design for lighting, but no funds in the cash drawer. And according to Marchese, there is no prospect of lighting.

The field will be a busy one, with Long Beach State College, the semi-pro Rockets and several Junior American Legion teams using it as home base in addition to Poly.

Blair Field drew high praise from Dodger officials recently and—with its eucalyptus backdrop—has been poetically described as a gorgeous baseball plant.

And, after all, it has the only major league outfield in Southern California.

Midwinter Sail Concludes Today

By BOB RUSKAUFF

The rainmaster constantly threatened but failed to unload a downpour as an all-time record of 398 yachts, in 38 sail and two power boat fleets, launched the 29th National Midwinter Regatta Saturday.

Despite light airs that dwindled away and had boats of the larger classes off Los Angeles YC finishing by searchlight, there was plenty of close action.

Power yachts, in their lone regatta performance, a 25-mile predicted log race from Long Beach to Newport, had Lee Sumpter's Alicia winning the Bobrick Memorial award in Class A and Ray Anderson's Kay Bob, the Harry Brittain novice trophy.

In large sailing action, George Sturgis' yawl, Jada, nipped Dick Steel with Odyssey in Ocean Race Rule I fleet. A top battle amongst one-design classes featured the win, over 14 Star boats, by world champ Lowell North, with North Star II of San Diego.

Chairman Bob Hoffman said the 90 dinghies in eight classes which sailed two of their five races (three today will wind it up) on Alamitos Bay, was an all-time entry record for the sporty small boat course.

The small boats, dinghies and several of the one-design fleets will conclude the winter sail classic today. Handicap ocean-goers will carry their three-race series through Monday.

Jim Hanna Happy to Be 'Home'

are well coached. That Woolpert does miracles."

The best players?

"Johnny Green of Michigan State. He jumps like a kangeroo. Frank Howard of Ohio State. He's weak defensively but great on offense. Doug Smart of Washington is good but he has the advantage of having his team work around him."

One of the major problems facing a prep athlete is his prospective choice between attending a junior college or playing freshman ball in a four-year college. Hanna staunchly favors the latter.

"It's much easier to make the varsity after playing with the frosh. Although you don't play as many games as you would in jaycee ball, you are constantly scrimmaging the varsity and learning its style. You also get a good schooling in fundamentals, things like the 1-on-1 (man to man) defense and play patterns. You're coached all the time."

* * * *

WHAT WOULD BE your advice to the aspiring young basketball player?

"I don't know if I'm the one who should give advice, but I would say to practice, practice and practice.

While Hanna's first love is basketball, he also intends to play baseball and football at SC. He'll join the baseball team as a pitcher-outfielder after basketball season and become a teammate of his close friend Ron Fairly, the Trojans' star centerfielder from Long Beach.

As for football, there appears to be a tug-of-war for his services in the making between basketball coach Forrest Twogood and football mentor Don Clark.

* * * *

"CLARK WANTS me out, but Twogie has been against it. I'd play either end or slotback."

Hanna showed his seriousness towards the grid sport by commenting that he would like to give pro football a whirl if he succeeded in college and was drafted by an NFL club. Either that or pro basketball.

Jim now resides in Anaheim with his bride of 11 months, the former Andrea Todd, whom he dated at Poly.

"I'd like to return to Long Beach to teach when I'm finished playing," he gazed into the distant future. "You know, I'd sure love to coach at Poly."

Patty, Savitt in Indoor Net Finals

NEW YORK (UP)—Dick Savitt of South Orange, N. J., and Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Paris, both former Wimbledon champions, reached the final of the National Indoor Tennis championships Saturday with straight set triumphs.

Savitt, third-ranking U. S. player, upset defending champion Kurt Nielsen of Denmark, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4. Patty had an easy time beating Julius Heldman, a weekend player from New York, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. Heldman had upset Barry MacKay, young Davis Cup star from Dayton, Ohio, in the quarter-finals Friday night.

* * * *

THIS WAS ONE triumph Savitt really wanted. In last year's semi-finals he was whipped by Nielsen, who went on to down Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., for the title.

Savitt will take his second indoor crown if he beats Patty today. He won on the boards in 1952.

For Patty, this will be his first time in the indoor final. He is unranked in this country because he did not compete in enough tournaments here last year.

This final might be termed the "old-timer special." Both Savitt and Patty have been topflight tennis contenders for many years. Savitt is 29, Patty 34. Their duel today is a tossup although Savitt has an edge on his superior power off the ground. Patty won over Heldman because of his superior net game. Heldman produced some fancy southpaw shots from the backcourt, but he is weak at the net. That sealed his fate.

Savitt, who divides his time between the oil business and tennis, had too much speed off the ground for Nielsen. Savitt's backhand cross-court shots were particularly effective. They enabled him to break service in the 11th game of the first set and again in the ninth game of the second set. The burly Savitt cracked Nielsen in the third game of the third set to insure his victory.

GARDNAR MULLOY, 44-year-old Davis Cupper from Miami, moved into the final of seniors singles. Earlier in the day, Mulloy and his partner, Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, were eliminated in the semi-finals of seniors doubles.

Jefferson Mendel and Edward Tarangioli, both of Yonkers, N. Y., and doubles partners for 25 years, defeated Mulloy and Meyner, 7-5, 6-3.

In seniors singles, Mulloy will meet Dr. Reginald Weir of New York, the defending champion, in the final. Mulloy, playing in the seniors for the first time, polished off Harry Hoffman of Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-2. Dr. Weir beat Bill Lurie of Brooklyn, 6-2, 6-3.

Rain Postpones Houston Tourney

HOUSTON (UP) — Pounding rain forced postponment of Saturday's third round of play in the $30,000 Houston Invitational Golf Tournament.

Pete Mazur, 42-year-old professional from Buffalo, N. Y., led the field with a 36-hole total of 139. Third-round pairings will be played today, weather permitting. The final round will be moved back to Monday.

Long Beach State College closes out its 1957-58 basketball season this weekend with two games in San Diego. Coach Bill Patterson's 49ers battle CCAA foe San Diego State Friday night and then face the San Diego Marine Corps Recruit Depot Saturday night.

Rams to Tackle Browns in Home League Opener

The Cleveland Browns, 1957 Eastern Conference champions and perennial powerhouse of their division, will be the Rams' 1958 opening game foe, General Manager Pete Rozelle announced Saturday.

In addition to the Browns, favorites to repeat as champions in the East, Los Angeles also will play home games against their traditional Western Conference opponents—Detroit, the Chicago Bears, San Francisco, Baltimore and Green Bay. The home schedule will open Sept. 28, and will close Dec. 14.

Spearheading Coach Paul Brown's aggregation will be the bruising fullback Jim Brown, who last year was named both rookie-of-the-year and player-of-the-year in the NFL.

The Rams' complete league home schedule follows:

September 28, Cleveland.
October 26, Detroit.
November 2, Chicago Bears.
November 9, San Francisco.
December 7, Baltimore.
December 14, Green Bay.

Long Beach Junior Tennis Tournament Set for April

The second annual Long Beach Junior Tennis Tournament will be held April 12-13 and 19-20 on the Lakewood Tennis Club and Long Beach City College courts, tournament director John Thanes announced Saturday.

Sponsored jointly by The Independent, Press - Telegram, Long Beach Tennis Patron's Assn. and Long Beach Recreation Dept., the event is expected to attract all of Southern California's outstanding young players.

"Last year's event was a great success," said Thanes, "but we hope to make this one even better. We have our committees organized and are distributing entry blanks."

All juniors are eligible to compete. Entry blanks may be obtained at area senior and junior high schools, tennis shops, and the Southern California Tennis Assn. Deadline for entering is April 8.

Divisions of play will be age 18 and under, 15 and under, 13 and under, and 11 and under for boys and girls, singles and doubles with the exception of no doubles in 11 and under. A player can compete in three events.

Committee chairmen are Walter Sheek and Clyde Walker, assistant tournament directors; Don Menke and Col. Harry Smith, referees; Dr. Richard Matlock, housing, and Bonnie Harter, refreshments. Ted Mathews is president of the Patron's Assn. and Larry Collins Jr. honorary tournament chairman.

"We'd like to encourage any youngster who plays to enter," said Thanes. "This tournament should be a real spur to junior tennis in the area."

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

Fishing for bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish will be booming within three weeks as the first of the fresh-water resorts open. It promises to be an interesting season.

Starting the list will be Railroad Canyon Reservoir, opening next Saturday. Following that, Irvine Lake (Orange County) and Lower Otay (San Diego County) will begin the season on March 19.

We already have reviewed the possibilities at Irvine, which are made doubly attractive with heavy trout plantings twice weekly.

Lower Otay, even though closed since 1955, is not what one might consider an "unknown quantity." It always has been one of the finest catfish lakes in the West, and its crappie and bass provide plenty of excitement.

Fifty rental rowboats will be available at Lower Otay and fishing days will be Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Private boats are permitted with motors limited to 7½ horsepower. There are picnic and camping areas. Shoreline anglers will have access to 215 acres of fishable waters. Floats will be anchored in suitable locations for the bluegill anglers.

* * * *

OTHER SAN DIEGO County reservoirs opening this year will be El Capitan, April 2; Sutherland, April 16, and Barrett, April 30. Fishing days will be the same as those at Lower Otay.

El Capitan should produce some wonderful crappie and bluegill fishing. Plans are being made to provide a healthy plant of bass later in the spring. Picnic area is limited.

Sutherland, first opened to the public in 1955, should be a top bass producer at the opening. Two picnic areas are situated in the vicinity of the lake.

Barrett, off the state highway between Dulzura and Potrero, should be good for bass and crappie. A small picnic area is available.

San Vicente's opening date has not been set. Morena and Upper Otay Lakes will be closed this year and the San Diego Water Co. expects to keep Hodges Lake closed unless a heavy runoff raises the lake level sufficiently for good fishing. Hodges has been closed for several years.

Henshaw Lake, now open the year 'round, is not controlled by San Diego and will be operated as usual by private concession. Latest reports indicate that the level there is raising rapidly.

This column will carry further information on all these lakes as it becomes available next month.

OCEAN FISHING came almost to a standstill last week as inclement weather took over the helms of the fishing boats and kept them inside the harbor. However, Pierpoint sent its fleet out Friday, and despite dirty water, results were amazing.

The half-day boat loaded with barracuda at the Horseshoe Kelp and one all-day boat, running down the coast toward Dana Point, had more than 300 barries, plus plenty of bonito and a small number of yellowtail and white sea bass.

Barracuda are running in Santa Monica Bay and northward around Paradise Cove, all of which indicates a terrific early season for the scooters.

A Schenley Sportsmen's Club record was broken twice recently as the winter derby contestants continued bottom fishing. Paul Firth, Los Angeles, caught a 42-3 halibut to shade Hoyt Holdridge's 41-1, caught in 1957. Then Pearl Bee, of Inglewood, took a 48-8 halibut while fishing aboard the Islander at the Horseshoe Kelp. It was the largest flattie recorded for several years.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — The Wilmington Sportsman's Club will install the following officers at its annual meeting Saturday night: Leonard Ward, president; Paul Liakos, vice president; Dick Roscher, recording secretary; Ray Mayberry, financial secretary; Jack Simpson, treasurer; Kenny Hansen, sergeant-at-arms; Jack Upton, John Ferrara and Orv Wright, directors. Meeting will be held at the American Legion Hall, 1260 Broad Ave., Wilmington.

Going to Crowley Lake for the trout opening May 3? If so, the Los Angeles Recreation and Park Dept. says that the 63 rental motor and rowboats will go up for reservation at 8 a. m. March 17 in Room 755, Los Angeles City Hall. Written applications for 80 season dock berths and 20 buoy moorings will be accepted on the same day. If you have a private boat and wish it inspected for certification at Crowley, you may take it to Cabrillo Beach Saturday, March 29.

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has extended the date for shooting coots in 17 California counties to April 30 because of crop depredations. Counties affected are Butte, Colusa, Fresno, Glenn, Kern, King, Madera, Merced, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Solano, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tulare, Yolo, Yuba and a part of Placer.

10,000 FANS EXPECTED

Gun for 150 MPH at LADS

Whether Long Beach-area fans prefer watching adult drivers gun for records, or pre-teen youngsters wheel quarter-midgets, may be demonstrated this afternoon in a "two-ring" circus of speed at the Lions Associated Drag Strip.

Finals of the two-day, unique Two-Way Record runs of over 300 drag contenders will be held, along with the first sanctioned '1958 youngsters' racing on the new, 1/20th mile oval. Both events will start at noon.

The quarter-midget course is in the midst of the spectator area, but fans still can watch only one thing at a time.

Before dusk, saome 10,000 fans are expected to see the action at the 223rd St. strip just E. of Alameda Ave.

Among youngsters in the meet is Linda Valona, 10, Norwalk miss who won the national quarter-midget title in 1956; the Inglewood twins, Gary and Gordon Jenssen, 14, and the youngest entry, Terry Windust, Buena Park, 6.

Highlighting the drag action will be efforts of 20 drivers to top the "mythical" 150-m.p.h., over the quarter mile route, from a standing start.

Buddy Sampson of Phoenix, national champion, and Mickey Brown, San Fernando, each have topped 147 m.p.h. and are rated real threats. Two others highly-regarded are Jack Chrisman of Compton, with Harry Duncan's new Chrysler job (rated 500 h.p.) and the persistent Escondido top-notcher, Cyr Hopper. The first to do it gets a $400 savings bond.

Jack Schnepf of Owens Creek, Ariz., tooled his stock roadster to a new world acceleration record of 124.82 m.p.h. during qualifying runs of the Two-Way Drag runs and quarter midget race meet at Lions Associated Drag Strip, W. Long Beach.

Cyr Hopper, Escondido, tooled his Chrysler-powered job to best gas-dragster qualifying times, with runs of 140.84 m.p.h. (north-south) and 144.23 (south-north) for a 142.535 m.p.h. average.

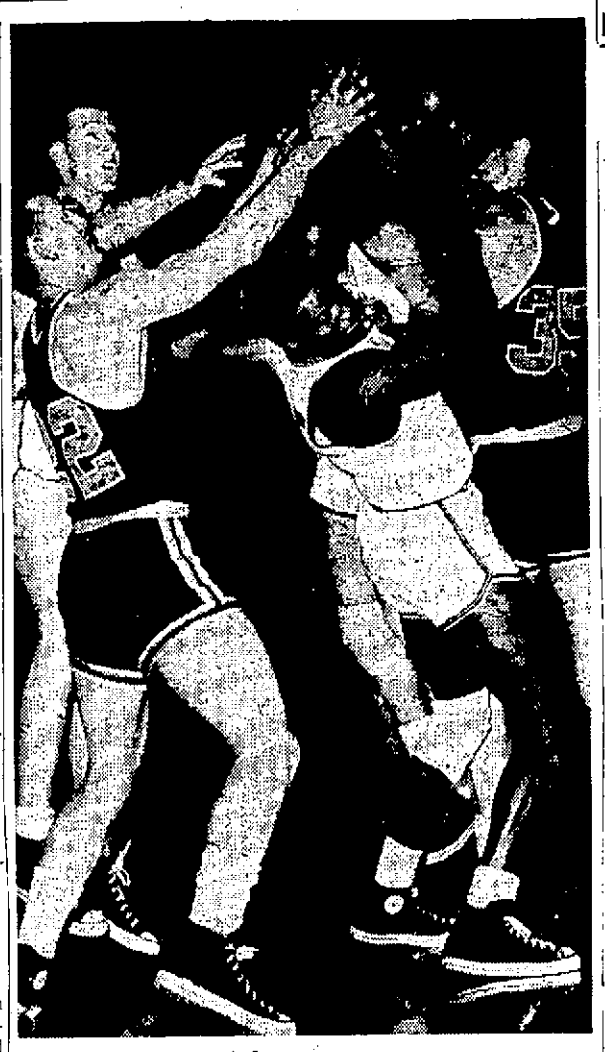

BOB BENEDETTI

Lockyer's Adds Star

Bob Benedetti, all-city Los Angeles cager from San Pedro High, will play for Lockyer's of Long Beach against Pasadena Mirror-Glaze in a Southern Pacific AAU game at Long Beach City College gym Tuesday night.

Benedetti, 6-4 center, is rated one of the best prospects to come from the Harbor area in many years.

Lockyer's will be in action again Friday, meeting Chapman College at the Lakewood High gym. Chapman, with a 17-4 record, has accepted a bid to play in the NCAA small college playoffs.

N.Y. COACH

Howell Inks Giant Pact

NEW YORK (UP)—Jim Lee Howell signed a new three-year contract as head coach of the National Football League's New York Giants Saturday and predicted "things will be mighty interesting" in the Eastern Division in 1958.

Howell, a former Arkansas state senator and Marine lieutenant, has coached the Giants the past four seasons. He replaced Steve Owen in 1954.

Howell is the only coach who has beaten Paul Brown's Cleveland Browns out of the Eastern Division title since 1950.

Youths Smash Two U.S. Swim Records

ALAMEDA (UP) — Fifteen-year-old Sylvia Ruuska of Berkeley, broke the American swim record for the 200-yard individual medley Saturday after learning that she had smashed the world's 1500 meter mark Friday.

Fourteen-year-old Chris Von Saltza of Santa Clara, also set a U. S. record in Saturday's Alameda Naval Air Station Invitational meet when she churned the 200-yard backstroke in 2:28.6. The former standard was 2:32.4.

Bruins, Trojans Toppled

the intermission, 39-30, when Rafer Johnson hit with a 10-foot jump and Roland Underhill tossed in two free throws in the final 26 seconds.

The Bruins extended this last-second half with a spirited attack that found them slashing the Beaver lead to one point at 42-41 on two goals each by Walt Torrence and Jim Halsten, followed by Ben Rogers' jump five minutes into the concluding session.

But Gambee then dropped in a spectacular 20-foot "clutch" shot seconds later and Harmon followed with a driving lay-in . . . and the Beavers were well on their way to a comfortable lead once again. Six minutes after they had seen their lead shrink to one point, they had built their advantage back up to 12 points. They finally gained their 16-point winning margin in the last minute and a half.

Despite the fact the Beavers lost two of their regulars—Ken Nanson and Anderson—on fouls with over six minutes left to play, they had such complete control of the game by that time that they were never in serious trouble.

While Gambee was the key man in the win, he must share much of the credit for the Beavers' superb game with Harmon, who returned to action this weekend after it appeared he was lost for the season three weeks ago when he suffered a shoulder dislocation against Washington. Harmon, the Beaver "quarterback," turned in a tremendous floor game and also contributed 13 points to the cause.

* * * *

COACH JOHN WOODEN, who was disappointed in failing to notch his 200th victory and 100th conference win in 10 years at UCLA, had high praise for the Beavers, declaring "they played considerably better than in our first game when they beat us, 68-61, at Corvallis."

The Beavers' veteran mentor, Slats Gill, said "it was one of the most gratifying wins in my 30 years at Oregon State!"

In the first game, the Trojans blew an eight-point lead in the final eight minutes of play in bowing to a determined and aggressive Stanford crew for their fourth consecutive loss.

The defeat dropped them below the .500 mark in PCC action for the first time this season. SC is now 6-7 while Stanford's win lifted the Indians to a 4-9 record.

AS SO COACH Forest Twogood frantically attempted to find a combination to cope with the quick, speedy Indians, the Trojans blew hot and cold during the wild and woolly battle.

Valdes Off for Cuba; No Hearing on 'Fix'

NEW YORK (UP)—The manager of heavyweight Nino Valdes left Saturday for five days in Cuba without hearing from the New York State Athletic Commission about his charges of fixed-fight in connection with Valdes' loss to Alex Miteff Friday night.

Miteff won a split decision and Bobby Gleason, manager of Valdes, claimed he had information the fight was fixed.

Motorcycles Go Today at L. A. Track

Motorcycles move into Los Angeles Speedway for a 10-event program today. First race is billed for 2:30, with time trials getting under way at 1.

It will be the second race program of the season at the 182nd and Vermont Ave. half-mile strip. Owner Bill McKay has programmed racing every Sunday until the start of after-dark action in the spring.

More than 75 cycle riders are expected to ride in the program, which, in addition to the regular action of the Class C big bikes, will present a special attraction for the Class A short-track cycles.

All My Troubles Behind---Newk

son for concern in this department. Even with all his miseries last year, Newk walked only 33 batters in 199 innings. In '56, when he had his bad year, he issued but 46 free tickets in 219 innings.

As a hitter, however, Newk is anxious for a crack at that leftfield screen. He banged seven homers in 1955 to set a NL record for pitchers in one season.

* * * *

"BEING A GOOD hitter helps the pitcher," Newk, who is frequently used as a pinch batter, says. "Even if you're pitching well, you'd be surprised how many times a manager will take you out if he knows you can't hit. When you hit it helps you stay in the game longer."

Regarding the Dodgers' catching problem, Newcombe feels that Rube Walker will be able to do the job in Roy Campanella's absence.

"Walker has as much experience as Campy. He's a 10-year veteran in this league. The only thing is his (Walker's) hitting. But you can't hit when you don't play. Besides, Walker will have a different outlook this year. He's been told the job is his until someone can take it away from him. That'll mean a lot."

* * * *

WALKER GOT into only 60 games last year, many times as a pinch-hitter. His average was a puny .181. But defensively, there aren't many better receivers in baseball.

Newcombe, who will be 32 in June, is married and the father of two boys and a girl, Gregory, 3; Evit, 2, and Robin, five months.

Evit was named after Dodger vice president Buzzie Bavasi's wife. And her middle name is Yolanda, which is also the first name of Bavasi's sister.

U. S. CHAMPION

Joe Alston of South Pasadena, national badminton singles champion, warms up for Thomas Cup matches against Canada, Friday and Saturday nights at Long Beach City College.

CANADIAN THOMAS CUP TEAM NAMED

Canada's team for the Thomas Cup (Badminton) Tie with the United States, to be played at Long Beach City College gym Friday and Saturday nights, was announced Saturday.

Leading the invaders is colorful David McTaggart, whose court antics and spectacular play wowed fans during the 1955 National Open tournament in Long Beach.

Other members of the Canadian team will be Bill Purcell, Don Smythe and Bev Wescott of Toronto, Jim Carnwath of Ontario and Bert Fergue of Vancouver.

Hulet F. Smith, president of the Pasadena Badminton Club, will serve as referee for the matches.

Par-ticulars

by JERRY WYNN

"Shooting your age" is quite a feat, but going two strokes lower must be a very rare accomplishment. Thus a big cheer today for Homer Martin, 81 years old, who shot a 79 at Lakewood Monday.

The round included bogies on the par-five 14th and 18th, would-be birdie holes for the young-bloods, and a superlative birdie on the tough par-three 17th.

Who says life begins at only 40?

LONG BEACH City College golf team prospects boomed Saturday with the announcement that Pinky Stevenson will be eligible to compete. Stevenson, the 1956 National Junior champion, attended Houston U. part of last semester and there was a question of his eligibility at LBCC.

Along with former Wilson High teammate Verne Burnett and 1957 Viking star Ron Ankrom, Pinky should give City College a powerful 1-2-3 combination. Burnett has been playing exceptionally well and captured the No. 1 spot on the team. Other members are Bill Wills, Harold Harris, Ed Hoeven and Ed Kearns.

The squad is being coached by Buck Andreasen, a country fair swinger himself, until Charlie Church returns from the basketball wars.

* * * *

MEANWHILE, prospects are far from bright at Long Beach State College where athletic director and coach Jack Montgomery will only predict, tongue-in-cheek, that his team "will show up and fight."

Returning lettermen are Lowell Reynolds, Dick Hight, Marce Saucedo and Dale Welin. They will be joined by transfers Don Rowan from SC and Bob Sachse from LBCC. Ron Winterburn will report after basketball season.

Two mighty fine swingers attended school last semester, but one—Bob Terry—transferred to San Jose State—and the other—Keith Lopp—is still there but ineligible. Keith played at SC last year and must wait out a year.

Montgomery sighs when he watches Lopp practice with the team. "It's too bad. He'd be far and away our best player."

WHAT'S HAPPENED to Billy Casper and Gene Littler since Palm Springs when the popular pair of Southern California stars left their home state apparently in shape to conquer other worlds?

Casper was the best pro golfer during January while Littler showed unmistakable signs of snapping a long slump with his fine play and second place finish in the Thunderbird Invitational.

The news vacuum finally sprang a leak this week. Playing in an exhibition at the new Coronado Island course (far from the Texas tour) Monday, Casper shot a 66. Playing in the Houston Open, Littler was five strokes off the pace after 36 holes with rounds of 73-71—144.

Presumably they both missed several tournaments in between Palm Springs and Houston. It's hard to believe that they could have been plain out of the money so often.

STILL ON THE subject of Littler, it's also hard to believe that his name was not among the list of 104 (I received in the mail Saturday) who have been invited to compete in the classic Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., April 3-6.

The Masters qualifies its entries by 12 different categories and it appears that Gene didn't make the grade in any.

Here's the three-time straight champion of the Tournament of Champions, a mighty rugged test of golf, and he gets shunted by the Masters. Oh well, he'll always be welcome in Las Vegas!

ALTHOUGH THE vote was 5-4, the Long Beach City Council was actually unanimous against injuring the Recreation Park nine-hole course when it took action on the Colorado Lagoon proposal at a public hearing Tuesday.

The four councilmen who voted against the measure did so in hope that some of the points in the over-all plan to improve the area could be salvaged without scrapping it in its entirety.

None were in favor of the intrusion into the golf course.

HOLE-IN-ONE honors to Connie Freeze and Raleigh W. Schreck.

Mrs. Freeze, distinguished member of the City Golf Commission and Recreation Park Women's Club, smacked a 4-wood into the 130-yard fifth at Recreation during a club tourney.

Schreck of 132 Orange Ave. also conquered the uphill fifth to lead to a great four-under par 32 front nine and an even par round of 72. In addition to the ace, Schreck birdied the eighth and eagled the ninth. Playing partners were Roy Vellacott, Lawrence Allen and Norm Purcer.

(P. S. Want to make an ace? Join Vellacott's next foursome. This was the second straight week that Roy had played with an acer!)

to lead the league five times in triples.

His home run total (381) is sixth on the all-time major league list although he has never won the home run championship. He holds the major league record for home runs in a doubleheader—five. He has led his club in homers the last 10 years.

He shares with Wagner and Babe Ruth the fact he has paced his league in extra-base hits seven times, and his total of 1,156 long hits is tops for the National League, bettered only by Ruth's 1356 and Gehrig's 1190.

He holds the NL record of 895 consecutive games and holds the record of leading his league in games played five times.

He leads all active players in games, at bat, runs, hits, total bases, doubles, triples and extra-base hits.

NEW YORK—"This is like 1946 . . . backstage at the Roxy," Peter Lind Hayes, the quintuple-threat man, said.

"I don't remember that," I confessed.

"You don't!" Peter was sitting at a table with his overcoat on at the House of Chan. "We were playing the Roxy and doubling into the Copa when you came to interview us. Desi Arnaz was the bandleader at the Copa then . . ."

We both laughed hollowly, and wagged our heads, at how rich Desi's got in 12 years and how rich we haven't got.

But Peter Hayes and Mary Healy have done pretty good at that—they're in TV, radio, night clubs and records—and now I was talking to them about their fifth threat . . . crashing the Broadway stage in Norman Krasna's comedy, "Who Was That Lady I Saw You With?"

ABBE

Except that Mary couldn't make it.

"I'm afraid I have to go for a fitting. And on my dinner hour!" she said.

* * * *

PETER HAD TO GO for a fitting, too, at his tailor's. And he was still sitting in his overcoat, having a scotch-break, to save time. Beside him sat the great actor, Ray Walston, the devil in "Damn Yankees," a confederate in the new show.

"This is a hell of a gamble for us," Peter remarked. "We cancelled—or postponed—five weeks in Las Vegas.

"Guess we're just stage-struck," he admitted. "All this jazz started a couple of years ago. Krasna said he wanted us for a show. I thought it was just conversation.

"We'd read 22 scripts we turned down. When this one arrived, I fell out of bed laughing at it."

Pete said he's hanging out with Walston now and buddying up to him with an ulterior motive.

"I'm protecting myself," he explained. "This guy was the devil in 'Damn Yankees' and I claim he is in this, too. I'm romancing him so he won't run away with the show."

* * * *

"DON'T PRINT THAT!": A world-famed actress wasn't allowed to take part in a small benefit show in her home town because the director didn't think she was right for the role. . . . A top-ranking—and fiery-tempered—singer stopped her cafe act to bawl out the conductor: "Either do it my way or get off the stage!"

ABBE LANE, who plays a stripper in "Oh Captain!" says "I spend more time dressing to go to the theater than I do to go on stage" . . . United Artists is trying to popularize a dance called "The Swivel" . . . Rogers and Hammerstein want Tsuruko Kobayashi Feinberg, for their "Flower Drum Song."

Kim Stanley Turns the Tables on Hollywood

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—Stage star Kim Stanley is finally turning the tables on movieland—with satiric gusto.

For several seasons Miss Stanley has been one of Broadway's outstanding protrayers of emotional fireworks. But the roles that won her prizes always went to somebody else when the plays became films.

Now for her own screen debut, Kim is tossing her high-tension versatility into a portrait of a small-town jade who gets the glamour buildup into a cinema queen of romance.

The script was written by Paddy Chayefsky of "Marty" fame. Entitled "The Goddess," it is scheduled for release next month. Advance reports are the performance may well propel Kim high among next year's Oscar contenders.

MISS STANLEY'S own comment:

"I wanted the part so badly that I even took a screen test, the first that I ever agreed to."

The test, she says, was bad—"but I got the part anyway."

An actress of rare candor (who once called New York critics fatheads), Kim says "I marvel now at the good moments I do have on the screen,

KIM STANLEY
In Movies—At Last

but it would take several films for me to develop peak efficiency."

The movie debut is blonde Kim's first brush with film in any form. In addition to her stage work, she has racked up a number of notable television credits, but the TV performances have always been live. By coincidence she won her first major praise on the same network playhouse that gave Chayefsky his big break.

The fact that others have done her stage plums on film (Marilyn Monroe in "Bus Stop" and Susan Strasberg in "Picnic") apparently doesn't bother the lady from Tularosa, N. M.

She explains:

"I deliberately resisted movie roles before, and this year I turned down several Broadway plays.

"The roles were either repetitious or they were no challenge."

ALWAYS ON THE LOOKOUT for change, one of the enticements of "The Goddess" was that the role requires her to play ages from 15 to 32," the latter being approximately Kim's own unprecisely admitted vintage.

"I do it with mirrors," she blithely remarks.

As a critic of critics, Miss Stanley feels that movieland has one advantage over Broadway.

"The movie critics don't have the same life-and-death power of deciding a show's fate," she says. "People should have a chance to make up their own minds."

Medical Waits Hit

MOSCOW (AP)—The newspaper Medical Worker complains too many ailing Soviet citizens are being cold-shouldered by directors of the excellently equipped state polyclinics. It asked tartly why some patients had to wait in line several hours at medical stations at Novosibirsk, Kaunas and Grozny.

Benefit League Spotlights California Designers

"NICE WORK and we've got it!" declare members of Children's Benefit League as they decorate a money tree to serve as focal point in decor at their annual benefit style show Thursday in Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom. Decorators are (from left) Mmes. Irving D. Koppel, Noble D. Mounts, P. I. Wilsey Jr., and Bernard L. Pelton. Reservations for the noon luncheon and style show are open to the public and may be made with Benefit League members.

Children's Benefit League will turn "Fashion Spotlights of 1958" on California Designers Thusday noon in Grand Ballroom of Lafayette Hotel when it presents its annual style pageant as a benefit for Children's Clinic at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Festivities will begin with luncheon, served at tables transforming the ballroom into a "tropical paradise" through pineapples, leis, shells and coral. Focal point will be a money tree, adorned with dollar bills.

A fast paced commentary by Ethel Joutras, executive director of the Little Couture, will accompany fashions from leading California designers. Seen will be fabulous lace treatments by Peggy Hunt, the patio fashions of Pat Premo, Marjorie Montgomery's "little cottons," swimwear by Rose Marie Reid, beautifully tailored suits from Georgia Bullock and Harrods of California, couture coats that are the trademark of Travilla, and fashions by Marguerite Dexter, Marjorie Michael and other designers. All of the designers showing are available at Long Beach stores.

And the youngsters are going to be pretty upset at being left at home when they hear that "Mom" gets to enjoy Dick Simmons—Television's Sergeant Preston of the Yukon—in his role as master of ceremonies.

Activities don't stop there, either. The day's topper will be awarding of a fabulous all expense week-long trip by air to Bermuda, a portable electric dishwasher, portable sewing machine and numerous other gifts.

RESERVATIONS ARE OPEN to the public and may be made by contacting Mrs. Robert Nichols, 4200 Blackthorne Ave., or Mrs. Laurence Chaffee, 4533 Blackthorne Ave.

Coordinating show arrangements is Mrs. Bruce Michell with Mrs. B. L. Pelton and Mrs. Irving Koppel as her cochairmen. Others on the committee are Mrs. Richard Butzbach, awards; Mrs. W. T. Trumpet Sound Heralds Fair

By ILKA CHASE

Heigh-ho come to the fair! The trumpets are sounding for the Brussels World's Fair which, nearly 10 years in preparation, opens April 17 and runs through October 19. This is Brussel's ninth time as host to the world since the first great fair was held in London's Crystal Palace in 1851. Judging from all one hears and sees it's a great opportunity for mental and visual indigestion as well as fun.

I don't mean that the buildings and displays are ugly—there are some startling and soaring new forms, but there are a lot of them from all over the world vying with each other for originality. The slap-happy tourist is likely to be cross as well as bug-eyed.

* * * *

JUDGING from the photographs, the Japanese and Portuguese buildings look to be two of the best with the French Pavilion the most radical: a glass house based on a crystal form counter, balanced by a huge piercing arrow of steel. Ours is nice I think, round. A sort of giant glass and wire cylinder, very airy in feeling. The Russians' is rectagular and their whole exhibit is costing them fifty-million bucks. We're to run to about 15 million.

The fair will cover nearly 500 acres—take your loafers, kids—and about 48 nations will be represented, including a land unknown to me, Ruanda Urundi. I think it's near the Belgian Congo but don't set out on my say-so without a map.

There's a theme, too. Just as the trylon and perisphere were the theme of the New York World's Fair so Brussels will have the Atomium. Seat belts fastened? The Atomium is a weirdie. A giant structure of nine huge metal balls joined by tubes representing the nine atoms of an elementary crystal of iron, magnified 160 billion times.

* * * *

NO, I DON'T understand it either but that's how the description reads. Anyhow, each ball or sphere is going to be 59 feet in diameter and they are really huge rooms housing nuclear goodies. I take it this means we will see the peaceful use of physics and atoms and rays. Maybe how to broil a steak in a minute and a half, how to stay dry under the rain or possibly how to conjure up a good show on television, mystic and unusual things. The upper balls reached by elevators and escalators inside the metal tubes or passageways are for the bird's-eye view of the fair and the city spreading far below.

* * * *

WHAT DOES sound fun, I think, is the re-creation of Brussels of 1900 with shops and theaters and restaurants of the era as well as a glimpse of the Brussels of 2000.

There are to be two exhibits. Those who arrive on the opening day and up to July 21st will see Fifty Years of Modern Art, Twentieth Century masterpieces from all nations.

From August 8 through October 19, the exhibition will be Man and Art, a panorama of 4000 years. Supposedly the Russians are bringing some of the pictures from the great Hermitage Collection which have so long been barred from view.

* * * *

JUST WHAT we're sending is still under discussion. I've heard talk it might be Time Remembered with Helen Hayes, but that is, after all, a translation from the French. We would do better, I think, to send an authentic native product and this year there are several good ones: "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," "Look Homeward Angel," the rollicking, "Who Was That Lady I Saw You With," the critics' baby, "The Music Man,' 'Sunrise at Campobello" and the distinguished and very American musical, "West Side Story."

You can book reservations in hotel, motel, pension or private houses. There is also to be a trailer camp for—and here reason reels—17,000 people and their cars.

Tell you what: This might be just the year to stay home. Not however, that people will. Americans are still a sturdy race and who wants to miss the biggest show on earth?

Mrs. Clock Entertains for Son's Fiancee

A gracious afternoon tea was given Saturday by Mrs. Henry Clock, 4242 Pine Ave., to honor her future daughter-in-law, Miss Gayle Andrews, who will wed the Clocks' son, Ens. Phil Clock, on April 5.

Asked to assist at the fashionable affair were the bridegroom-elect's grandmother, Mrs. Ralph Clock, as well as Mmes. Eldredge Combs, Lauren Conley, Maurice Hubbell, Manley Natland, Calvert Strong, Emmet Sullivan, Robert Whyte and Mrs. James Plumlee of Sierra Madre, the hostess' sister. Guests were greeted at the door by the Misses Pamela Crouse, Barbara Conley and Cynthia Combs.

For her floral decor Mrs. Clock used exquisite arrangements of yellow tulips and sprayed bouvardia in the entrance hall and living room. In the dining room the refreshment table was covered by a lovely green lace tablecloth in a shade as pale as seamist and centered by an all-white arrangement of tulips, hyacinths and gardenias.

Standing with the lovely honoree as she was introduced to a host of family friends of her fiance's parents was her mother, Mrs. Francis L. Andrews.

PROMISE of whispering tradewinds will lure guests to Lafayette Grand Ballroom Thursday where they will view fashions by leading California designers amid a setting of tropical beauty, and perhaps be recipient of a week in Bermuda! "Could it possibly be me?" wonders Mrs. W. T. Ezell as she studies the poster being held by Mrs. Richard Butzbach (left), and Mrs. Laurence Chaffee.

Alpha Phi Benefit Set at VCC

Long Beach Alumnae of Alpha Phi International Sorority will stage their second annual Table Topic Tea from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday at Virginia Country Club.

The event, which presents tables decorated by approximately 20 other women's organizations, will benefit the Cardiac Aid, national philanthropy of Alpha Phi, and the fund for a future chapter house at Long Beach State College. Miss Karen Olson, member of the chapter at State, will provide piano background music during the party.

Participating organizations are invited to select a theme for their table in one of two categories, children or adults. The tables will be judged by Ann Phillips, nationally known interior decorator, Paul Conners, artist, and Jane Brewer, co-owner of Mary and David's Toy Shop.

The Wild Waves Say

—By IOLA MASTERSON—

WHEN THE FOG is so thick seagulls walk because it's such a lovely day that's foggy, man, foggy! Well, the seagulls were not only walking — they were literally floating in the stuff last Sunday morning, if you'll recall. That was the date, set long in advance, for the first cruise —the grand maiden voyage—of the newly formed Long Beach Marina Yacht Club!

"Man! That's FOG

Did that dismay the yachtsmen? Or the yachtsmen's wives? NO! It did not. But it scared the heck out of their boats. That's why, after groping their way through cotton batting from home to docks, they "cruised" all day without ever leaving their slips! But fun, fun! Every captain and his first mate held open boat aboard their craft and, instead of cruising the inner harbor as planned, they pleased the inner man by eating their way through ships' stores at every stop. Commodore Ed Beebe and wife, Joan, said "welcome aboard" as did Vice Commodore "Mossie" Kent and wife, Marjory, Rae and Stan Bean (he's secretary), Virginia and Jim Wilson, Ray and LaNelle Fosholdt, Ruth and Paul Horst, Eleanor and Art Howard (Art is club treasurer), Folnita and "Rod" Rodriguez, Elizabeth and Morris Barr, and Lucille and Conrad Lucke.

Incidentally, Conrad was "port captain" for the day. In other words, general chairman in charge of travel. And, in this case, that's the under statement of the week.

THE SONG OF the vagabond is a siren's call these days beckoning to Marie and John Ferguson and their youngsters, Carol and Bill. 'Ere long they'll board a plane for New York then by the Cunard's Line, S. S. Saxonia bob across the Atlantic to Le Havre where they'll pick up a car and motor-mosey all over Europe on a three months' junket. They'll save the best till last, visiting John's uncle in Scotland, where John lived as a child. Out of town friends will take advantage of their absence to "vacation" in their house while they're gone.

WEARING THAT noble expression, "The Face of a Taxpayer," we descended on the City Council session last Tuesday afternoon to watch the goings-on. Even although we were there to object with the ardor of an avenging angel to some of City Park Director Don Obert's plans to change the Colorado Lagoon area (thus shrinking the nine hole golf course and re-routing 6th St.) still and all we had hoped to get a word in edgewise in sincere compliment to Don for attempting to do something about beautifying it. Lots of his ideas are darn good ones even although the bulk of the audience were there to ask for modifications.

Among those whose civic concern and healthy interest prompted them to be there were Campbell (Sandy) Lucas, Jim Pino, Col. "Davy" Crockett, Dr. George Verbryck, Betty Dansby, Norman Masterson, Henry Dunn, Bill Harris, good looking former National Publinx golf champion Ted Richards, "Charli" Swanburg and Maxine Rafferty.

It was quite a day to see other well known faces we usually associate with social as well as civic "get up and go." Another group, there on Boys' Club and Day Nursery business with our city fathers, was composed, in part, of Ethel Case, Helen Fielding, Sally Nesmith, Fred Hershorn, Ruth and Maurice Hubbell, Joe Kennick, Mary Simpson, Mildred Draper, Helen Newcomb and Frances and Henry Clock.

WEDNESDAY, the day the weatherman was a louse. What, twixt the wind and the rain, Nellie and Herbert Mayson said, "farewell, old friend," to a venerable acacia which picked itself up by the roots and laid itself right down flat in the yard. Across town Ruth Moore heard a grinding crash and then called Harrison to tell him their big, new TV antenna had just taken a nose dive trying to get in out of the wind.

ALSO ON THE day the rains came put Effort and Duty in caps for Dr. Jack Taylar, Sam Vickers and Gene Kirkpatrick who ignored storm warnings and flooded street corners to slosh across the city for a meeting with Marge Conley, Phylis Ogilby, Eleanor Brown and Betty Wertz at the Children's Dental Health Center to lend their wisdom to a conference on the dental health program for little folks.

CONNOISSEUR of that vintage of automobile known as classic is Dr. Henry Ward. Love of his life (next to Elizabeth, we hasten to add!) is his '41 Chrysler Fleetwood Berlin —last of the American limousines built. No room for the royal coach in the Ward's busy car barn, so it's parked in the garage of kindly neighbor, Mrs. Lena Roy. On the pretense that a little daily walk is "good medicine," the doc strikes out each morning with purposeful stride—and always "happens" to walk right past Mrs. Roy's. That close, might as well check on the Berlin. No exception Wednesday when the skies were at their wettest. That kind of constitutional takes the constitution of a dedicated man, The Berlin? Dry and cozy!

SANDLARKS had a "pat ourselves on the back" party—cocktails, dinner and dancing—at the University Club last Saturday night, finally getting around to celebrating the success of their marvNOELess Christmas Fantasy. What an opportunity to legalize a few back whacks! Chairmanning were Mary Ellen and Robert Peek and Maria and Chuck Stevens.

President Juanita Lake had a good excuse for non-attendance at the slaperoo-jamboree. She's on the high seas! Left a couple of weeks ago aboard a lazy freighter bound for South America where she'll stop off in Rio to visit with former Long Beachers, Vera and Don West. Juanita will fly home, we understand, after an absence of about six weeks.

MOST exciting phone call that ever jangled a bell at Dorothy and Larry Updike's home was the one received Thursday morning when son-in-law, Bernard Cahier, called from New York to say he had just flown in from Paris AND that Joan was about to follow him to the US of A on a polar route flight for a totally unexpected trip home, her first since 1955!

Guess Who!

Bernard, an international journalist for several publications in various countries, was on his way to cover Cuba's grand prix before arriving here about Wednesday. Joan, depending on the ease with which she can make a plane reservation, is expected—tomorrow? Tuesday? Wednesday? Anyhow, they'll both be here a scant two weeks before heading back for their home in France. Are there any dikes up high enough to curb the Updike's high tide of joy?

A SINGLE STAR shone in Harold Maggart's eyes Monday night. The Lone Star! While Lillian listened, Harold and his old friend from Texas, George W. Strake of Houston, mulled over memoirs from their days together deep in the heart of during dinner at Welch's Restaurant. Strake Sr. was here to see his son, Ensign George Strake Jr., whose Navy duty brought him to this port temporarily.

OFF ON A memory making trip went Flo Brooks last Sunday, flying first to Washington, D.C., to visit old friends, Doris and Jette Lee Luellen, on a stateside visit from State Dep't duties in Europe and both, by the way, en route to Rangoon for new career duty there.

As exciting as seeing the Luellens was, the real zing of Flo's trip is being in Atlanta, Ga.—she's there right now—by special invitation of the American Bar Assn. to address wives of delegates at the winter session of the nation's attorneys. Flo will make two major talks; one today and another tomorrow, both as a prelude to possible formation of a national lawyers wives' organization. The honor is well deserved by our Mrs. Brooks because she was the founder and charter president of the Long Beach Lawyers' Wives Club, first such group in the country (begun in 1939). She also was a "tower of strength" when the state group formed in California and served as its president in 1956-57!

THERE SAT Joan Hoskins Wednesday surrounded by the poignant chaos of extra chairs, bridge tables, dishes and food enough for 36 women who were telephoned at the last minute not to come to Dames Club's guest brunch to take place in her home, 211 Termino Ave., that wild and uncooperative day. Keeping the lonely vigil with her and all the food they brought were committee cooks Tam Wall, Carolyn Blakeman, Millie Berry and Camilla La Gregs. Another committee member, Belle Snyder, stayed home in "sweet" dismay, her kitchen full of homemade cakes (she baked 'em all herself) to satisfy the entire crowd that didn't go.

Military Air Pervades Nuptials

Mrs. William F. McCauley

More than 300 persons gathered Feb. 15 in St. Bartholomew's Catholic Church for the military wedding uniting Miss Mary Ann Reiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford M. Reiman, 6500 Bayshore Wk., and Lt. (j.g.) William F. McCauley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCauley of Omaha, Neb.

Following the ceremony read by the Rev. Percy Bell, the couple left the church under an arch of crossed swords. Now honeymooning in Mexico City, they will return this week to the United States to make their home in Coronado where the bridegroom is stationed with the Navy.

Complementing the blond beauty of the bride was her gown of pure silk peau de soie embroidered with lace and a portrait neckline outlined in pearls. The bouffant skirt featured a bustle back which extended to a graceful chapel train. An embroidered lace cap held the soft folds of her fingertip length veil of silk illusion. In her bouquet were white orchids and stephanotis.

IN DRAMATIC contrast to the bride's gown and the white Navy uniforms of the groomsmen were the American Beauty peau de soie gowns of the bridal attendants, Miss Lyndal Holme, maid of honor; and Misses Marianne Ricks, Sue Merritt, Mary Lou LeMaster and Mary Ellen McCauley, sister of the bridegroom, bridesmaids. All carried white carnations placed in heart-shaped frames covered with red tulle.

Michele Reiman, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bridegroom asked Robert E. Hahn to be his best man. Ushers were Lt. Robert Price, Lt. Patrick Flynn, Lt. (j.g.) Paul Jessen and Lt. (j.g.) Frank Warren.

ALLEN CENTER Officers Club was the setting for the reception and luncheon. The bride's mother received in a lace dress of navy blue with electric blue accessories, and the bridegroom's mother greeted guests in mocha beige silk peau de soie.

Mrs. Lyman Krekel had charge of the guest book.

The new Mrs. McCauley was graduated from St. Anthony's High School and from the University of Colorado where she was a Pi Beta Phi. She was a member of the Newman Club and Ski Club on the Colorado campus.

The bridegroom was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Film Tour of Spain Planned at Ebell Club

Spain, a country with a violent personality, a rich flavor and a proud history, will come alive on film for Ebell of Long Beach when Clifford J. Kamen shows his color film Monday afternoon in Ebell auditorium. The powerful story of the nation as it exists today will bring out the great culture of Spain as well as its spectacular scenery, its people and commerce.

From the time he was 13 and received his first movie camera, Kamen has carefully filmed documentations of his journeys.

He studied at UC, Berkeley, and was graduated from Northwestern University. He also studied art at the Chicago Art Institute and the Academy of Fine Arts, with the result that carefully drawn and highly descriptive animated maps add to the enjoyment and understanding of his subjects.

His travels have carried him to 41 foreign countries.

Kamen will be introduced by Mrs. Arthur A. Knoll, program chairman, after a business meeting conducted by Mrs. Arthur F. Bonzer.

Luncheon will be served by members of Group B, Mrs. Grant Maddy, chairman.

Golden Days for WMC

Fifty years ago a meeting of importance in the music life of Long Beach took place —gained in momentum and vitality and finally crystalized into Woman's Music Club.

The Charter Day luncheon Wednesday noon in the Cavalier Room of the Lafayette Hotel will officially celebrate this Golden Anniversary. Mrs. I. B. House will pronounce the invocation.

After-luncheon program will include Mrs. Ethel Willard Putnam, charter member and past president, in a brief review of the purposes and intents of the five founding members. Rachel Morton will present Marrianna Brinkerhoff, contralto soloist, and Betty Kelsey, accompanist.

The meeting is for members only and reservations must be in by Monday noon with Mrs. William H. Sanson, 5510 El Jardin.

Cancel Civic Program Monday

The free community program sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department in Municipal Auditorium has been cancelled for Monday evening. The Marian Rankin Dance Review originally scheduled has been rescheduled to appear on Monday evening, March 3.

Prominent Pair Now at Home

Now at home from a leisurely honeymoon sojourn in Honolulu are prominent newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. David B. Slayton. The bride is the former Mrs. Richard Dilday and the bridegroom, a long time business associate of her late husband, is general business manager for the Dilday family.

The couple exchanged wedding vows in a quiet ceremony at Atlantic Ave. Methodist Church on Dec. 27 with only family members in attendance. They sailed shortly thereafter aboard the Matsonia for Hawaii.

The Slaytons just recently flew home from the islands and are now at home at 648 Terry Lynn Place.

A Tea for Toy and Not Just for Two!

When Cupid goes to work in behalf of an Army man about to leave for overseas duty he really let's fly with his heaviest artillery. That's why Toyelle Blixt became Mrs. James Clinton III, in a romantic, whirlwind wedding before Jim took off for Germany early this year.

Cupid Dept.

Which is why cute "Toy" is the center of post nuptial parties now. There wasn't time enough for all the pre-bridal courtesies. Her new mother-in-law, Margaret Clinton, is having a tea in her honor next Saturday at the home of good friend Etta Meyer, 45 Geneva Wk. Assisting will be Cecile Appleton, Edith Ashbrook, Bernice Sweningsen, Digur Weber, Betty Wentworth and Etta.

Standing with the sparkling bride will be her mother, Beth Blixt, helping explain "Toy's" plans to leave early in April to join her bridegroom overseas. Another party in the bride's future is the one Edith Ashbrook and Bernie Sweningsen have planned for Saturday, March 8; a crystal shower at the University Club.

Lights! Action! A Lavish Premiere!

An exciting kleiglighted, star-studded night is in store for citizens of Long Beach on Tuesday, March 11, when Long Beach Assistance League brings to this city its first full scale, major studio premiere of one of the year's top motion pictures.

Produced by Twentieth Century Fox and slated to be one of its most highly publicized pictures this year, details have just been released. The picture will be, "The Long, Hot Summer," (a story on the film is featured in this week's Life Magazine) featuring Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward (academy award nominee for best actress of 1957 for her role in "Three Faces of Eve"), Anthony Franciosa and starring Orson Welles. The premiere will be held at the Fox West Coast Theater on E. Ocean Blvd. Rarely are such major films premiered outside of Hollywood or New York.

PROCEEDS from the gala affair will go into the Long Beach Girls' Club building fund for the clubhouse which is now under construction at 2640 Santa Fe Ave. The league and its junior auxiliary, Rick Rackers, have been working toward the girls' clubhouse for 13 years and now near fulfillment of their hopes with its opening later this year.

The dramatic and unusual fund raising project is being readied under the direction of Mrs. Dan D. Dunlap, ways and means chairman. Working with her are Mrs. Fred E. Tucker Jr. and Mrs. Marvin Davis, co-chairmen of ticket sales. Mrs. Tucker is in charge of advance ticket sales to groups or individuals and Mrs. Davis is in charge of the special box office at the West Coast which will open Tuesday for the convenience of the general public. Tickets will be sold from 12 noon to 9 p.m. each day. A special telephone is being installed to handle inquiries concerning ticket prices and reservations.

A PATRONS' committee, headed by Mrs. Rufus Davis and Mrs. Burton Chace, is composed of Mmes. Logan Goodknight, Morris Holmquist and James W. Wood. Posters heralding the event have been prepared by talented Mrs. William A. Smith Jr. Mrs. Norris Nesmith is in charge of publicity. Nationwide press, television and newsreel coverage is anticipated through studio and local releases.

Mrs. Kenneth Wing, league president, and Mrs. Ethel Stevenson, Rick Racker president, are working closely with another committee functioning to make the night of March 11 one of the most memorable of the year as a social event as well as from the show business standpoint.

Many gay pre-premiere dinner and cocktail parties are being planned with several already scheduled in private homes, at Virginia Country Club and Victor Hugo Restaurant.

Highlight 'Safety' on Pair of Programs

By ANNE GILCHRIST

Patriotically inspired red, white and blue floral centerpieces graced dinner tables at Victor Hugo's Monday night when Executives' Secretaries paid tribute at their February dinner meeting to America's heroic presidents, Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

Major event of the evening was the presentation by President Margaret Stimson of the group's scholarship awards to Judith Soto and Nancy King to assist them continue their studies at Long Beach City College. Miss Soto, now a fourth semester student, plans to complete her education at Long Beach State College and to enter the teaching profession as an instructor in business curriculum. Miss King, who also plans to attend LBSC, hopes to become an executive secretary.

In order to stimulate enthusiasm for Executives' Secretaries national convention, to take place in Seattle in May, a documentary film on that city was shown. In addition, Dorothy Miller of the public relations staff of Long Beach Police Dept. presented a talk and showed an educational film entitled, "Pedestrian," demonstrating the dangers, do's and don'ts of pedestrian traffic on city streets and highways. The program was arranged by Mary Kay Kelly, chairman.

Altrusa Club

Dr. Charles H. Fabish, first vice president of the Long Beach Safety Council, was guest speaker at the February dinner meeting of Altrusa Club at the Lafayette Hotel. The three big "E's" of safety, he said, are enforcement, engineering and education.

Dr. Fabish described how each is handled. Enforcement agencies are responsible for the first; engineering betterment comes through improved public facilities; and education is handled in schools, churches, industries and homes. He also said that newspapers play an important part in safety by publicizing accident rates and safety measures. Other assistance has come from service clubs, many having made it their business to place placards and other illustrated devices at intersections to warn the public in graphic manner.

Fabish was introduced by Carmel Tyo, Altrusa projects chairman. The program was completed by the appearance of baritone Bernard Tyo who was accompanied by pianist Irene Trepanier. Table decorations were provided by Geraldine Neilson and Mildred Landes.

Quota Club

Braving Wednesday's inclement weather, members of Quota Club journeyed to Los Angeles for the annual district birthday dinner and to honor Wanda Frey Joiner, founder of International Quota. Plans to attend were completed at the last business meeting at the Lafayette Hotel at which time plans were also put underway for a membership drive. The entire club was divided into two teams to complete the drive to be headed by Rita Phipps and Genevieve Parker as captains.

Ives BPW

Members of Margaret Ives Business and Professional Women's Club met at the Lafayette Hotel Monday evening for their February dinner meeting conducted by President Maxine Hill. Dr. Laurel A. Weibel was guest speaker as well as commentator for a film, "The Other City," provided by the American Cancer Society and shown by Mrs. Doris Swenson.

To Sew Tuesday

Sewing group of Long Beach Emblem Club No. 106 will meet Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Homer Evans, 1732 Locust Ave. Frances Evans will be co-hostess.

Cactus Club Entertains

Long Beach Cactus Club was host to South Bay Cactus Club, Orange County Cactus Club and Los Angeles City Cactus Club when members met Feb. 16 in the home of Mrs. Francis Heald, 3252 Studebaker Rd.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Grove Teany of Costa Mesa showed colored slides of their rock gardens with blooming cacti and rare succulents as he spoke on soil mixtures, vitamin feeding and planting methods.

At the business session, president Jack Klenke announced that the club will visit Johnson's Cactus and Water Gardens in Paramount on April 20 and that Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wright, 231 Obispo Ave., will be hosts for the March 16 meeting of the group.

Sister Kenny Auxiliary Affair to Aid Children

Sister Kenny Auxiliary will have a benefit bridge and canasta luncheon party Tuesday at Elks Lodge, 19 Cedar Ave, with proceeds of this event to be allocated to the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation.

The auxiliary, which has always raised funds to fight polio, is now in the process of reorganization due to the effectiveness of the Salk vaccine in checking polio epidemics and because it has realized its current objectives in assisting the Kenny Memorial Hospital. Therefore the school for retarded children at 4519 Stearns St. was selected as recipient of the group's philanthropic assistance at this time.

Mrs. Abraham Green is general chairman of Tuesday's party with Mrs. Roger Condit serving as her co-chairman. Others assisting will be Mmes. Walter D. Brown, Lester Cooper, Thomas Carr, E. H. Bennett, Joseph Keehen, William Kinney, Clifford Johnson, James Harper, A. E. Weiner, Gertrude Winslow and Travis Pate. Mrs. Fred R. Schwarz, auxiliary president, and Mrs. Philip M. Thompson, founder and charter president, will assist in receiving guests.

Following luncheon a brief meeting will take place to poll ideas on the future policies of the organization and allocation of funds derived from benefits scheduled for the remainder of the fiscal year. All members are urged to be present.

Ladies of Elks will convene Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. in the Elks Club for luncheon, followed by bridge and canasta. Mrs. Mildred Schroeder is luncheon hostess.

MOLLY MAYFIELD

Lad Needs Doctor's Help

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have acne very badly. It covers my face and the back of my neck. I'm always embarrassed, and it's very difficult for me to get a date from any of the girls in my high school class.

So I've started going to another part of town where I can get dates. These kids don't have as much money as the kids I go to school with, and neither do their families.

But they're nice to me, and I feel perfectly at home with them. I can have dates over there. I feel important, and that means a lot to me.

My mother (since my father died three years ago) is very much against this. She says that I ought to stay with "our own kind." She insists that my going over there will lead to nothing except trouble. It is true that a couple of my new friends have been in scrapes, but only minor ones.

Do you see anything terrible about what I am doing, Molly? JOHNNY

DEAR JOHNNY:

No, there's actually nothing wrong. But basically your mother is right. It's not natural for a young man arbitrarily to leave the friends he knows and deliberately look for others. Friendships should grow out of normal circumstances.

But let's talk about your acne condition. By all means, ask your mother to take you to the best skin specialist you can find. I am sure that he can give you relief from the acne condition, and that really is the seat of your problem, isn't it? Don't waste a minute in doing this.

Acne is, of course, only one of the steps of growing up. But try to remember that it usually vanishes at 20 or so under normal circumstances and you'll have a whole life ahead of you without it.

M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am confronted with a serious problem. I have a 13-year-old son who wishes to get a tattoo of a dagger on his arm. Do you think he is old enough to get it by himself or do you think either my husband or I should take him to get it?

MRS. R. P.

DEAR MRS. R. P.:

Frankly, I don't think he should get it at all, and as parents you should positively forbid it. After all, he's only 13 and he will have to live with that tattoo a long time.

However, if YOU don't mind, then I think your husband ought to go with him (if he's not tattoo-minded, too).

Days of Forty-Niners

LONG BEACH STATE COLLEGE EVENTS

—by PLACER MINER—

Variety is the theme of this week's tale of happenings at Long Beach State.

First, a bit about scholarship. We heard, via our usual reliable grapevine, that a State coed had received 15 units of A and ½ unit of B for last semester's work. On checking up we learned this was true, and furthermore, over a four-year stretch, this girl had a cumulative grade point average of 3.8 on a 4.0 scale—an achievement which does not happen every day. During the course of her schooling this girl has received only one C, in a physical education course; her ½ unit of B last semester was in phys ed also. Otherwise, her marks were all A's and B's with the accent on the A's.

The talented Forty-Niner, who takes an extremely active part in student body affairs when she is not hitting the books, is Georgette Gunderson, a senior.

Congratulations on your fine marks, Georgette, but a word to the wise seems in order: better quit goofing in those phys ed courses, or you'll find yourself on probation.

NEXT, A BIT OF TRIVIA: We got a kick out of hearing another coed relate how embarrassed her mother was when the daughter discovered she (the mother) had been reading Peyton Place on the sly. This seems to be an example of child psychology with a reverse twist. . . . And still talking about girls (as Ol' Placer Miner mixes business with pleasure)—we never cease to be amused at the pertinacity with which LBSC coeds pursue a man. They go steady, they become pinned, they become engaged—and there is quite a degree of difference in each status. Last week, however, we came across a girl who didn't fit any category we had yet heard of: this one is "kinda engaged." . . . And one last space filler: seen in the cafeteria last Wednesday noon was a Forty-Niner dining on raw coconut and a bouquet of parsley. He banged the coconut against the wall to split it, drank the juice, and shared the meat with his buddies. What remained of the parsley at the end of the meal was placed in a bowl of water and doubtless served as a centerpiece for the next day's meal.

AND FINALLY, a little bit on group activities. Next Thursday noon the College Religious Council presents another in its "This I Believe" series wherein members of the LBSC faculty speak on their personal beliefs and philosophies. Thursday's speaker will be Dr. Henry Zentner with the subject, "A Sociologist Looks at Religion." The place: Classroom 139; the time: 12 noon; the date: Feb. 27.

A few hours later at 3 p.m. in lecture hall 100 nearby, the LBSC Association of Childhood Education Jr., presents Mrs. Irene Schoepfle, consultant in music education, Orange County Schools.

Mrs. Schoepfle will bring children with her to take part in a demonstration which also will involve the audience.

Marlene Young, ACE Jr. prexy, extends a cordial invitation to all students to attend the Thursday meeting. She says it should be of special interest to music majors, student teachers, and prospective teachers of music in elementary schools.

FRIDAY NIGHT Sigma Chi Nu, nurses' group at State, holds its monthly meeting at 8:30 p.m. in the Soroptimist House.

Feature of the evening's program will be an address by Dr. Jack Lieberman, M.D., resident physician at Harbor General Hospital and an expert on cardiac research.

Dr. Lieberman will speak on "Cystic Fibrosis," and he will have a film to illustrate his lecture.

Mrs. Prisca Nelson, Sigma Chi Nu program and social chairman, invites all members and nurses, both on and off campus, to attend.

A short business meeting for SCN members is set for 7:30 prior to the main business of the evening, and refreshments will be served.

Demo Women Slate Meeting

North Long Beach Democratic Women's Study Club will hear Darrell Neighbors discuss the problem of subsidence when they meet Wednesday at 10 a. m. in Houghton Park Clubhouse.

The executive board will host a coffee hour at 9:30 a. m. and invites all members to bring a guest to the meeting. Mrs. Nelson Torpey will preside.

Writers Club to Hear Poet

Frona Lane, president of the California Federation of Chaparral Poets, will speak before Long Beach Writers Club at its all day monthly meeting to be conducted Thursday at Morgan Hall, 835 Locust Ave. Mrs. Don Billings will preside and Mrs. Helen Vind Ervin will present the speaker.

Miss Lane, a teacher of poetry and English in the Los Angeles schools, is the author of several books of poetry and has written for many national magazines and various newspapers. A former pupil of Josephine Dillon she has also been a script writer, drama coach and radio artist.

Readings during the prose session will be given by Mmes. Alma Elliott, Helen Gillum and Lorena Fleissig. The poetry session will be conducted by Miss Olive Breed.

James Brittain

Lauris Jones

'Kiss Me Kate' Adds Two in Directing Posts

James Brittain, a new name to Long Beach dramatic circles, and Lauris Jones, a familiar name to Long Beach, have assumed directorial responsibilities which will result in April in a scintillating production of Cole Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate." The Singers Workshop show will be given April 11-12, 18-19 at Long Beach City College auditorium.

Brittain succeeds Dr. Gerald Daniel, LBCC faculty member who was forced to resign director's duties due to a heavy schedule of educational commitments.

Jones, conductor of the Long Beach Symphony orchestra, will direct the music for the production.

* * * *

OPINION AROUND the MGM lot in Culver City is that Brittain is one of the most outstanding young men now being groomed to become a director and producer. A resident of Manhattan Beach, he has an impressive list of credits that belie his 33 years. His theatrical work in Santa Monica and the South Bay area have earned him superlatives of Los Angeles newspaper critics.

His musical career began at Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham, Ala., where he was associated with the college theater, the Birmingham Conservatory of Music and the Starlight Opera Assn. Coming to California more than 10 years ago, he studied motion picture art direction at Art Center and the California School of Art, and found time to be one of the founders of the South Bay Light Opera Assn. For the past five years he has been an assistant producer at MGM.

Jones has already received musical recognition in Long Beach, having come here several years ago to conduct the Long Beach Symphony. Recently he led the orchestra in two youth concerts here sponsored by the Junior League.

He came to Long Beach from a post as assistant conductor of the Pasadena Symphony Assn. He has studied under Eugene Ormandy, George Szell and Richard Lert.

Youth Band

Boy and girl musicians between the ages of 9 and 18 are being invited to join the Orange County Youth Band which has been organized by Vesey Walker, bandmaster of the Disneyland Band. Rehearsals take place each Monday at 7 p.m. in the Boy Scout-Optimist Clubhouse, 113 W. Chartres, Anaheim.

Art Music Little Theater

Major & Minor Notes

By RACHEL MORTON

There are three outstanding choral conductors in our country today: Fred Waring, Robert Shaw and Roger Wagner and I consider Roger Wagner the greatest of them all. He was the only one from America invited to participate in the Coronation festivities in England a few years ago when Queen Elizabeth was crowned.

Last December I heard his smaller group of 28 singers give a magnificent concert in the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles and recently I heard his choir of 100 voices sing in a performance of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven with electrifying effect. But I never met Roger Wagner until he came to Long Beach a few weeks ago to give a preview talk on a Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra program.

The vitality of the man, his sincerity, his broad knowledge of music, and his fascinating personality intrigued me. So I was very flattered when he invited me to have lunch with him at the Brown Derby in Hollywood to discuss things musical. Later we went to his home.

Roger Wagner and his charming wife have been married 18 years and are the parents of three children; a boy 13, a girl 17 and another daughter 12. They are all gifted musically, but so far not too seriously. They live in a charming house in Hollywood, and under the fine Steinway grand piano lay the pet of the household, a dog named Rusty.

* * * *

ROGER WAGNER is a human dynamo. He had had four hours sleep in two days. At the end of the week he was leaving for a cross-country tour with his smaller group of singers. They will give 50 concerts in 60 days. They travel in a private bus and give concerts every night. And just for good measure, Mr. Wagner was flying to Dallas, Texas, to conduct 1200 voices in a mammoth concert, before starting on the tour!

This man is burning up with a great zeal and love for music. "I want to make Americans music-conscious. Culture is a way of life and we in America do not have that way of life. Our way of life is business, money, automobiles, luxuries. We do not hunger for the cultural things of the spirit," Mr. Wagner said. And he knows whereof he speaks.

* * * *

BORN IN France of a French mother and a father whose family came from Alsace-Lorraine, he came to California as a young boy. But at the age of 17 he went back to France and finished his education at the Sorbonne, meanwhile studying organ with the great French organist, Marcel Dupre.

His ambition was to become a great organist and I think if you would hear him any Sunday at the console of the organ of St. Joseph's or St. Paul's Churches in Los Angeles, you would know he had achieved that ambition.

His father was an organist and Roger sang as a boy soprano. So it all added up when he returned to this country and took over the training of a boys' choir while organist at St. Joseph's Church. So well did he train them that he was asked to present 250 boys on the steps of City Hall in Los Angeles in a program of church music. From this success came his appointment as head of the Los Angeles Bureau of Music, a post he kept for seven years.

* * * *

BUT HE needed wider fields of achievement so he formed "The Roger Wagner Chorale" which has become world famous. He plays on this body of singers as though it were an instrument and no symphony orchestra has more nuance, color or variety of mood. It is really breathtaking to hear them sing.

He spoke affectionately of one of our own Long Beach singers, Marilyn Horne, who started singing with him when she was only 12 years old. Her beautiful voice has carried her to Germany where Mr. Wagner saw her last October.

Roger Wagner demands perfection — and gets it! Often the singers make recordings until 4 o'clock in the morning—going over and over the music until the results are satisfactory. There are 15 recordings already in circulation and seven more are being made.

Mr. Wagner has the honor of being one of the guest conductors of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra next year. If he sometimes seems a severe task master, his warm heart rewards lovingly all the effort made. Because his ideals are so high, the fruits of his labor are grandiose.

Fernandel in Friday Film

"The Sheep Has Five Legs," starring famed French comedian Fernandel, is the ninth of the series of Friday Evening Films to be shown Friday at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Two presentations will be made, starting at 7:40 and 9 p.m. respectively.

The story is a delightful tour-de-force concerning the life of an old French vintner and his quintuplet sons. Fernandel, who assumes a half a dozen roles, is supported by French actors Delmont Defunes, Polette Dubost, Rene Genin and many others.

Tickets, issued on a first-come, first-served basis, are available now at the Museum. There is no charge for admission.

Opera at Home

Complete operas and recitals by opera singers bring hours of musical enjoyment on records. The Long Beach Public Library suggests that these new lps be borrowed from the Main Library for home listening: "Kirsten Flagstad in a Bach and Handel Recital"; "Renata Tebaldi in a Recital of Songs and Arias"; "Tito Gobbi at La Scala"; "Zinka Milanov in Songs of the Ukraine," and Von Karajan conducting one of the best opera recordings of 1957, "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss.

The Theatre Yearly Award Dinner Slated

Second annual awards dinner of The Theater, will take place Wednesday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cavalier Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

Climax of the evening will take place with announcement of awards to those unsung "backstagers" who have outstandingly conducted their time and efforts to the little theater group. Recognition will also be paid to outstanding actors and actresses. Voting will take place during the dinner.

Co-chairmen of the dinner function are Mrs. Harry Finer, 2518 Ostrom Ave., and Mrs. Clifford Medaugh, 743 Ohio Ave. Reservations should be made by March 3. Anyone interested in theater is invited to attend.

Play Opens

"The Cowbird in the $200 Suit," a new play by Russell Burton, opened last week at the Stage Society Theater, 9014 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles.

South Gate Concert

South Gate Concert Orchestra will be heard today at 4 o'clock at South Gate Municipal Auditorium, 4900 Southern Ave. Arthur Babich will be guest conductor and Carla Wittel will be solo pianist.

Something for the Boys

Style Has Arrived in Factory at Last

By TED KREC

The idea for this column was handed to me one night last week when Ol' Ted was asked to commentate a fashion show out at St. Cornelius Church, 3330 Bellflower Blvd.

The show was being staged by Penney's Downtown, 5th St. and Pine Ave., and the first person I saw when I entered the hall was my old friend, portly Jack Greenen, fashion coordinator for Penney's.

"Jack!" I cried, "How nice to see you again!"

"Hello, loudmouth," he growled, "what are YOU doing here?"

"I'm commentating the show tonight," I replied meekly.

"Now I've heard everything—a fat ex-hog caller from New Jersey doing commentary on a fashion show," he grumbled, and for a terrible moment I thought he was going to pack up and go home. However, the show must go on, so Jack stuck with it.

"You know what's the matter with your column?" he said. "All you ever write about is the white-collar man. How about the factory worker — his styles have changed, too. We sell a lot of work clothes at Penney's and you can't tell them from California campus casuals any more."

* * * *

AND HE'S right. There are several reasons for this. First, the vast majority of manufacturing and assembly-line jobs in American factories today are clean jobs, for engineers discovered long ago that a clean plant with good air and lighting is a more efficient one. Second, many grimy jobs have been taken over by machines manipulated from a clean control room or panel. Third, World War II brought many women into the factories, working side by side with the men. Naturally, the boys are going to be neater to please "Rosie, the riveter."

Last but by no means least, men are becoming more aware of dressing right for whatever they're doing. Not always in the best taste, but at least a bit more appropriately.

Add to all this the fact that American workers are the best paid in the world, and you'll see why fashion is moving in on the assembly line.

Work clothes today are a far cry from the selection available when I was a lad on the assembly line. Yes, indeed, Ol' Ted knows what the inside of a factory looks like.

* * * *

ONE PLACE I worked had a terrible time with crane operators. These fellows sat on a metal seat and they had to keep putting new men on the job because the older employes' pants would get so slick, stiff and shiny that the men would keep falling off the seat!

Work clothes today are a combination of the good looks and comfort of sportswear and the rugged fabrics and construction of work garb. Many of the shirts are Ivy style; the trousers are of colorful denim, twill or corduroy. Coats are of whipcord and similar materials.

And you see a lot of men with neckties in factories today; that is, on jobs where it's safe to wear neckties. All in all, the apparel of the workmen has brightened to keep pace with brighter plants.

Chef of the Week

Hoosier No Meat, Potato Man; Fixes Tchakhokbelli

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor.

He's not the athletic type, preferring the role of spectator to participant. Chef of the Week Julian C. Davis prefers old things. He has spent days browsing and exploring nooks and crannies of the old west and mother lode country. Mainly, however, he's manager of the claims and insurance department at Bethlehem Pacific Coast Steel Corp., having joined that company in 1941.

A Hoosier, he was born in Indianapolis. Contrary to precedent, though, he's not a joiner. He attended DePauw University at Greencastle, Ind., pledging Beta Theta Pi.

Before coming to the west coast at the urging of his uncle, Senator Davis of Washington, he had seen much of the country. After extolling the virtues of Florida real estate for a time, he joined the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad as, of all things, the cook.

* * * *

ABOUT THE time he had finally decided that the northwest left him kinda-cold," a fraternity brother sold him on coming to Southern California. He did—he warmed-up—and stayed.

Probably one of the most interesting phases of Davis' career took place in San Francisco when he set-up county procedures for concessionaires at the Golden Gate International Worlds Fair. Not only did he make friends from all parts of the world, he was given mementos from their countries.

Immediate past president of the University Club, he has served on its board of directors five out of the club's nine years. He also holds memberships in the California Self Insurers Assn., and the Casualty Claims Assn. of California. The Beta Theta Pi Alumni addresses him as "Mr. President."

* * * *

VERY EASY going, nice to be around, pleasant, and a wonderful friend . . . to quote his friends . . . he not only dotes on his own little grandson, but on the neighborhood young'uns, as well. From his workshop he has turned out some "quite presentable" productions, and he's equally adept at wood finishing and furniture repair.

Each weekend he goes completely domestic. Loves to do the washing; but he can't iron and simply won't be taught. As for his recipe, he can pronounce it and prepare it, as well. Which is more than this writer can do!

CHICKEN TCHAKHOKBELLI

2 2-lb. chickens (halve each chicken)
½ cup butter
1 onion sliced
½ cup Sherry wine
½ cup tomato juice
1 cup water
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper

Melt butter and fry chicken until light brown. Remove chicken to a baking pan. Fry onion in remaining butter until limp and golden — then pour over chicken. Add remaining ingredients. Bake uncovered in hot oven (400 degrees) for one hour . . . turn at end of first half hour. The juice makes delicious gravy. Good with brown or wild rice.

Junior Player Brings in Slam

EDDIE TAYLOR of Los Angeles, the supposed junior member of the Mathe-Taylor combination that won the open pairs this year, is quite able to hold up his half of the partnership.

In today's hand he took advantage of the information given by a vulnerable overall to wrap up a nice slam contract.

Against a club or heart opening Eddie would have had to go down but no one can criticize West's lead of the diamond nine. Dummy played the jack, East the queen and Ed won with the king. Two trump leads left him in dummy and he led the deuce of diamonds and finessed the eight. That finesse was marked, of course.

The jack of hearts was discarded on the ace of diamonds and the last diamond ruffed in dummy.

Now Ed played the king of hearts from dummy and East was in and dead. He had to lead from his king of clubs or give Ed a ruff and discard.

All credit must go to Ed for his fine play but I must give East a black mark. East might well have pulled himself together and doubled the slam bid.

In that spot the double would definitely ask his partner not to open a diamond and preferably to lead a club (the suit bid by dummy). With either a club or heart lead Ed would have had no play for his contract.

EVERY UNIT FRONTS OCEAN
This drawing of the planned Laguna Royale Apartments shows how each has a beachfront view. Plans call for occupancy of the luxury apartments in the summer of 1959. Cost of the structure will be $3,500,000.

Plan Luxury Own-Your-Owns for South Laguna Beach Area

Construction was started this week on a sample apartment for the Laguna Royal—luxury ocean front "Own Your Own Apartment," at 31400 Pacific Coast Hwy., South Laguna Beach, a residential section, three blocks from the business district. Wm. D. Greschner Co., of Santa Ana, who will build the ocean front apartments, plan occupancy for the summer of 1959. Total construction cost will be $3,500,000.

Among the many features of this luxury apartment, which will be sold as deeded apartment homes with co-op maintenance, are that all apartments face the ocean with all living rooms and bedrooms facing the ocean. There will be nine stories of fire-proof, sound-proof, and earthquake-proof construction. The lower floor and swimming pool will be 50 feet above the ocean, with the top floor 135 feet above the ocean. A glass front elevator will take guests from the top floor to the pool level. An escalator takes guests from the pool level to their own private beach where each family will have their own Cabana. Entrance is at street level with car storage in an underground garage.

* * * *

THERE WILL BE 72 UNITS, including five penthouses with their own roof gardens.

The Wm. D. Greschner Co. real estate division will handle sales and a temporary sales office has been established at 2419 Coast Blvd., South Laguna Beach, in charge of Louis E. Gabel. Prices will range from $28,962 to $71,850 for 1-bedroom and 1 bath, 2 bedrooms and 2 baths, to 3 bedrooms and 3 baths. Pent homes range from $61,443 to $74,850. Co-operative maintenance cost will range from $86 to $182 per month.

REALTY AWARD
Steele & Moss Enterprises, real estate organization, has developed a contest in their sales department. An award will be given each month to the member who totals the highest in dollar volume of sales, listings obtained and attendance at the Board of Realtors Breakfast Club; as well as weekly tours of office listings. The award for the first four-week contest was presented by Harold Steele, right, to Betty Wilkinson. Betty has been very active in civic work, serving in the P-T.A. for six years.

Mortgage Money Is Easing, Says FHA

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON (U.P.)—The head of the Federal Housing Administration says that the January increase in applications for FHA insurance on home mortgages is good news for home buyers.

Commissioner Norman P. Mason told the United Press that the upturn means it is becoming easier to get a home mortgage loan. In contrast to the extreme tightness in the money market a few months ago, he added, "money is now looking for mortgages."

Reports from builders to his office, Mason said, indicate that the softening in the market has also made lenders more willing to write longer term mortgages and to require smaller down payments.

He said in the last two months builders have been paying smaller discounts on money they borrow, still another sign the market is easing.

* * * *

MASON DECLINED to say when the interest rate home buyers pay on mortgages might also come down. Such a decline has been predicted by economists since the Federal Reserve Board reversed its tight money policy in November. But the experts have pointed out that mortgage rates are "sticky" and will be the last interest rates to come down.

Still another sympton of easier borrowing was the recent announcement by the Federal National Mortage Assn. that it is increasing its buying price on mortgages it buys from initial lenders in the "secondary" market.

In a report to President Eisenhower, Mason disclosed that January applications for FHA insurance numbered 47,600, nearly 65 per cent more than in January 1957.

* * * *

ADJUSTED FOR NORMAL seasonal variation, January applications covering new homes topped the December total by 14 per cent. For existing homes, the gain was more than 25 per cent.

Applications for insurance of mortgages on large-scale rental and cooperative housing projects covered a total of 5,300 dwelling units, compared with 3,100 in December and 4,200 a year ago.

Mason said that nearly all the applications were for houses in the moderate price range—below $15,000 for single-family houses.

In another report, Mason disclosed that "delinquencies on insured mortgages are at an all-time low." He said that "only four out of every 1,000 FHA home buyers are even in technical default, which means being 30 days overdue on their mortgage payment."

Birthday of Escrow Firm

First Escrow and Title Co., 330 East 4th St., celebrated its 10th birthday last week.

The company was incorporated Feb. 16, 1948, at which time there was only one employe. In the past 10 years they outgrew their original office and in 1955 purchased their own building and now have a staff of 10 of which Bernice M. Powers is the remaining original officer of the corporation, now being the president.

The company also has an office at 9828 East Flower St., Bellflower, to serve the customers in that area, in which there are three employees. The climax to their birthday week was a dinner party held in the Red Velvet Room at the Lafayette Hotel, Thursday night for employes and officers.

"It has been a pleasure to serve our city and render escrow service to our many patrons and friends," said Bernice Powers, "and we were pleased on having our old friends and customers dropping in to see us through our Birthday Week."

More Building but Value Less

Western light construction started 1958 on a slight upturn with small gains in dwelling unit construction and in number of total permits. Valuation of total light construction in January, however, was down from January of 1957. These observations are made from the Statistical Survey compiled by "Western Building," light construction journal of the West.

Total building permits are up 1.7%, valuation is down 4.4%. Dwelling units permits are up .6%, valuation is up .8%.

The survey's study of building permit figures from 342 areas for total permits and 297 areas for dwelling units shows the following comparisons for January 1958 and 1957 for identical areas:

Total permits of 40,296 in January 1958, compared to 39,636 a year ago, and a valuation of $288,432,908 compared to $301,818,261 a year ago; dwelling units totaling 14,790 compared to 14,692 a year ago, and valuation of $148,237,568 compared to $147,017,130 a year ago.

E. W. METTERS
Transferred Back Here

To U.S. Steel Position Here

Transfer of Edward W. Metters, district representative of U. S. Steel's Oil Well Supply Division, from Castaic Junction, to Long Beach, was announced by D. S. Grubbs, California area manager.

Metters was employed by "Oilwell" in 1950 at Los Angeles and was transferred in 1951 to Long Beach. In 1952 he was transferred to Castaic Junction and was appointed store manager at this location in 1954. The following year he was appointed district representative at Castaic Junction.

A native of California, Metters served in the U. S. Army during World War II.

Shattuck to Speak

Charles B. Shattuck, past president of both the state and national realty associations, will be the speaker at the Tuesday morning "Early Bird" breakfast of the Long Beach Board of Realtors, Larry Miller, president, announced. Shattuck was obtained by J. C. Hofman Sr., program chairman for the month.

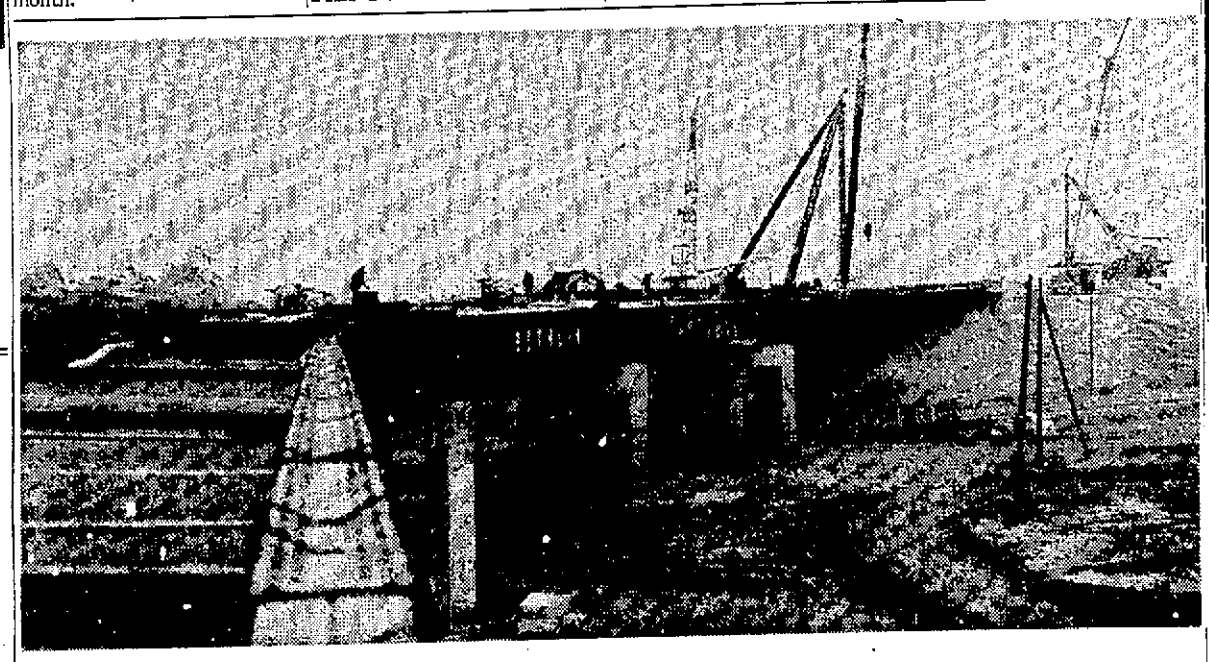

Shattuck, a native of Los Angeles, has been in the real estate business since 1919, engaged in selling, leasing, financing, managing, developing and appraising investments. He is sole owner of the Shattuck Co., Realtors and appraisers.

To Build Big Hilton Motel

A Long Beach architectural firm has been commissioned to design a large, ultra-modern motor hotel in downtown San Antonio and a Long Beach man will be general supervisor of the construction.

Built by the Hilton Hotels Corp., it will be known as the Hilton Inn and will have 50 units, with total cost over $500,000.

Construction will be under the general supervision of J. E. Simkins of Long Beach who is building consultant for the Hilton Corp. and the local architectural firm of Killingsworth, Brady and Smith is designing the motel.

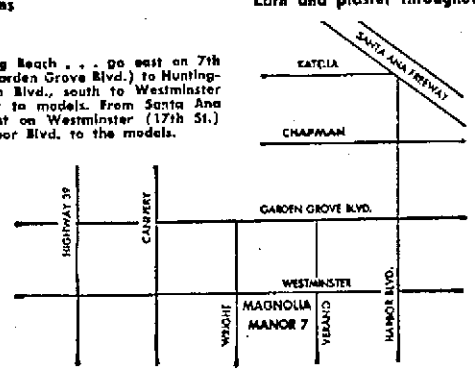

BRIDGE APPROACHES NOW IN PLACE
With the big new Ninth St. bridge spanning the Los Angeles River scheduled for completion early in 1959, the various approaches to the eight-lane span are rapidly taking form. Most of the steel for the approaches is in place, as may be seen here. When completed, the big span will speed traffic into the downtown area with lanes from the Long Beach Freeway entering the downtown area via Fourth St. and Sixth St. while traffic from the downtown onto the freeway will use Fifth St. and Seventh St. The $8,200,000 structure is designed so it crosses the river on a "skewed" pattern, starting on Ninth St. on the west side and ending much further down river on the east side. This is to speed traffic instead of having a sharp turn.

Grand opening of "The Californian" and "The Villager," furnished model residences at Park Village Homes, which last week attracted large crowds and heavy sales, will be continued today, it was reported by spokesmen for Pierce and Armour, builders and developers, and the McCarthy Co., sales agents for the new Anaheim community.

Officials said background sales and grand opening results among those visiting the homes at Crescent and La Reina St., just west of Magnolia Ave., Anaheim, daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, reflected a keen interest in the Park Village Homes' unique trade-in plan.

"Park Village Homes," an official said, "is attracting many families which have outgrown earlier dwellings. They want to trade in such properties, usually 2-bedroom, single-bath, one-car-garage homes, on one of our large 3 or 4-bedroom, 2-full-bath residences."

Lantz recently assumed the duties performed by W. C. Johnson, now on an extended leave of absence.

BOAT PORT INCLUDED

This model of one of the Marina Bay Homes has a boat port for storage of the family small boat. Located near the Marina this boat port home is one of the favorite models of the development.

Marina Bay Homes Sales Are Soaring

Jim Young, vice-president of Brighton-Bilt Homes, announced that sales have reached over $700,000 at this beach-area's newest development, Marina Bay.

The enthusiasm for the Seal Beach Development will be shared by all home buyers as they inspect its many features, salesmen declare. Located in the Long Beach and Los Altos areas it has easy access to the many exciting recreational areas that bound on the Southern California coastline.

The nearly $14,000,000 Yacht Basin, bathing beaches and the Long Beach Marina contribute to the extras that the Marina Bay Home buyer will find when he inspects these medium priced 3-bedroom homes. Proximity to the huge enployment area, walking distance to schools and a proposed shopping center were other factors noted by the real-estate editors.

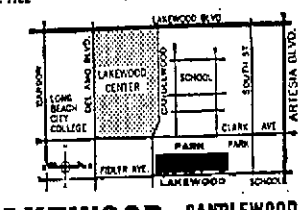

Another point of interest was noted by Young when he stated that this will be the last of GI approved housing developments available in the Marina Bay Area. "Bonafide GI terms are available. Veterans may qualify for only $440 down payment plus costs and impounds with 30-year terms and only 4½ per cent interest, plus excellent non-veteran terms available." Marina Bay Homes may be reached by driving two miles south of Long Beach on Pacific Coast Hwy. and following signs to furnished model homes.

Gienapp Directs Electronic Process for Bank of America

A dozen years ago Melvin M. Gienapp, 3765 Weston Pl., Long Beach, was an Air Force officer in central China, controlling fighter aircraft by radar scope. Today he is a new assistant vice president in Bank of American heading the changeover from manual to electronic processing loan accounts.

His promotion from assistant cashier was announced by Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the board of directors. He is in charge of a staff of 120 people of the systems end equipment research department, Los Angeles, for the bank's Southern California division.

The new equipment is already handling electronically the accounting of real estate and Timeplan loans for more than 100 branches in the Southland.

"We're taking the routine work out of banking as fast as possible," said Gienapp, "reducing the great load of paper work, giving better service, and making interior bank jobs more interesting."

He has been with the bank since 1937. His first job was as a batch clerk at Long Beach Main Office. He has been an officer since he returned from his second tour of military duty in 1952. In 1955 he was a project leader in installation and conversion to computers at San Francisco data processing center, and has been in Los Angeles central office for the last 15 months.

Stannard Gets Aetna Promotion

Appointment of William B. Stannard Jr. as supervisor at the Long Beach General Agency of the Aetna Life Insurance Co. has been announced by S. Rush Coffin, general agent.

W. B. STANNARD

A Navy veteran, Stannard was graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles and has been associated with the Aetna Life since 1956. He is chairman of the business practices committee of the Long Beach Underwriters Assn., a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the American Handball Assn.

Dirty Filter on Furnace Blocks Heat

If your forced warm air furnace is working overtime, but your house is cold, you'd better check the filters in your heating unit.

Filters which screen dust and impurities from circulated air become clogged if not changed periodically, making it difficult for warm air to get through.

Heating engineers estimate that only 25 to 40 per cent of owners of forced warm air furnaces change filters at the recommended rate of twice during the heating season. Others may not change them for two or three years and many do not realize they have filters in the furnace until a repair man is called to determine why the house is cold when the unit seems to be giving its all.

For proper maintenance of the forced warm air furnace, the blower should be oiled before and after heating season and filters should be changed at least twice, in normal conditions.

In new housing tracts, where lawns are fully developed, there is an excessive amount of dust picked up through the intake, usually beneath the house. Furnace men advise checking the filter after 3 months of use in such instances. The blower is impeded if there is a heavy concentration of dust and dirt particles and even pollen in the screen.

LEASES ARE SIGNED

Orange County Plaza Center Will Have Two Supermarkets

The layout for Orange County Plaza at Brookhurst and Chapman Aves., Garden Grove, has been revised to include two supermarkets, Thriftimark and Safeway, which makes Orange County Plaza the only shopping center in the county with two supermarkets. The approval of all tenants of the new layout now allows the schedule of construction to begin in 120 days.

The decision of Safeway Stores to give up their location across the street and join the Orange County Plaza necessitated a new layout for the center. The new section will include 35 acres, with 40 stores and parking space for 3000 cars. Plans are being drawn by Jacobson, Coppedge & Huxley of Los Angeles, architects, and will total 275,000 square feet of building area. The total investment overall of tenants and landlords is approximately $5 million. The first section of the center, totaling 10 acres, has been in operation for more than a year.

• • • •

DONALD SHANEDLING, who is known as "America's No. 1 shopping center promoter," is president of the center. Henry Shanedling Sons Corp. recently purchased one-half interest in the center, and joins Bill W. Tietz and Harry S. Rinker, president and secretary-treasurer of Tietz Construction Co., in the development.

Shanedling is former president and chairman of the board of American Shopping Centers, Minneapolis, a nation-wide chain of shopping centers. He recently moved to Beverly Hills to become active head of new Orange County Plaza Center.

Tenants of the new section include J. C. Penney, 65,000 sq. ft.; Safeway, 22,500 sq. ft.; W. T. Grant, 28,000 sq. ft.; Woolworth, 14,000 sq. ft.; Thrifty Drug, 18,000 sq. ft.; Hartfield's, 10,000 sq. ft.; Bank of America, 9,000 sq. ft.; Rankins Dept. Store, 28,000 sq. ft.

Also included are Western Auto, Gallenkamp Shoes, Thom McAn, Leed's Shoes, Lawson Jewelers, Anita Shops, Brownie's Toys, Copper Penny Restaurant, Sylvia's Women's Store, Helen Graco Candles, Jay Cleaners, Optometrists, Jade Barber and Beauty and Woody's Children's Bootery.

The Shanedling firm has developed 18 shopping centers throughout the United States. Original leasing of the Shopping Center was performed by Lionel Hayes Uhlmann, Jr., Henry Richman of the Shanedling firm in now leasing consultant.

Clock Homes Draw Many to La Mirada

The new Clock Homes unit is comprised of 3 and 4-bedroom homes planned in a suburban theme. Unusual interior appointments include built-in bookcases and shelves, hardwood paneling, indirect lighting, and combination fireplace and barbeque.

• • • •

FOR THOSE who are recreation minded, a new golf course and the Clock Country Club are a part of this community. Family needs for shopping facilities, schools, and churches are met within a few blocks of the development.

Floor plans include the convenience of a family room and 2 bathroms. The open planning of these homes provides for spacious living area for the family gathering or for entertaining.

Full price of a Clock Home is from $17,500 to $18,650. Down payment for non-veterans is only 10 per cent. Monthly payments are from $92.90, including principal and interest.

• • • •

To see the models, from Long Beach take Atlantic Blvd. or Lakewood Blvd. to Rosecrans Ave. Turn east on Rosecrans past Luitweiler Rd. (beyond Santa Ana Freeway) to Jalon Rd. Then turn left to development.

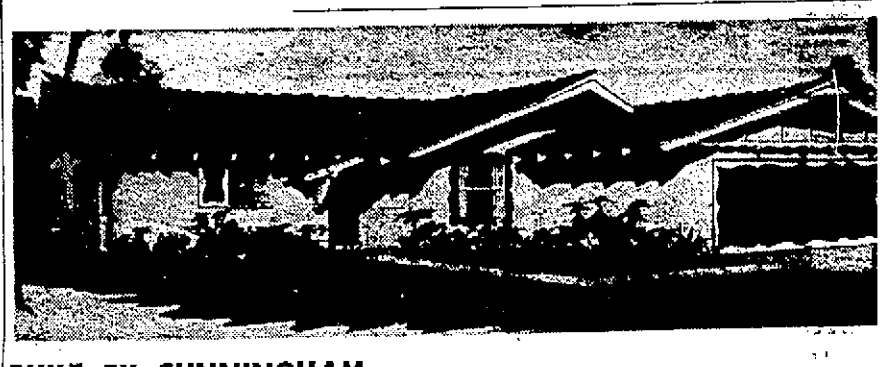

Covered Parking

Sheltered car parking for 150 vehicles will be offered at the large building at 150 American Ave., recently vacated when Freeman-McKenzie Ford Co. moved closer to Auto Row.

Cecil Northrup announced the building is being converted into public parking.

HERE'S CLOCK HOME
Clock Homes in La Mirada report large crowds visiting furnished display home. Three and four-bedroom homes with family room and two baths are being shown.

BUILT BY CUNNINGHAM
Stratford Villa, the 23rd community developed by Cunningham Co., in this area, is opening and offering homes such as this, priced at $13,100. These homes are in Anaheim.

Cunningham Opens New Stratford Unit

Opening of Stratford Villa, 3 and 4-bedroom, two-bath homes at Walnut and Ball Rd. in Anaheim will mark the opening of the 23rd community developed by Cunningham Co. in Southern California since 1947.

The quality building evident in previous Cunningham Co. homes will again be available to prospective homeowners, a spokesman noted, with the moderate price of the superior homes expected to be a strong sales factor.

According to Frank Hart, sales manager of Walker & Lee, Inc., sales agents, the homes are available for $690 down plus small closing costs. The three-bedroom, two-bath homes are priced at $12,550, while the larger dwellings, with four bedrooms and two baths, are priced at $13,100.

AMONG THE FEATURES of the homes are rich, natural finish birch cabinets with raised panels, garbage disposals, spacious dinette areas in kitchens and genuine self-edged Formica work tops to give beauty and durability to kitchen counters.

Circular floor plans allow privacy throughout the home and prevent the use of the living room as thoroughfare, it was noted. Thermostatically controlled forced air heating, view windows in living rooms overlooking patio areas, American Standard fixtures, Provincial architecture and stall showers in baths adjacent to master bedrooms are more features.

Genuine lath and plaster, extra ample closets and cabinets throughout, oversize two-car garages spacious enough for work-shop and hobby devotees, dust-free slab doors and concrete drives and walks are more construction features of the homes which have sidewalks and street lights already installed.

Well located near new churches and schools, shopping centers and major transportation, Stratford Villa is also close to Disneyland, beaches, resorts and golf courses. From Long Beach, visitors drive out Carson (Lincoln) to Manchester, right on Manchester to Walnut and continue to models.

Two Join Staff of J. R. Bernhardt

James R. Bernhardt, Realtor with offices at 495 W. Willow St., announced the association with him of Ward Thompson and Merle Smith. Thompson, a resident here since 1940 and past president of the Mounted Police, will specialize in homes and income property. Smith will specialize in motels and trailer parks.

Only $295 Down for Clifwood

Non-veteran as well as veteran may take advantage of the low terms offered on the large Clifwood Park homes in Anaheim.

The 4-bedroom or 3-bedroom and den home may be purchased for only $295 down with no other costs.

Just minutes away from such popular recreation areas as fine beaches, Knott's Berry Farm and Disneyland, Clifwood Park is also conveniently located close to shopping areas.

The Broadway Shopping Center is nearby, as are shopping centers of Anaheim, Garden Grove, Lakewood and Santa Ana.

• • • •

CLIFWOOD PARK homes have been equipped with natural gas.

The homes are completely weatherproofed, and features include service areas, Rusco steel sashes, extra large showers, dining areas, Insinkerator disposal, Holly heat, Formica full-formed drainboards, abundant closet space, sliding wardrobe doors, full two-car garage, painted walls, double sliding glass doors, and giant beechwood chopping block.

Clifwood Park is located on Katella Ave., just off Grand Ave. and the Santa Ana Freeway.

STATE INSURANCE RULES TOLD

Here's How System Works to Aid Jobless

Failure to understand the provisions of the California Unemployment Insurance Code causes most of the beefs regarding claims for unemployment insurance payments.

That's on the authority of George Toll, manager of the Long Beach office of the California Department of Employment, who adds:

"Claimants rarely complain about the waiting in line. Average waiting time: 30 minutes.

"Most of the trouble arises from a lack of understanding of the law," he said. "We have to follow the rules established for us."

* * * *

SO IF YOU'RE unemployed and want to draw insurance, here's the picture:

Employers pay all the cost of unemployment insurance through a payroll tax.

Payments to the jobless are not made on the basis of need. The program adheres to insurance principles.

Payments range from $10 to $40 a week. They can be paid up to a maximum of 26 weeks.

A claim for unemployment insurance is not valid if the worker's total "base period" wages were less than $600.

The base period for claims filed in February, March and April is a 12-month period beginning Oct. 1, 1956, and ending Sept. 30, 1957.

Earnings during the base period determine whether the applicant may qualify for unemployment insurance, and if so, the amount.

* * * *

FIRST PAYMENT to eligible workers usually is made within two to three weeks. The first week after the claim is filed is called the "waiting period" and benefits are not payable for this period.

If the claimant meets all eligibility requirements he usually can be paid for one week on his first regular report day after the second week has passed.

Claimants must report each week to receive their payment unless they have returned to work. Persons reporting to file continued claims are assigned a set day and hour for appearing each week in order to spread the work load of the office. The day is decided by the last four digits of the claimant's social security account number. The time of day is determined by the last two digits.

The claimant may be excused from reporting at the appointed hour and day whenever the appointment time interferes with the hour for reporting to a union for dispatch or when it interferes with a job-interview appo' ---nt.

* * * *

A CLAIMANT MAY EARN up to $3.99 without deduction from his weekly benefit amount. However, he must report any earnings, no matter how small.

Eligibility requirements include unemployment, availability for work, willingness to take a suitable job if it is offered. The applicant must "be doing everything he can to find work."

Eligibility to receive benefits is examined closely whenever the worker:

1. Quit his job without good cause.
2. Was discharged from his last job because of misconduct connected with his work.
3. Left his work to be married—or because of other family or domestic reasons—unless he is the sole or major support of his family.
4. Left his work because of a trade dispute or strike.
5. Refuses to take suitable work.
6. Fails to apply for a job when referred by the Department of Employment.
7. Fails to do his best to find a job.
8. Makes a false statement or withholds information to obtain benefits.

* * * *

WHAT ABOUT the "voluntary quit"?

The individual is disqualified for unemployment benefits if he left his most recent work voluntarily without good cause.

The period of disqualification in such cases is five weeks. It is figured on the date of registration with the department. So claimants should register immediately; otherwise they will have to wait another five weeks before drawing benefits.

Quitting a job in anticipation of a general layoff probably will result in disqualification.

Leaving a job for health reasons ordinarily will not disqualify an applicant if he can show he was advised by a physician that the work was hurting him and that there was no other job for him with that employer which would not be harmful.

An employe who quits his job to protect his record ("quit or be fired") is considered to have been discharged. His eligibility for insurance would depend on whether he was forced out of employment for "misconduct."

* * * *

THE PERIOD of disqualification because of misconduct is the same as that for a voluntary quit: five weeks. The code defines misconduct as a deliberate violation or disregard of the standard of conduct which an employer has the right to expect from his employes or carelessness or negligence so great or so often that it would be reasonable to imply that it was either intentional or in complete disregard of the employer's interest.

Misconduct can include repeated tardiness, failure to observe safety regulations, unexcused absences, gross carelessness in the performance of duties, refusal to sign a loyalty oath, and arguing with customers, supervisors and fellow employes.

QUITTING A JOB to go to work for one's self is not considered a compelling reason for voluntarily leaving employment. A worker who does so and then re-enters the labor market would be subject to a disqualification for five weeks.

The employment office may possibly disqualify a claimant who refuses to take a job in a related field after unsuccessful attempts have been made to place him in a particular skill.

The applicant for unemployment insurance benefits first goes to the information window of the nearest local office of the Department of Employment. There he is handed a set of forms to fill out and an appointment time.

A pamphlet outlining details of the unemployment insurance program may be obtained by writing the Department of Employment, 1313 Pine Ave.

Watch in Tire Still Running

MONON, Ind. (AP) — Garage mechanic Mike Stiller found a wrist watch inside an automobile tire he was repairing and showed it to Bernie McCombs, a competitor.

McCombs identified the timepiece as his and said he lost it while repairing the same tire several weeks before. The self-winding watch, still running, had traveled some 700 miles inside the tire.

NEXT WEEK

Soundly thrashed in the Davis Cup finals for several years running, America is pinning her hopes for recovery and retention of the cup on its youngsters. If two Long Beach teeners continue to improve as they have during the past year, it's entirely possible that one of them will one day be considered for the Junior Davis team and the other for the women's Wightman team. Tedd Thomey tells you about their talents next week in an engaging story titled "Long Beach's Two Tennis Tigers."

Two-Ring Circus on Wheels

By Barney Newfield

IF YOU happen to be cruising your family "ominous-bus" around 223rd St. near Alameda Ave., between noon and dusk today and run into the LADS, you'll realize the title of this piece could be somewhat misleading.

LADS of the Lions has naught whatsoever to do with lion cubs.

This afternoon the LADS of the Lions presents, as climax of a two-day affair, an event which is the culmination of two years of planning and, really, two events in one:

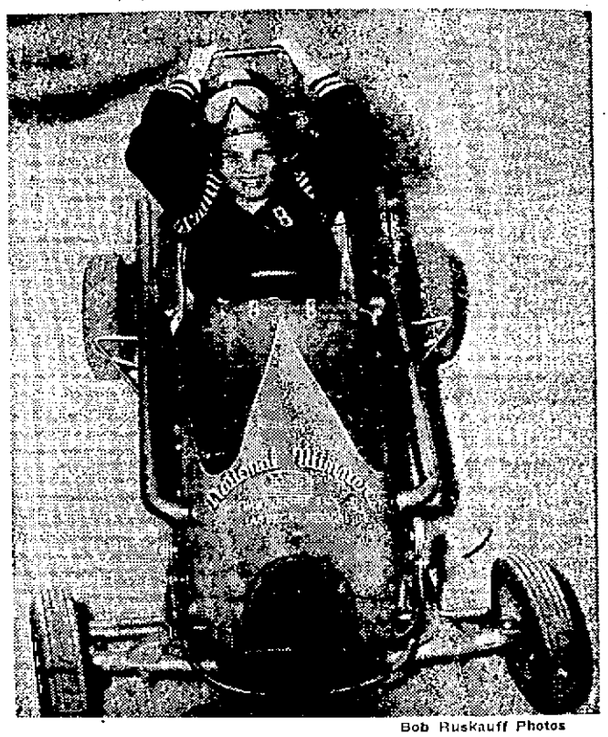

(1) Finals of the first annual Two-Way Record Runs Drag Meet and (2), on a brand-new 1/20th-mile oval, banked course, the first of the official 1958 Quarter-Midget National Circuit Championships with some 50 youngsters competing.

Regular two-ring circus, as it has been billed.

SO THEN, LADS is nothing less than Lions Associated Drag Strip. But it is more. In its own way, LADS is a continuing saga of community achievement.

About four years ago, when the "hot-rodders-for-hell" epidemic was creating headlines

100 Billion Stars

By Clarence Bernard Propes

"IF YOU WANT to get rich," said an amateur astronomer, "find a simple way to make a good telescope mirror. Load a warehouse and then wait for man to hit the moon. It will be Christmas every day."

Tom Cave, owner of an optical company at 4137 E. Anaheim St., is reconciled to an empty warehouse because, as a manufacturer of astronomical mirrors, he knows it is extremely unlikely that anyone is likely to find a fast way to polish mirrors to the 20-millionth of an inch he requires.

Mention of a Cave reflector and telescope to an amateur astronomer is like mentioning Mansfield's bust measurement to a feature editor. Eyes glaze and they speak in hushed tones. This respect extends to professional astronomers as well. The eminent star-gazer, Dr. Dinsmore Alter, head of Griffith Observatory on Mt. Wilson, is as enthusiastic as the rankest amateur.

"He probably makes the best amateur instrument in the country. I always recommend him," said Dr. Alter.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS and professional as well as amateur astronomers use Cave telescopes. Cave's work has gone to every continent except Europe and it isn't unlikely that he will soon have customers there since his prestige is growing.

An astronomical telescope is essentially a pipe with a concave mirror in its base. An eyepiece allows the observer to peer at the image in the mirror.

The mirror is the heart of the telescope. Its precise shape gathers and concentrates the light, and the smallest variation is likely to throw the image of a star a few million miles out of position.

THE PRELIMINARY grinding gives a finish that would delight a diamond cutter but it is too crude to the astronomer. The mirror then requires the final polishing—the most important and exacting step of the whole process.

"IT TAKES TALENT as well as a rare skill," said Cave. "I could probably make a production line of the preliminary grinding but not the final finishing.

Chief Optician Alika Herring, of South Gate, has the job of bringing the surface as close to perfection as possible.

Said Herring, "Sometimes I can do a mirror in an hour or it may take all day. There is no way to tell."

His tools are simple but the work is time-consuming and precise.

Cave, who lives at 3764 Charlemagne Ave., has had a lifelong interest in astronomy and astronomical telescopes. Five years ago he decided he could build a fine telescope for less than other makers were charging. He has succeeded in about halving the price and still make a respectable profit. Today he has a force of four technicians and orders waiting to be filled.

HE PRODUCES ABOUT 18 telescopes a month. They have 6 to 12-inch mirrors. Part of his work is refinishing do-it-yourself mirrors. They are from some of the world's 200,000 or 300,000 amateur astronomers. Many of them have made their own reflectors. According to Cave, about 2 per cent of these mirrors are excellent while the others are of dubious value. He can speak with authority for he receives do-it-yourself reflectors from all over the world.

A man of infinite accuracy in speech as well as work, Cave cautiously admits that rockets and satellites might be influencing the astronomical telescope business. He prefers to think of astronomy as a slowly developing interest.

OTHER ASTRONOMERS DISAGREE. Said one: "Once a person starts taking thoughtful looks at the heavens, he's hooked."

He explained that there are at least 100 billion stars in our own galaxy which is a mere dust mote in space. So vast is this space that it is measured in light years or the distance light travels in one year at the rate of 186 thousand miles a second.

"Look up at a star," said the astronomer. "It is very likely you are looking at something that happened a few hundred or even thousand years ago. Star gazing is always new and it can make a philosopher out of anybody."

"I didn't get in this business to get rich," said Cave. "I'm doing exactly the work I want to do."

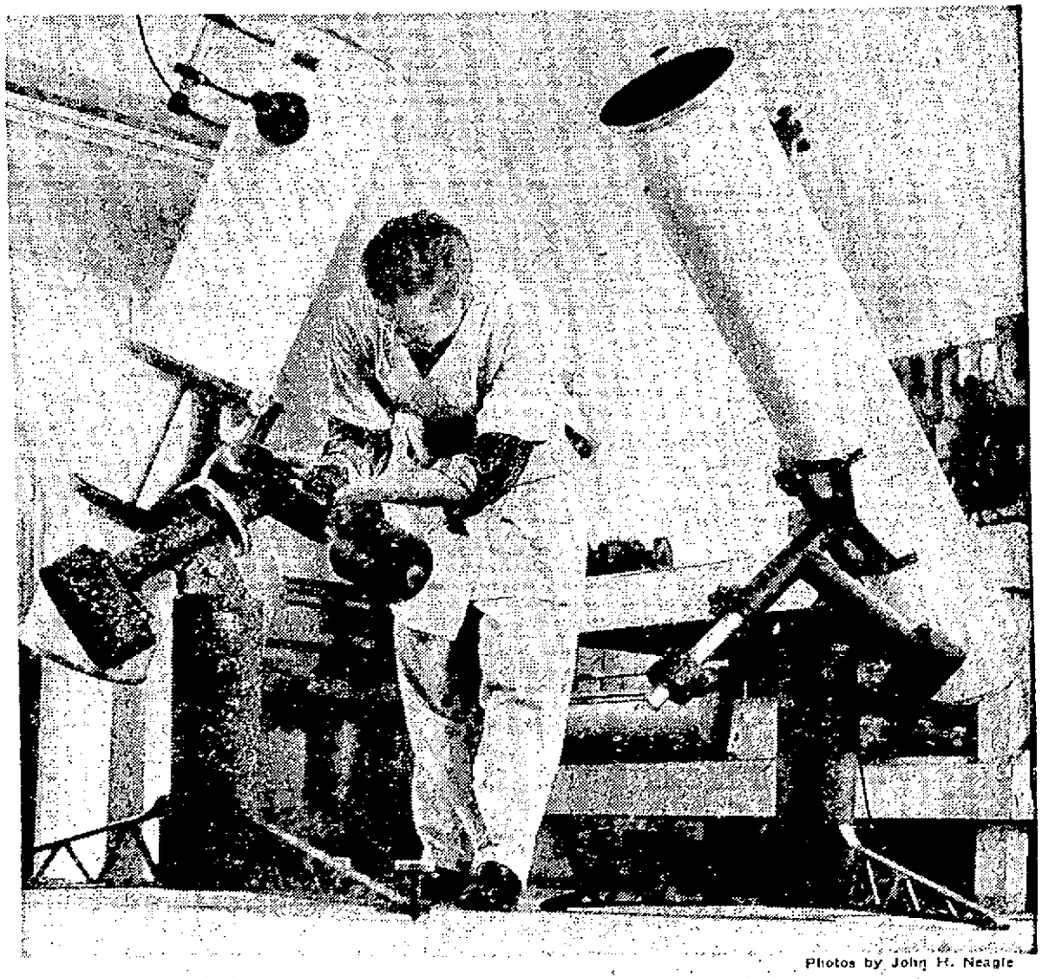

There is little more a man can ask for in the heavens or on this earth.

Tom Cave, owner of a Long Beach optical company, checks out a telescope mirror.

Finished telescope requires careful assembling. Henry Sayres, an assembler in the Long Beach shop, goes over one of the Cave instruments, making final adjustments.

Norco's Unique Menagerie

By Aubrey B. Haines

MOTORISTS who pass Western Ave. ranches near Norco take for granted the white board houses, rail fences, tractors, irrigation standpipes, and chickens in the barnyard. But when, approaching Second St., they come upon a pasture of ostriches, see a five-ton elephant swaying in front of the garden gate, llamas' and zebras' stamping about corrals, and four camels' grazing in the field, they stop for a long look. The unique ranch is winter headquarters of the Gene Holter Wild Animal Show.

From December to March the animals are taught new acts at Norco, located a few miles north of Corona in Riverside County, by Ray Chandler, foreman of the ranch, Holter, and several other trainers. The rest of the year they are on the road, playing to enthusiastic crowds at fairs, carnivals, schools, and shopping centers from coast to coast.

Norco citizens know about the ranch, but nonresident motorists are startled to meet Babe, the 73-year-old, 9,700-pound performing elephant, shuffling along the road in her daily workout. Of all the animals in the menagerie Chandler likes elephants best. "If they could talk, they'd be just like humans, understanding everything you say," he claims.

CHANDLER'S WIFE, Thelma, and two children, Charles, 17, and Janice, 3, are as easy with the animals as most families are with their household pets. Mrs. Chandler used to perform in the elephant act, lying in the sawdust while Babe would gently touch her face with her foot, about the circumference of a barrel. To prove that an elephant never forgets, when Mrs. Chandler comes near Babe nowadays, the huge animal reaches out an affectionate trunk. Walking up to Rock 'n' Roll, the baby year-old, 600-pound elephant, Mrs. Chandler observes that the animal wiggles like an enthusiastic puppy.

"An elephant's loyalty can outdo even a dog's," Ray asserts. "When we played a fair at Raleigh, N. C., I asked to be notified 10 minutes before fireworks were lighted. However, no notice came, and all of a sudden a number of Roman candles shot off in front of the grandstand. Frantic, Babe could not be controlled. Knocking me down in an effort to get away, she began to run but suddenly observed that she had hurt me. My hip was broken, and I couldn't get up. So she came back and stood over me to protect me. Though the fireworks still flared, she had found a greater loyalty than to protect herself."

CHANDLER FINDS that camels are the least likable of animals. "If an atom bomb wiped out everything on earth except camels, these animals wouldn't even miss people," he says.

Most challenging to train are ostriches. "Belligerent birds without too many brains," Ray says, "they're

NEWEST HAIRDO?

It's the Chemise

By Vera Williams

CHEMISE . . . Chemise . . . and more Chemise is the word in the Grand Ballroom at Lafayette Hotel where today and Monday the Long Beach Hairdressers Guild (hairdressers for the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant) will be hosts to hairdressers and cosmetologists of the Western states.

The 15th annual Beauty and Trade Show, always one of the outstanding Spring beauty events of the nation, will focus attention on the new Chemise hair style.

What is the chemise hair style?
It is a modern and softer version of the "windblown" hair style of the 1920's, designed to be worn with the Chemise dress, which in turn is a modification of the "tube" dress of the 1920's.

The Chemise hair style has infinite variations—as many variations as there are faces and hairdressers. But it is marked by a gay, carefree quality. Hair is short, with lots of waves and fluffy, wispy bangs.

Hair styles shown on these pages will be favorites at the Beauty and Trade Show.

The public will be admitted to the show from 1 to 10 p. m. both days.

Bobbie Becker (l.) shows "Modern Windblown" styling with wispy bangs. Gwen Hess has a "Chemise" style of hairdress with "rag doll" bangs.

She Had to Learn to Be Japanese!

By David Lancashire
Associated Press Writer

AP Newsfeatures Photo

Rising star, Eiko Ando, poses with John Wayne during filming of "The Barbarian and the Geisha" in Japan.

AT 19 EIKO ANDO was a Japanese burlesque queen.

At 23 she's playing opposite John Wayne in a movie directed by John Huston—and taking lessons in how to be Japanese. The picture is being made in Kyoto, Japan.

"I am not a very typical Japanese girl," she says.

She's 5 feet 7 inches tall, which is a head higher than most Japanese women. She has an un-Japanese 36-23-38 figure. And her voice is pitched an octave below that of the average Japanese girl.

Then there's the language. Born in Manchuria, she spoke English, Russian and Chinese until the family returned to Japan when she was 14.

"I'm taking lessons in everything," she admits.

In 20th Century-Fox's "The Barbarian and the Geisha," Eiko plays Okichi, legendary geisha sweetheart of Townsend Harris, America's pioneer diplomat to Japan in the 1850s.

FOR THE PART she must learn how to walk, sit, smile, play a samisen (Japanese guitar) and even how to pour a drink.

These are easy for a geisha trained from girlhood in the traditional intricacies of being a geisha. But it's difficult for a foreign-born Japanese like Eiko who studied concert singing and wound up as "Tokyo Venus" in Japan's largest burlesque house.

The demure, soft-eyed girl takes her new job seriously. "I go to bed by 9 or 10 every night and I get up about 6 every morning," she says in perfect English.

Last month the steady, painstaking work under lights proved so rugged her doctor ordered her off the set, with eyestrain, for days.

EIKO WAS CHOSEN from 184 girls by director Huston, who put Marilyn Monroe in pictures with "The Asphalt Jungle."

Huston sidesteps answering whether Eiko might become another Marilyn Monroe, saying "I am not a star maker." However, the veteran director adds ". . . Miss Monroe was actually more inexperienced. . . . Miss Ando has the character of a star . . . Miss Ando is doing her part and what we ask her to do just as well as Marilyn did hers."

Says Eiko: "I am very lucky to get the part. It is a big job, a big responsibility being with John Wayne. He is the biggest star perhaps in the whole world."

ON THE SET Huston directs her every motion with tireless patience. Eiko, clearing up misunderstandings through interpreters, responds over and over again without getting rattled.

"I don't get tired, or 'fed up' as you say. I am doing my job," she smiles.

But she says:

"I never thought about the movies. I wanted to be a singer, and I am too tall for Japanese movies."

Her dimensions stood her in good stead four years ago. They got her a job in the "Nichigeki Nude Follies," where the girls dance bare from the waist up. As "Tokyo Venus," Eiko wore spangles and specialized in still tableaux.

"I went there as a singer, and for awhile I did sing," she recalls. "But I was so young, and those managers, they were so smart, and soon I had no clothes on.

"I wanted to be independent," she goes on, wrapping her fur coat tighter around her, "and I didn't think very much when I signed the contract." It lasted 18 months.

EIKO QUIT the show in 1956 and studied voice in Europe until her mother became ill. She returned and continued studying until she was introduced to director Huston and producer Eugene Frenke last fall in Tokyo. She signed a three-year contract with Fox and is now on location here.

Would she take her clothes off for American movies if Hollywood demanded it?

"Only to a certain extent," she says, blushing, and for the first time answering through an interpreter.

THE JAPANESE GIRL, on whose performance much of the picture's impact is based, will go to Hollywood with the crew when the Cinemascope production is through filming. There she'll do the background narration which will carry over the Japanese dialogue and fill in the gaps for American audiences.

"But I don't know anything about my future," she says.

Eiko lives in Tokyo with her mother, in a western-styled home, and dresses and acts like a western woman.

"Wearing a kimono is new to me, too. I dressed in one when I was a little girl, but now I need someone to help me put it on," she admits. Fox costumers padded out the waist of the kimono where Eiko's willowy figure gave it a tapered, un-Japanese effect.

"I have no boy friends," she says, "but some men in Tokyo say they are. Don't you believe them."

LA REINA RULE

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

DEAR MISS RULE: We shall appreciate your analysis of the name HAWLEY.—E. P., Long Beach.

E.P.: The HAWLEY family secured their surname identification from a place in Kent, England, called "Haga-Ley" meaning "hedged pasture." The Hawley family are known to have lived in Dartmouth, Devonshire, in 1408 according to records. Their coat-of-arms, granted in 1577, has a silver cross on a green shield. Joseph Hawley of Derbyshire, England, migrated to Stratford, Conn., in the mid-1600's and is believed to be the first of the family in this country.

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like a brief genealogy of WADE and WAIGHT.—J.W., E.D.W., Long Beach.

J.W., E.D.W.: WADE may be either Irish or English. Waight is a variation of the English spelling of Wade. The Irish clan-name MacIfaid, meaning "descendants of Walter" (Walter denoted "ruler of the host"), was altered to McWade. The family originated in Monaghan, north of Dublin. In England the Wades are surnamed from either a location description "Waythe" meaning a river-crossing, or from the occupation "Weight" describing a watchman. John Atle (at the) Waythe lived in Yorkshire in 1379. One of the Wade coats-of-arms has two red gillyflowers on a gold diagonal stripe across a blue shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give information on OLSON and OLSEN.—D.C.O., Long Beach; R. O., Garden Grove.

D.O., R. O.: The Norwegian, Swedish and Danish surnames OLSON and Olsen are from "Olaf's son." Olaf was the primary Scandinavian spelling of Oliver meaning "peaceful one." Olaf was used in memory of the famous Saint Olaf, Viking king of Norway (A.D. 995-1030). The Danish Olsen family coat-of-arms has a tree stump in natural coloring on a silver shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the genealogy on WEBER. —Mrs. J.W., E.M., D.W., Long Beach; Mrs. C.D., Westminster.

The German word "weber" gave the family progenitor his distinguished occupational surname. WEBER meaning "the weaver" was first introduced to identify an honored artisan who wove woolen material on great looms in the Middle Ages. He was responsible for the beautiful brocaded fabrics worn by the nobility. The Weber coat-of-arms, granted in Prussia, has two diagonal black stripes running from upper right to lower left across a silver shield. In America the German spelling Weber has been changed by some families to Webber and also translated to Weaver. The most famous member of the family was Baron Karl Maria Von Weber (1786-1826), famous musical composer.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like your analysis of FARRISH and FARIS. Mrs. L.K., T.F., Long Beach.

Mrs. L.K., T.F.: FARRISH and FARIS have many sources in the British Isles. One is a spelling change of the Irish "Ferris," from the Celtic name Feoras. Feoras was the early Irish style of Peter meaning "the rock." Farrish and Faris are also nicknames shortened from the Saxon-English "Faramund" meaning "the traveler." Another origin for the surnames is the French "Ferrers" (place of the iron mines). One of the coats-of-arms for these families has pieces of red and gold fur covering a blue-bordered shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: May I have information on the name FLUTKA.—Mrs. C.E., Long Beach.

Mrs. C.E.: The German surname FLUTKA incorporates and illustrates your ancestor's responsible position, for "flutka" is formed from the occupational phrase "flut-graf" meaning "dike-steward" plus the Slavic suffix "ka" denoting a family of distinction. So far I have been unable to find a coat-of-arms for this lineage.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the genealogy and coat-of-arms of HUNTER.—Mrs. Y., Long Beach; Mrs. A.H., Lakewood.

Y., A.H.: The medieval English term for a professional hunter of wild game was Huntere. This was the source of the surname Hunter. Adam Le Huntere is listed in the Close Rolls of King Henry III in 1268. The Hunter coat-of-arms has a red rampant lion on a shield gold.

Send your name to La Reina Rule, in care of Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6th and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., for the meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

Eight rooms, including four bedrooms, are designed into this Dutch-styled, colonial house, with shuttered windows, porch posts and window planters.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Four-Level Split Goes Dutch

By John O. B. Wallace

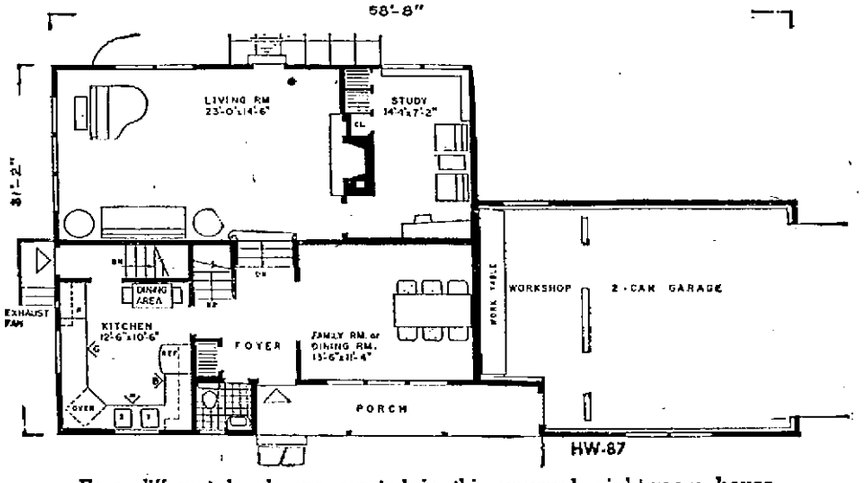

FOUR LEVELS—not just two—feature this unusual eight-room Dutch colonial. It is an example of what can be achieved through modern interpretation of the popular but slightly dated split-level design.

Arranged on four different levels, it has—in the words of the noted architect who created it—"all the dignity and charm of the two-story home and all the function of contemporary design."

It has been selected as another distinguished American design for the House of The Week series, and designated HW-87.

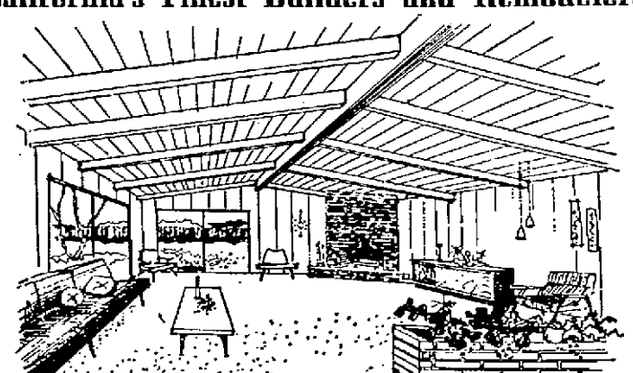

THERE IS NO better way to obtain a clear concept of the unique arrangements in this design than to take a quick look at each of the four different levels:

1. On the entrance level,

Four different levels are created in this unusual, eight-room house, giving it two-story charm and the function of contemporary design.

This interior view shows the built-in cabinets in the master bedroom and special treatment of windows.

there are the kitchen with its separate dining area, the spacious foyer and the family room which optionally can become a formal dining room.

2. On the living room level, four steps below the entrance level, there are the huge, sunken living room (23 ft. by 14 ft. 6 inches) and the study with built-in shelving.

3. On the bedroom level over the living room, there are two bedrooms (14 ft. 6 inches by 14 ft., and 16 ft. by 8 ft. 2 inches) and a bath which opens into the bedroom hall.

4. On the bedroom level over the foyer and five steps higher than the other bedroom level, there are two more bedrooms—first, the guest bedroom, 11 ft. 4 inches by 8 ft. 2 inches, and the fourth bedroom, 12 ft. 8 inches by 11 ft. 4 inches, plus a second bath.

The upper levels provide 884 square feet and the lower levels 970 square feet of floor space.

Architect Samuel Paul, who executed this interesting and practical adaptation of the split-level design, has this to say of HW-87:

"The exterior exudes a spirit of hospitality and gracious living which is repeated in the interior. Shuttered windows and posts on the porch give this a touch of traditional charm, and modern practicality is added in the protective roofline leading from the entryway to the garage door.

"MANY SURPRISES are in store for the guests who come through the front Dutch door into the central hallway. The first sign of welcome is close at hand in the guest closet and powder room off the foyer. The next step might lead into the kitchen which has a three-fold functional value:

"1. It is large and permits freedom of movement.

"2. The excellent equipment adds to its efficiency.

"3. Its beauty makes it a pleasure to work in.

"If guests are escorted through the house, the first step would of course be the dramatic sunken living room, which is down five steps from the center hall. Impressive is the word for this room because a modern adaptation of the old colonial type stone fireplace recedes into one wall—and a second Dutch door leads down to an outdoor terrace. A door next to the fireplace leads into the private study."

The U-shaped kitchen is a stand-out feature. It has a double sink, counter-top range, dishwasher, built-in oven, double window exposure, and an abundance of wall cabinets. The cabinets are finished in natural woods and the counter tops are of heat-resistant plastic.

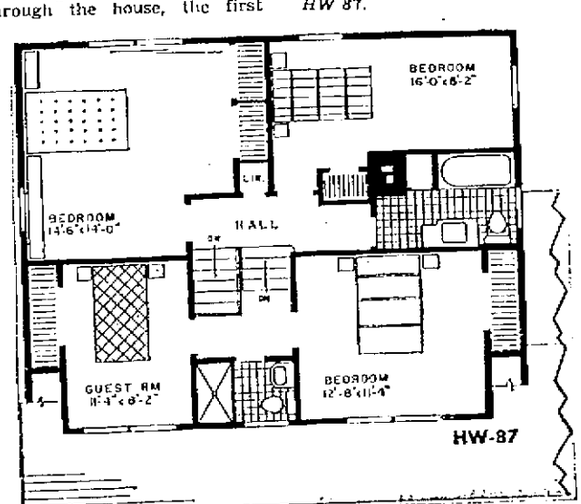

ONE CORNER of the kitchen is reserved for informal dining. Stairs to the basement are located just outside the kitchen proper and directly opposite a door which opens onto an outside service porch.

Other interior highlights include a hobby room, or workshop, within the garage area; there is direct access from the garage into the house by means of the covered front porch, and there is a lavatory just off the front entrance foyer.

There are extra-sized windows in the living room and the family-or-dining room. Windows throughout the house are double hung and there are planter boxes under the front windows at the extreme left and right.

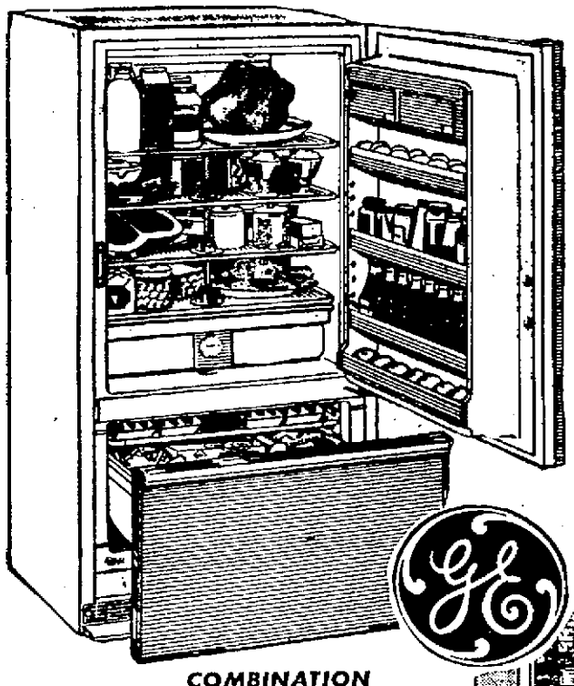

The exterior finish is of wood siding. Asphalt shingles are used on the roof. All walks are of flagstone. The covered front entrance porch and the rear terrace are of cement finish. A partial basement under the kitchen-family room area has sufficient space for storage and heating units. A 4 ft. 4 inch crawl space is under the living room-study area.

To obtain plans, address Building Editor, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6th & Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., enclose 35 cents and request House of the Week, Study Plan, Design HW 87.

Three bedrooms and a guest room are on the upper levels, which provide a total of 884 square feet.

A Rental Gets Its Face Lifted

Between kitchen and dining area is an open cupboard, which displays part of DeMaurer's antique dinnerware.

Upholstered hassocks and bolsters form sofa of Louis DeMaurer's apartment. Artist-decorator DeMaurer carved chest at right, did oils hanging on wall.

By Eileen Ball

ANYONE who thinks there is no individuality to be had in the typical rental need only consider Louis DeMaurer's attractive bachelor apartment at 1614 E. 1st St. to be convinced otherwise. Ingenuity in decor has transformed his simple quarters into a residence of unique and attractive distinction.

DeMaurer, a Long Beach artist and decorator, has allowed himself a free rein in the furnishing and decorating of his residence. A connoisseur of many periods and styles of furniture, he combines several in his own setting. A few antique French pieces are placed alongside more contemporary items, and the whole merges into a scheme of freshness and interest.

The apartment's living room, dining area and kitchen are essentially wide open to each other and the effect enhances the illusion of space.

NATURAL MUSLIN cafe curtains on heavy brass rings provide privacy and their style is congenial with the French and Italian provincial pieces that are among DeMaurer's furniture possessions.

Off-white plaster walls and an acoustic ceiling join the curtains in providing a neutral background for room accessories. A furniture grouping stands just inside the front door and before the window stands a French provincial table in polished cherrywood flanked by a pair of Italian antique provincial side chairs upholstered in blue-and-white toile fabric. This cotton print, patterned with Delft blue game birds and foliage, has been used in a way that the round upholstered backs of the chairs frame the blue-on-white pheasant prints.

The living room rug was hand-hooked in Mexico. Its neutral off-white background is patterned with floral groups involving the same primary colors used throughout the apartment. Standing against the long inside living room wall is a sofa (actually two huge upholstered hassocks and bolsters in combination). The fabric used to cover these intricately button-tufted pieces is emerald green cotton figured with abstract charcoal and gold geometric motifs. All along the wall above hangs an assembly of DeMaurer's oils—abstract and impressionistic studies, many of which are familiar in Long Beach art circles. In several of them, a strong Van Gogh influence is felt.

Dining area (left) has chandelier, marble console and antique candelabra. Bedroom has marble-papered dresser, sawed-off chairs done in pastels, gilt.

LIGHTING THIS art grouping is a tall lamp, the base of which is fashioned from a long-since depleted gallon bottle of cognac. A gold-and-cocoa striped shade makes a giddy topping for this base.

On the other side of the sofa stands a hand-carved chest of Spanish-colonial influence made by DeMaurer some years ago.

Across the room is a French provincial secretary—a diminutive fruitwood member with double brass-grilled doors. With this curved piece, DeMaurer teams a small antique mid-Victorian chair with spindle back and caned seat. Near the secretary hangs one of his more recent paintings -- a composition of trees in tones of aqua, greens and olives.

Furnishing the corner of the room is a third bolster-and-hassock combination matching the sofa duo. Over this is displayed still another painting—a rooster in vital colors, its mood emulating the style of the French impressionistic school. Its deep, fruitwood frame compliments the French provincial furnishings.

THE DINING area, open to the living room, also relates to the kitchen over an open storage partition. A leather-topped French provincial game table expands to provide dining dimensions. The chairs are antique French imports with lettuce colored quilted antique satin seats.

An English crystal chandelier hangs over the table. Carrying along this theme of opulence is a long slender console of travertine marble supported by heavy gilt brackets that embellishes the back wall of the dining ell. This narrow "shelf" of marble is DeMaurer's answer to the need for a sideboard in a space that wouldn't accommodate a standard case piece of furniture. Here, the console bears a pair of French, antique, five-branch candelabra as will as providing a place for floral arrangements.

The open, built-in cabinet that divides the dining area from the kitchen shows off a portion of DeMaurer's antique Blue Willow dinnerware. Items ranging from an old blue-and-white china toaster to a pepper mill are included in the collection.

The kitchen features natural birch cabinets, green linoleum floor and lettuce green tile. Many of DeMaurer's "gourmet gadgets"—chafing dishes, copper cook pans and bottled herbs—add a continental appearance to the area.

The bedroom is decorated with a flair for fancy. The French provincial headboard is antique ivory, its spread is heavy cocoa shag and the cafe curtains are natural muslin. An off-white cotton rug is bordered in sage green carved in a Greek key motif. A double dresser decoupaged with green-and-white marble print paper is fanciful. So are the sawed-off, short-legged, oldfashioned farm-house kitchen chairs that stand on either side—their seats colorfully cushioned, their spindles brushed with pastel colors and gilt.

Nothing so ordinary as a dresser mirror would do: DeMaurer chooses, instead, to hang over the dresser a pair of long and narrow English, gilt-framed mirrors.

Shadetree Barber

By Tracy Reaves

When Barbara Stiles cut expenses by cutting hubby's hair, she started something—Cal Poly barber shop.

WOMENFOLK since time began have been cutting their men down to size, but the day has come when it is done publicly and in a businesslike way — in the barbershops.

At this prospect, men may be pleased or beware, and these emotions might well be mixed in the minds of students on campus at California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo.

There, an enterprising young Barbara . . . er, barber . . . has set up a clipping service, or rather, a more or less barber shop.

Barbara Stiles, whose husband majors in engineering at Cal Poly, began trimming hair in order to cut expenses when her husband began his college education at Long Beach City College. Here she practiced her scissor snipping on husband Larry and their two children, Cathy, 5, and Billy, 3.

THAT EXPERIENCE has been put to work at the 20-foot campus trailer-house where the family of four now lives. The improvised barber shop has the beauty and feeling of the out-of-doors, for that's where it is. But to the married students living on limited budgets, the location isn't as important as being well groomed.

It was in this fresh air atmosphere on hair-cutting day that it became obvious Barbara was a barber, and unwary neighbors, some with long hair, short hair, curly locks or bald, began asking for — and got — a trimming. Not just to the ears, but all over the head. It has shocked a few to discover that their female barber only knows how to cut hair in a "butch"!

At any rate, Mrs. Stiles is a bargain to the heads of the families who are willing to take their chances.

TO PERSONS interested in this whack-it-yourself-racket, there are few techniques involved. With the essential clippers, comb and scissors handy, further improvisions might include a bowl, a level for the crew cut, and a tape measure for those longer styles.

It is well to keep in mind that hair grows approximately one-half inch per month, so in time mistakes will be well covered. Other than this, only minor expenditures might be necessary, such as a trip to the barber shop to repair damages.

In any case, Mrs. Stiles does not claim to be a professional, but just a helpful shadetree barber, and openly lets each customer know just where he sits. So it is at his own risk that each man gets his hair cut staring at this sign: Practice Makes Perfect. I'm Practicing.

New Neighbor

I CAN'T understand why the house next door has changed hands so often. The original owner was an honest man whose ad read:

"UNUSUAL NEIGHBORHOOD: 3-BR., 2-Ba. home. Faucets leak. Grdn. loaded w/ weeds. Firepl., backs up. No Transp. School 18 Mls. Shop. 15 Mls. Must sacr. for health. Mo. payments and taxes make me sick!"

An advertising man bought the place and three months later sold it with:

"NEVER ANYTHING LIKE IT! Rustic rambling 3-BR. home w/panoramic view of hills overlooking placid waters of the blue Pacific. Designed for dreaming and built to magnify ea. glorious moment of living!"

This appealed to a car dealer who stuck it out for two weeks before trying his hand:

"THIS WILL SHOCK YOU! 3-BR. home w/lots of extras. Hardly been lived in. Must see to appreciate. Nothing dn., 360 Mos. to pay."

They tell me the new tenant is a big game hunter. So help me, if he makes my lions nervous, I'LL sell!—BERWYN A. IMBER.

Circus on Wheels

throughout the Southland, a group of Lions asked:

"Why not do something to allow this urge for speed to take place somewhere other than on city side streets and public highways—and have it done under strict supervision?

Thus the thought. The answer was a "good" drag strip. No one club of any service organization could assume the whole job. So Lions Associated was born, comprised of several harbor area Lions clubs.

NOR WAS IT EASY. Finally, for a big parcel of property between Willow St. and 223rd St., the Lions arranged a lease from the Harbor Dept.

On Oct. 15, 1955, after countless man hours of freely-given time and some $70,000 in outlay, the LADS presented its first drag meet.

What has happened since opening date? Some 270,000 persons have witnessed the weekly LADS drag races, burgeoned by occasional events of national importance, such as today's program offers.

Per actual miles logged, the safety record surpasses by 5-to-1 the ordinary highway driving record.

DEBUTING TODAY, Lions Associated have completed a brand-new Quarter-Midget track for the pre-teeners. Experts call it "a perfect track."

The 1958 Lions Associated president, Walter E. Hoffman, head of a long-established Long Beach electrical engineering company, comments:

Of the quarter-midget course: "The board of directors gave very careful consideration to the safety factor . . . their own supervisors are so strict that, during the entire operations of several years, they have never had an accident in which a youngster was hurt."

Of the drag strip: "We try to teach sportsmanship, tolerance and good citizenship to the boys. With the help and encouragement of the parents and the public, we Lions Club members feel we can do a great deal to avoid trouble on the highways and to make better drivers of our future citizens."

To understand what Hoffman means steer out and see what goes on.

Suzy's Medal

TUCKED AWAY in my safe deposit box is a Silver Star, awarded for bravery over and above the call of duty. It isn't mine. It belonged to Suzy's husband and I don't even know his name.

I was building housing for servicemen in San Diego during the last war and was having trouble keeping my office help. They were the wives of enlisted men who followed their young husbands from camp to camp, clinging to them until they were finally sent overseas, then returning home to wait. They came and they went. I've had as many as four in a week's time. They were a valiant, smiling lot. I suspected that they cried much at night.

There was no use trying to remember their names, so I called them all Suzy. There was Suzy Redhead, tall Suzy Highpockets, Suzy Who Painted Her Toenails . . .

AND THERE WAS Suzy With Glasses. She was dumpy and bulged in the wrong places. And she was plain of face until she started talking about Irish, her husband. Then she took on a beauty beyond all understanding.

Irish had been a policeman somewhere in the middle west or perhaps in the East, before he enlisted in the Marines. He had finished one tour of duty in the Pacific. Intelligence work—running telephone wires. Now he was back in San Diego.

Suzy begged off one day. Irish was to be decorated. She brought his medal to the office for us to admire. But she didn't want to let us know how he earned it. Finally she said, "I'll tell you if you won't laugh at him. He was stringing wires on one of those big islands. The fighting was pretty fierce, but Irish just went about his business, stringing wires. He was up a tall tree when a message came through: 'Come on back, you damned fool, you're three miles behind enemy lines.' And for that they gave him the Silver Star."

THE TELEPHONE RANG. Suzy answered it and turned white as paper. She said to me, "My Irish is leaving for combat duty and I'm leaving, too." She grabbed up her coat and left without even finishing the letter in the typewriter.

It was not until the next day that I found the medal in Suzy's desk. I carried it in my pocket for weeks, then transferred it to a safer place.

The war was over. One day I met Suzy Who Painted Her Toenails and we stopped to talk. She had run into Suzy Highpockets who had word about Suzy With Glasses. Irish had turned up missing in action. Just that, no names, places, nothing else.

* * * *

So if any of you ever run into Suzy With Glasses tell her I'm keeping her medal for her. How will you know her? She is older now and dumpy and plain, but you will know her! Her face will light up with a beauty not of this world when she tells you of her Irish, who was decorated for stringing telephone wires three miles behind the enemy lines!—OWEN RHODES.

Tuna Tulips are an idea to lift Lenten meals out of the doldrums and still fit the menu to the demands of the season. Tuna mixture fills biscuit cups.

Tuna Tulips Give a Lenten 'Lift'

By Mildred K. Flanary
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

VARYING Lenten foods can be a real tribute to your culinary skill and imagination. At no other time of year is stress as great for mealtime variety, within limits of custom.

And there is no one food more adaptable, more tasty and tempting for this season than tuna. It's "at home" in casseroles, in or atop sandwiches, in salad or as canapes.

For instance, perky and tempting Tuna Tulips are a new and distinctive luncheon dish. A Tuna Tulip is a biscuit basket in tulip shape with a tuna filling inside the petals. The addition of mayonnaise bestows a salad flavor, while salted peanuts dot the hot tuna mixture with a nutty tang.

Cut pieces of biscuit dough into 6-inch squares, using a pastry wheel for ruffled tulips. Ease squares into greased custard cups, spoon in the filling, and fold corners back over top. If you wish, seal the petal edges by pinching dough together.

Prepare filling in advance to avoid hostess-rush. Then, just before the guests arrive, mix the dough and form tulips. Serve with colorful fruit salad and your favorite relishes.

Following are the recipes for Tuna Tulips, a Dagwood Tuna Salad, Tuna Rolls-Ups and for Gourmet's Hot Tuna Canapes. Keep them handy!

Tuna Tulips

Make rolled biscuit dough (Mix 2 cups biscuit mix with ⅔ cup milk). Filling:

1 cup drained tuna broken up one 7-oz. can)
1 cup diced celery
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup chopped salted peanuts
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. grated onion

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Roll biscuit dough and cut into six 6" squares. Place squares into greased custard cups. Spoon tuna filling into dough-lined cups. Fold corners of dough over top; pinch together. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from cups. Serve hot. Serves 6.

Tuna Roll-Ups

2 cups packaged biscuit mix
1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
2 tablespoons drained sweet pickle relish
2 teaspoons grated onion
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Prepare biscuit mix according to package directions; roll or pat into 9-inch square on lightly floured board or pastry cloth. Combine remaining ingredients; spread over biscuit dough. Roll up, jelly-roll fashion; seal edges. Cut into 8 slices. Put slices, cut-side-up, on greased baking sheet. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes, or until baked and browned. Serve with Quick Chili Sauce:

Cook 1 onion, chopped, and ½ green pepper, chopped, in 2 tablespoons shortening 5 minutes. Add 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce and 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Simmer 10 minutes, or until vegetables are just tender. Makes 8 roll-ups.

Dagwood Tuna Salad
(Makes 6 salads)

1 7-ounce can solid-pack tuna
½ cup chopped celery
¾ cup chopped stuffed green olives
¼ cup chopped pecans

Fishstick Cheese Dreams

1 package Fishsticks
½ pound pimento cheese (process)
3 tablespoons milk
¼ teaspoons paprika

Grate cheese into saucepan. Add milk and stir over low heat until cheese sauce is smooth. Add paprika. Dip each frozen fishstick into cheese mixture. Place immediately on silver-foil lined pan and set in oven, 425° F. (If desired, place pan in freezer until ready to heat.) Heat 15 to 20 minutes, until cheese is bubbly and fishsticks are hot. Serve immediately.

SERVE WITH: Fruit Juice, Lyonnaise Potatoes, Escalloped Tomatoes, Bran Muffins, Tartar Sauce, Romaine, Angel Food Cake.

SAIL INTO LENT WITH BROILED HALIBUT STEAKS

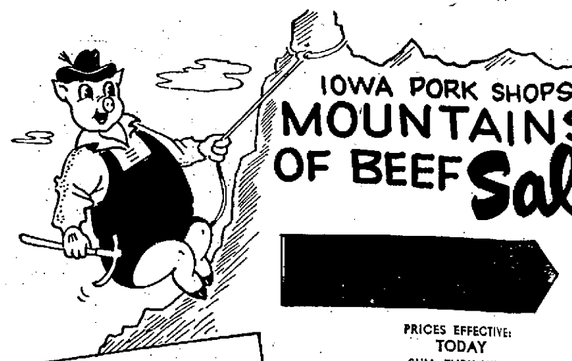

The big secret of broiling fish is so simple, yet so easy to overlook. Never, never overcook. To eliminate the cleanup problem when broiling, line your broiler pan with handy aluminum foil. For four servings allow 1 to 1½ lbs. of halibut fillets. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place pan under heat, baste several times with melted butter. Fish is done when it is easily flaked with a fork but still moist. Fish is just fish until you add a sauce, then it becomes a gourmet's dish.

FISH SAUCE LOUIS

1 CUP MAYONNAISE
¼ CUP FRENCH DRESSING
¼ CUP CATSUP OR CHILI SAUCE
1 TEASPOON HORSERADISH
1 TEASPOON WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE
SALT & PEPPER (coarsely ground)

MIX TOGETHER ALL INGREDIENTS AND CHILL UNTIL SERVING TIME.

MENAGERIE

Just plain ornery and will chase any thing in the pasture that moves. Their toes are sharp as razors. The big birds have been clocked at up to 60 miles an hour. If they're angry at something—and they usually are—they kick forward their big feet. A sharp toe can rip an animal like a cleaver."

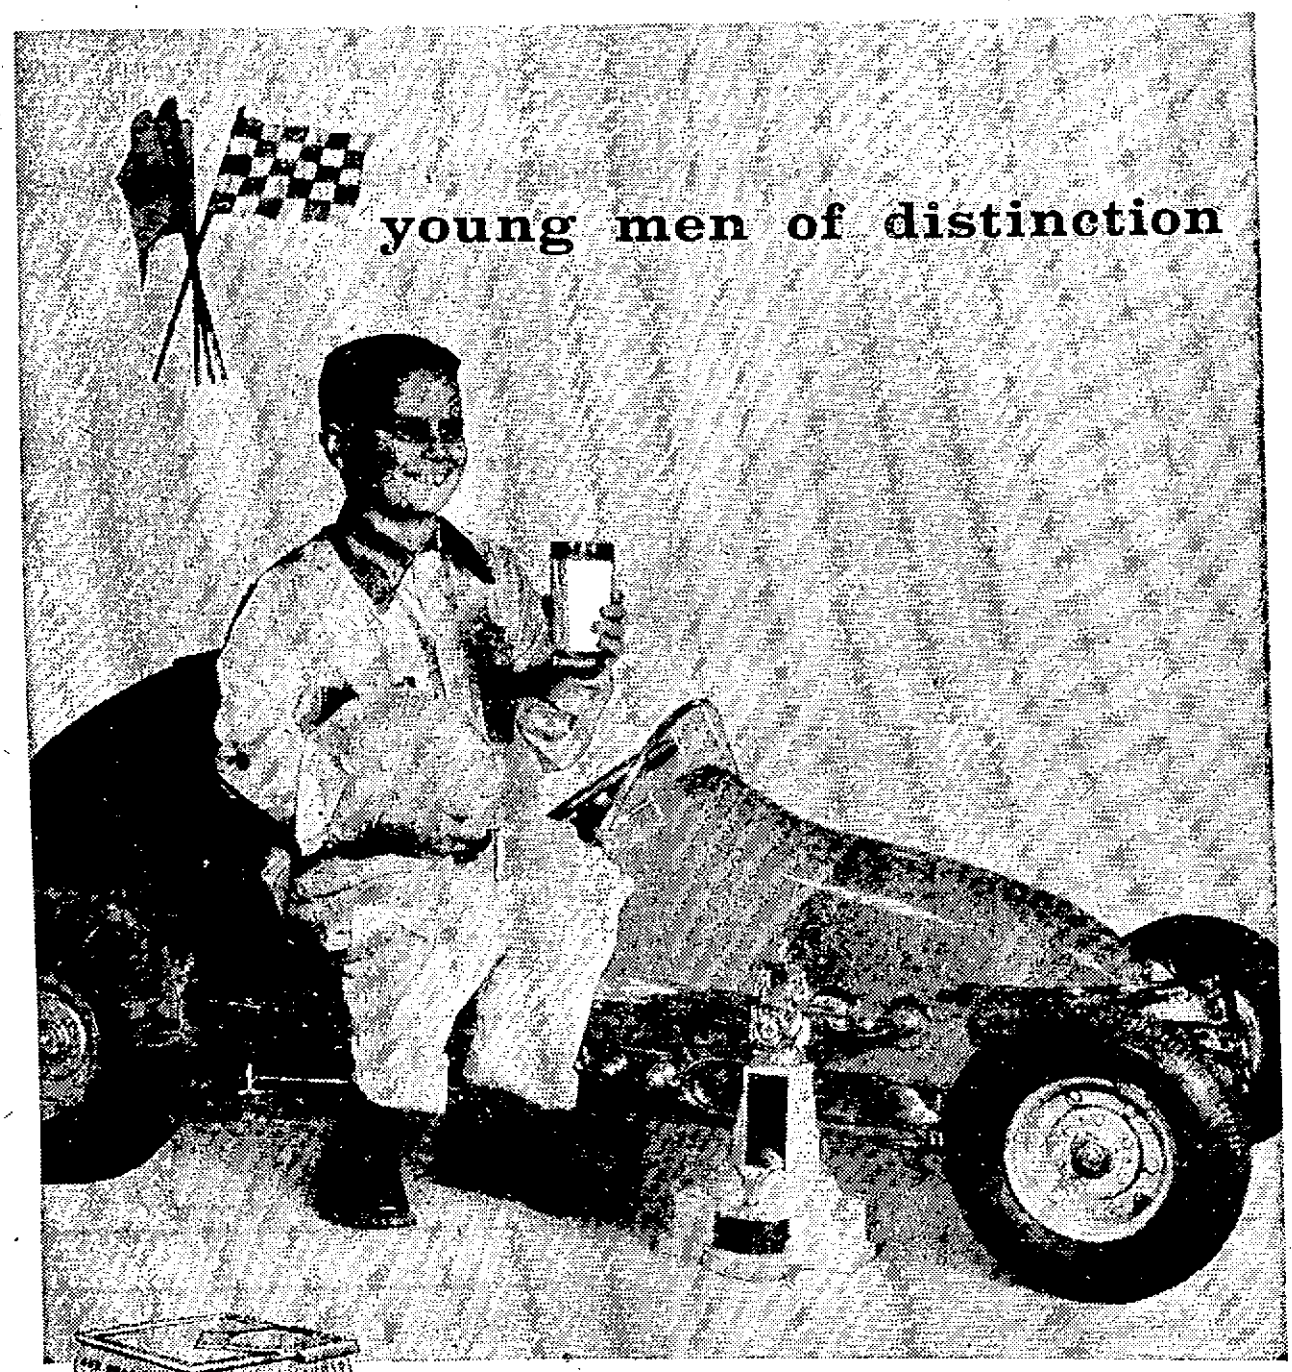

Chandler trains ostriches for sulky races, a sports event now known all over America. Another specialty of the wild animal show is a racing camel act. At present Holter is working the zebras into a "liberty" act—a finale in which all the animals rear up while grouped together.

BESIDES ELEPHANTS, camels, llamas, zebras, and ostriches the Holter ranch boasts miniature Zebu cattle, a "zonkey"—half donkey and half zebra — kangaroos, five white shepherd dogs, ponies, mules, a $5,000 stallion named "Silver" which leads Pasadena Tournament of Roses parades, and a strange animal called "the thing."

A year ago, in Colorado, Holter saw this mysterious animal running wild. Told that he could have it if he could catch it, he chased it into a snowdrift, which made capture easy. "Though it looks as if it's part goat, cow, buffalo, and horse, it's only 34 inches high and weighs 135 pounds," Ray says. "It's bad tempered, runs as fast as an antelope, and sticks its tail—which is like that of a horse—straight up in the air while running."

The idea of a wild animal show developed over the years. At an early age Gene Holter bought, sold, and broke horses for a living. When only 14 he bought carloads of horses from Montana on his own. About this time he started making a name for himself at rodeos. Eventually he bought a ranch in California to keep the animals he owned, which numbered about 50. Today the Holter ranch contains more than 100 different animals and birds, almost all of movie fame.

In 1949 while Gene lay in a hospital bed with a broken leg, the idea of racing ostriches occurred to him. Having read a jungle comedy book showing natives riding ostriches, Gene felt that racing ostriches ought to be possible and should be sensational. A year later he owned ostriches that proved expensive to feed, almost impossible to train, and so unlikely to become racers that no fair manager wanted to risk them. But by 1953, Gov. Weatherby won a race with one of Gene's birds at the Kentucky State Fair.

Kent Browning, junior juggernaut of the dirt track, likes to relax after a gruelling quarter-midget race... or anytime... with a tall, cool glass of refreshing Mountain View Milk.

Kent says: "When the checkered flag falls after the race, there's nothing like rich, creamy Mountain View Milk. It tastes so good — and it's so good for you. Fella's and girls, if you haven't tried Mountain View Milk, you don't know how good milk can be."

And Mom... Mountain View Milk is just chuck-full of vitamins and calcium for extra strong body building. You can get it at your store, or have it home delivered in single service cartons. There's no more inconvenience from empty bottles.

BOAT TALK

Love That Marina!

By Bob Ruskauff

ALTHOUGH this story concerns the Long Beach Marina, Basin I, and what a wonderful year it has been since the opening last February, the gleanings came about at the big Boat Show (which closes today at the Great Western Exhibits Building — so, if you haven't, do!).

We bumped into the director of the Long Beach Marine Department and his charming wife, Vera, and asked Lawrence W. McDowell:

"How's it going and how do the tenants like it at the Marina?"

"You have asked a question," said Larry, "which I can answer completely in the affirmative." To wit:

The 335-slip holders most obviously love that Marina!

NOT SO LONG AGO, the Marina had a waiting list of around 800 boats. Now it's more than 1,200. Plans for added basins are progressing, but it will be a spell before they can be inhabited. And, then, the waiting list will carry right along, the way this boating now goes.

Yes, they love that Marina. So well that many owners have spent their summer vacations aboard ships there. So well that many don't even bother cruising to far places. They take a few hours outside or in the bay, then, to quote Advocate McDowell, "come back in to have fun in a clean, pleasant anchorage."

"Why not?" Larry asked. "All the facilities and comforts of a first-class yacht club are right here."

TRUE, EVEN though there will soon be more, add to wit:

1. The new administration building is virtually complete and will be ready for occupancy in March.

2. The Marine Fire Station will be occupied and in operation by mid-March.

3. Four more comfort stations, two with showers for the boat people, will soon be available.

4. Ready within two months will be a marine supply and commissary-snack bar (apart from the restaurant, Captain's Inn, in operation for some time).

THE BASIN has some large and well known yachts in it — such, in sail, as the 77-foot Queen Mab (sleek and beautiful as a filly, yet over 50 years of age, this ever-youthful dowager) and William L. Stewart's noted 67-foot yawl, Chubasco; such, in power cruisers, as Johnny Miller's 72-foot cruiser, Aggie J., or the Willis-Albright-owned 83-foot converted air-sea rescue boat, Thundercloud (now on a lengthy Mexican cruise).

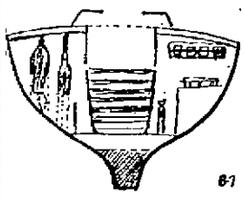

Yet 135 yachts in the basin are under 25 feet in length.

BOAT HOOKS: High lights of the boating scene today will be both ashore and afloat. Ashore, it's the finale of the nation's third largest boat show, going throughout the afternoon until 10 p. m. Afloat and on three courses, will be climaxing action of the 29th annual Midwinter Regatta.

Most classes will get their awards tonight at the three conducting yacht clubs — Alamitos Bay (dinghy fleets), Cabrillo Beach (small boats) and Los Angeles (larger boats).

WET GEAR

A wet gear locker is best placed near the foot of the companionway so the crew can stow gear before the below decks get wet, too. Below the locker place a pan or box or some other waterproof arrangement so that drippings drain directly into the bilge. The gear may be fully dried outdoors later.

The Biggest Store

"AND THE PRICE IS RIGHT" by Margaret Case Harriman (World, $4): In the 168 selling departments at R. H. Macy's in New York, and its 32 branches, customers bought $398,261,000 worth of half a million items in 1956. Biggest department store in the world and the best known—Macy's has 650,000 depositor account customers, many of whom live in distant lands; the others include the 150,000 people who daily pour through the New York store's 13 entrances.

Responsible for the store's origin was a seafaring Quaker, Rowland Hussey Macy who, in 1845, noting four failures as a merchant before coming to New York, wrote: "I have worked two years for nothing. Damn. Damn. damn. damn."

A few years later, following the Gold Rush to California, R. H. Macy, a brother and two partners acquired in what is now the Golden State, opened a "fancy dry goods" and provisions-for-miners store in Marysville under the name of Macy & Co. It went out of business just three months later, its owners having failed to take notice of the fact that the miners made up a floating population.

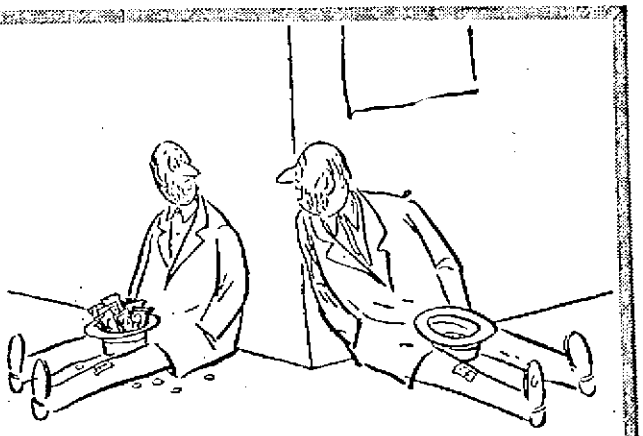

Back east, after a short hitch in Boston, Macy opened a store in New York. No one knows exactly how he got his capital, but it is recorded that his first year's sales totaled $90,000. Mrs. Case sets down an intimate and lightly written history of the store's growth, the strange requests received there by strange people, and sidelights of some of its more than 10,000 regular salespeople. Anyone who ever visited a department store will enjoy reading it.

"THE BRAND RIDER" by Ed La Vanway (Dodd, Mead, $2.75): As if rounding up enough longhorns to keep the Four-Arrow spread out of reach of mortgage holders were not enough, John Lane has two other problems, each a sinister one and a threat to his life. One is Louis Sharr, a deputy sheriff whom only Lane knows to be wanted elsewhere for murder, and who knows Lane knows. The other is Thors Sorensen, who claims title to his small range but who's actually a nester, raiding Four-Arrow herds. How Lane works things out with brains and bullets adds up to a driving western, powered with trigger action and suspense.

"COME DANCE WITH ME" by Ninette de Valois (World, $6): An Irish jig, for which she had exceptional talent when a small girl, carried Ninette de Valois to international fame in ballet. This is an autobiography of sorts, her experiences along the way and personal glimpses of famous friends—friends like William Butler Yeats and Robert Helpmann and Lennox Robinson. Founder of the Sadler's Wells School of Ballet, now the Royal Ballet School; and director of Sadler's Wells Ballet, now the Royal Ballet, since its foundation more than a quarter of a century ago, Dame Valois has much to say about the world of the theater and its people, and she says it with charm and extraordinary perception. Friends told her she should take a few months off to write these memoirs, but she chose to do it during a lecture tour of 12,000 miles in Europe, Africa, Canada and the United States, aboard almost every conceivable means of transportation from a French cargo boat to an observation car on an American streamliner. As a dancer, how does it feel to be old? Dame Valois quotes James Stephens: "It feels stiff like."

"A POOR MAN'S GUIDE TO EUROPE: 1958 Edition" by David Dodge (Random House, $3.50): It takes money to travel — even in Europe — but much less money if you team up with David Dodge and allow him to take you by the hand and lead you. Mr. Dodge is a penny pincher, a nickel miser, and he wouldn't spend a buck on a bet unless he knew he'd get double his money's worth. He knows Europe like the back of his hand and he knows, therefore, when and where to save a shekel without actually appearing to be a miser. He gives the lowdown on tipping through the various countries, how the traveler can gimmick the European money-changing racket, how to keep from loading up with souvenirs that are purely junk. He tips you off to the finest European

"Care for a merger?"

A parody on the stiff-necked boss, and the antics of the time-clock puncher, the clock watcher, the round-and-fully-packed secretary, the office vampire and the office boy make up "Care for a Merger?" (Dutton, $2.75), a hilarious collection of 120 cartoons by famous artists that have appeared in The Wall Street Journal, the mouthpiece of big business. And, as you can see, Charles Preston who made the selections could have done no better than to select the above cartoon for this funny book's jacket illustration.

Millions See His Arm on Television

Hal Nyby's arm plays part on Jack Webb's "Dragnet."

By Terry Vernon

Independent, Press-Telegram Television Columnist

MILLIONS have seen this man on TV, or at least his powerful arms and shoulders, but his audience wouldn't recognize him if they bumped into him on the street. And he's a product of Poly High School in Long Beach.

At the conclusion of every "Dragnet" story you see a powerful arm holding a sledge and hammering the show's Mark VII code on a metal plate.

On the other end of the hammer-arm is Harold Christian Nyby, construction foreman responsible for building most of the show's sets.

He gets quite a ribbing about his chore since it occurs only once in a while. However, when he is ready to put the VII stamp on film the make-up man greases Hal's hands with the deftness he'd use to apply Marilyn Monroe's eye shadow (but probably not with the same feeling of joy). The wardrobe man steps in and rolls up the shirtsleeves and the hairdresser, with a flourish, high lights the blond hair on his arm with a spray.

* * * *

NYBY IS AN amiable guy who has a handshake like a rampant power wrench. He's 6 foot 3 and weighs 220 pounds.

His brother, Christian, is a well known TV producer and also is formerly of Long Beach. They do not work together in show business, but they do have a mutual respect for their chosen professions.

During World War II, while serving in the Navy, Hal was the star of a rehabilitation film made by the government. Prior to that he had been a photographer 1st class and is one of the survivors of the sinking of the aircraft carrier USS Franklin.

He lives with his wife and three youngsters on a half-acre in Granada Hills and photography is his principal hobby.

His acting stint occurs about three times to each year. But to him it's a big thrill and to millions of viewers he stands as a very solid guy.

cuisines. He makes it easy for you to plan your trip. To top it all off, his book's a delight to read, even if you're going nowhere.

"SAWDUST EMPIRE" by Howard M. Brier (Knopf, $5): Seattle appeared on the map when Henry Yesler built his sawmill in 1851. Since, the cities of Washington and Oregon have grown around their sawmills. Even today, the 4 million people in that 165,000-square-mile area depend to a great extent on lumber for their economy though industry is becoming more and more diversified. Mr. Brier, associate professor of journalism at the University of Washington, writes fondly about these two richly endowed states and their cities and comes up with one of the most informative and easy-to-read books of its kind that it has been our pleasure to read. Those planning a summer vacation to the Pacific Northwest—the "Sawdust Empire"—will get much, much more out of their trip if they will first read this book.

⅓ cup mayonnaise
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
6 medium-sized fresh tomatoes
Parsley sprigs

With a fork, break tuna into large chunks. In a bowl, combine tuna, celery, olives, pecans, mayonnaise, salt and pepper; mix lightly but thoroughly. Cut each tomato, crosswise, into 3 slices. Spread bottom and middle tomato slices with tuna mixture. For each salad, arrange bottom slice on crisp lettuce; place middle slices on this and top with stem and slice. Garnish with sprig of parsley. Chill before serving. Makes 6 salads.

MEXICO CITY

". . . if you would tell us what you like best in Mexico and what to avoid!"

I LIKE EATING under the portals at Oaxaca. The peanuts fried in garlic and hot peppers, and the mescal with lime and salt.

The musical plaza all lit with little golden lights at Vera Cruz. And dinner of fresh oysters and huachinanguito in butter at Prendes sidewalk restaurant across the street.

* * * *

I DON'T LIKE some of the new irritations of the luxury hotels in Mexico City: The new charge for phone calls that used to be free. The custom of changing your dollars at 12.40 pesos. Instead of 12.49 which they give you at the bank half block away.

I think Acapulco hotel prices are much too high, considering the Mexican labor costs. And in Mexico City, 48 cents for tequila that costs a dollar a bottle and 40 cents for orange juice, produced by dollar-a-day Mexican farmers, is bad publicity.

* * * *

FOR MEXICAN atmosphere: Two hotels I like best in all Mexico are: The old colonial de Cortes in Mexico City; the Virrey de Mendoza in Morelia. I like to eat at the street tables, just off the plaza in Morelia. The chicken broiled over charcoal stoves is famous.

* * * *

THE BEST restaurant in Mexico City is the Rivoli. Order the pate of the house, Chicken Chitzenitza wrapped in a banana leaf and spiced with a ground herb something like paprika. Ask the orchestra to play "Caminante del Mayab"—the guitarist has a wonderful voice.

* * * *

THREE MEXICAN restaurants in Mexico City: The old Prendes for little crayfish in garlic butter; the new Fonda del Refugio for chicken in Morelia plaza style; Loredo's Colonial for almost anything.

* * * *

FOR LUNCH: The Lincoln Hotel, one of the best restaurants in Mexico; Circulo del Sureste for Yucatecan food (and get the Yucatan beer which is hard to find in the capital); the new elegant and inexpensive grill in the Del Prado Hotel. Especially when you get hungry for salads.

* * * *

THE WONDERFUL taxi drivers are no longer wonderfully polite. I don't blame them—they haven't had a raise in ten years. But I don't like it. A little bit of Mexico has gone. They are hard to find.

Ride the one-peso taxis on the boulevards. The man waving one finger in the air and taking on anybody who wants to ride. One peso from Chapultepec to the main plaza. A bargain.

* * * *

THE BEST SILVER is at India Bonita, next door to Wells Fargo. Expensive but the greatest designs. Best clothing at Peggy Pena's at the Mirador in Acapulco and at Vera's at the Bella Vista in Cuernavaca. The prettiest colonial town: San Miguel Allende, five hours north of Mexico City.

Still the best and most available country, I like it.

Pastime in Valley of the Sun

Barbara Koile, 17, ties her horse to a palo verde tree during a ride on the desert near Phoenix, capital of Arizona's Valley of the Sun, where it's Indian Summer all winter long.

Shades of Sarah Bernhardt!

BACK in the days of the rowdy West, Central City, Colo., had a reputation second to none. As the scene of one of the richest gold strikes ever made in the United States, it teemed with two-fisted prospectors intent on making a quick fortune, and ladies and gentlemen of somewhat shadowy repute determined to relieve them of it.

Today, Central City is a ghost town—a romantic relic of a romantic era. Teller House, a famous frontier hostelry, still stands. It was here that Antoine D'Arcy, lovesick, broke and thirsty, told his tale of woe for a drink. As he spoke, he drew the face of his beloved Madeline on the barroom floor, thereby gaining immortality of a sort.

MANY A FAMOUS name enjoyed the hospitality of Teller House. During President Grant's visit, the hotel paved its sidewalks with silver bricks, a modest enough gesture for a town known as the "richest square mile in the world." Mrs. Siddons, Edmund Booth and Sarah Bernhardt were among the noted players of the time who made the hotel their home during engagements at Central City's famous Opera House.

The Opera House is extremely well preserved and is now the scene for the Opera and Drama Festival held every year during July and August. This event reproduces the glamour and romance of the wild and rollicking bonanza days and features top names from the world of opera, stage and screen.

Black Hawk, named for an Indian chief, is another restored mining town five miles from Central City. The old Gilpin Hotel, the historic school and narrow board sidewalks are among the reminders of the boom days. A marker on the boundary line between the two towns is the spot where John H. Gregory made the strike that put Central City on the map. Since that initial yield worth $4, Gregory's diggings alone have produced more than 60 million dollars in gold.

CENTRAL CITY and Black Hawk are only 35 miles west of Denver, reached by Continental Air Lines DC-7Bs from several points in the U. S. If you're looking for a vacation with an Old West flavor, plus excellent facilities for fishing, hunting, hiking and riding, this district is made to order. You can also get into the spirit of the old days by prospecting for gold, or its modern equivalent, uranium.

Continental's round-trip fares to Denver via Gold Carpet Club Coach service are $86 from Los Angeles.

Hawaii in Bloom

Tourists to Hawaii are amazed to find more than 5,000 varieties of hibiscus. The red variety is the official flower of the Islands. Northwest Orient Airlines advises vacationists taking its Hawaii Air Vacations that the people there create new colors as a hobby, working over their plants much as the Dutch work on tulips. While the hibiscus blooms for just a day, picked flowers require no water or care to keep them in their original fresh beauty.

The Balance

By Lee Wakefield

Illustrated by Clyde Winslow

"GEORGE PERRY," I said when I finally had him on the telephone, "you are a dangerous idiot. Stop this experiment at once."

"Wilbur," said George, chuckling (he knows I detest my first name). "Don't get your blood pressure up. All we did was plant some ocean corvina in the Coachella Sea. At worst, they'll die out. If they live, which we expect, come out in a year or so and enjoy the fishing."

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," I said. "And you, in your abysmal ignorance, are tampering with nature's balance."

"Relax, Wilbur," said George. "Remember what I said about the fishing." He hung up on me. On ME!

In the face of such rude treatment, I should have washed my hands of the whole thing. For after all I, W. Charles Vanderk, am undoubtedly the foremost marine biologist in the world. But like many other brilliant men I enjoy the relaxation of sport fishing. So, between field trips to the Amazon, I went to the Coachella Sea. And for a few years George's experiment seemed successful. The corvina thrived, and several resorts sprang up along the shoreline. The best of these was the Western Iowa Lodge, where I stayed.

GEORGE WENT there also, and annoyed me by acting as if he were my equal. But I stopped that. I made sure that everybody knew exactly who and what I was. And to compensate for George's presence, the Lodge had Abel.

Abel was a melodorous ex-prospector who set himself up as a fishing guide. If one were careful about the wind, he was acceptable. He hardly ever spoke, and so proved an excellent companion. And he seemed to know the location of every corvina in the Coachella.

"Piranha?" asked Abel one day in response to my remarks.

I was amused at his ignorance. "Piranha are a river fish of South America," I explained. "They are sometimes called the Cannibal Fish, because of their large teeth and appetites and vicious nature. But read my next book. Then you'll know all about Piranha."

I missed the beginning of George's retribution by leaving on a field trip to the Lake of the Devil. This misnamed area is not really a lake, but a section of the steamy swamp that lies between the Amazon and the Orinoco, surrounded by fear and superstition. Closely connected to the sea, the waters are subject to extreme tides and in the dry season become quite saline. And the Devil that gave the area its name was only three inches long. It was a variety of Piranha which I named the Vanderk Piranha after me, its discoverer.

THE VANDERK PIRANHA was an exciting discovery. Noteworthy was the small size—never over three inches in length. Also they invariably chose as quarry the largest fish or game in the vicinity. I once saw them attack a crocodile. The reptile tried to escape by coming ashore, and was half out of the water when it succumbed. The Vanderk Piranha flopped onto the bank to strip their prey, and it took them two minutes and thirty-five seconds to reduce the crocodile to a skeleton. The Piranha looked ludicrous out of water, and I could see that the native belief that they actually came on land to hunt and attack animals was just a silly superstition.

The minute I returned to the Lodge I saw that George was in trouble. The corvina had started to grow. When introduced to the Coachella Sea, this species rarely exceeded eight pounds. Now the fishing contests at the various resorts were producing larger and larger prize fish. Ten pounds, fifteen, twenty-three; and when one angler came in with a 27-pound 9-ounce corvina, even George sensed that something was wrong.

Abel started spending all his time on the porch of his cabin, just looking at the sea. He refused to even go near the water. "Too big," he told me. How right he was, was proven in September. Two anglers hooked a fish that was too large to take in their boat, and they estimated its weight over a hundred pounds. In October a corvina attacked a skiff, overturning it and bruising one of the occupants.

THERE WAS A FUROR in the newspapers, and the state closed the Coachella to all fishing and boating. At this point, George came to me.

"Charles," said George, "we need your help. Our sport fishing scheme turned out to be a Pandora's Box."

A lesser man would have had his vanity flattered by such an admission. But in one as talented as I, vanity is out of place. "George," I said, "I'm glad you finally had the good sense to request my help. I know exactly what to do."

Abel had joined us, so I explained to both of them. "The Vanderk Piranha can acclimate itself to the temperatures and salinity of the Coachella Sea. As they always go after the largest quarry, a few of them in the Coachella will remove the

Bazaar of the 'Bizarre'

By the Shutterbug

EVERY ONCE in a while, this column sets up a photo bazaar to dispense the bizarre assortment of information or new items that have been accumulating in our bailiwick.

First is a seasonal note to winterize the darkroom wash-water tank. In winter time, the colder water coming out of our faucets requires a longer period of time to wash the hypo from our prints.

You can add Hypo Clearing Agent, a water soluble powder that gets rid of the hypo in a hurry.

SECONDLY, there's a new foldup flash unit with a clever gimmick that has just about reached dealers' shelves throughout the country. The reflector is on a swivel top so that it can be tilted to three bounce flash positions, with a click stop in each position.

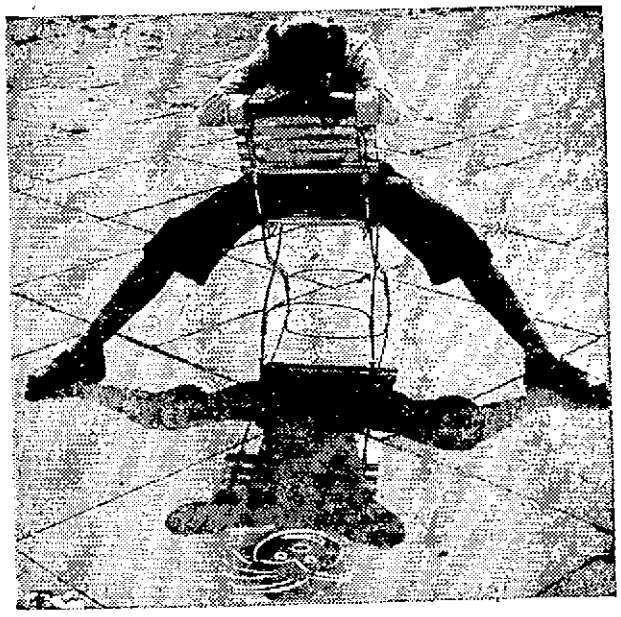

The Heiland Tilt-A-Mite, as the new unit is called, accommodates either subminiature M-2 or standard bayonet base flash-lamps with the flick of a switch. It has a B-C circuit so the battery will be good for at least a year with normal use. A built-in test lamp checks the condition of the battery, flash-lamp and circuit. To keep the unit compact and pocket-sized, the reflector folds up into a pie-shaped segment.

THEN, THERE'S NEWS in the flash-bulb field, as a new metal ingredient proves much more powerful than the 30-year standard, shredded aluminum.

The new ingredient is zirconium, an atomic age metal with many uses. You'll be finding it soon in the M-25, a subminiature flashbulb which gives off just about as much light as the Press 25, four times its size.

Sylvania engineers also have perfected a blue flashbulb, the M-25B, color corrected for daylight color film.

LONG BEACH CAMERA Guild will have a travel program, illustrated with colored slides, at 7:45 p. m. Wednesday in Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Old photo maxim, "Get detail in shadow area," is carried out here with sense of humor. Such tricks always are fun and will liven up album, can even win a prize.

. . . That Feller, Old Yeller

By Eleanor Avery Price

STATISTICIANS have it that our dog population is gaining in purebred pooches with pedigree papers and downgrading in the number of mongrels, the reason being that a prosperous people want dogs as well as homes and cars to keep up with the Joneses.

Fanciers of mongrels, which includes just about every normal child in America, can take heart, however, for the inimitable Walt Disney is putting the mutt right back on its pedestal!

It all started many years ago when a little Texas boy was saved from a killer sow by a "ketch dog" adopted by his father over his mother's protestations—a big, gotched-eared, ill-bred mongrel first found bedded down in the family cornmeal barrel.

THE BOY GREW up to become the father of Fred Gipson who wrote a book called "Old Yeller," based principally on his father's telling of the loyalty and bravery of the "ketch dog," plus some phases of frontier life.

A year ago last January, Walt Disney began auditioning for a canine star for his production of the book. He was looking for a rough-cut, rangy dog, the type that could well have offered protection to his family from the dangers of the wilderness.

His choice? A yellow, gangly dog that was some time previously bailed out of a pound for $3 by Frank Weatherwax, Hollywood dog trainer and brother of Rudd Weatherwax, owner of Lassie.

FRANK WEATHERWAX named his pup Spike and drew heavily upon his valuable time training it. However, despite talent, the dog was turned down again and again by Hollywood producers who looked with dismay at its heavy build and tough appearance. That is, until Walt Disney looked him over and promptly gave him a meaty lead in his production of "Old Yeller."

Be that as it may, Spike's superb performance as Old Yeller and his winning personality will endear him, even to the most discriminating canine admirer, as a wonderful, lovable, mixed-breed dog. And this cannot but help the cause of the "disappearing" mutt.

Copyright Walt Disney Productions

His real name is Spike, but thousands know him better as "Old Yeller," a Walt Disney movie star.

the new hot cereal that gives your family more protein than meat itself!

True! Ounce for ounce, not the finest sirloin you buy can give your family so much life-giving protein, of such high quality, as this remarkable new cereal.

The cereal "plus." More than just another cereal, this new combination of oats and wheat goes far beyond what you have expected and received from cereals in the past. Gives you more protein of high quality than any other cereal.

Betty Crocker says: "Here's a new flavor, creamy, yet nut-like. Such a delicious way to add important protein to the family's day. HOW TO

Join Wood to Get Maximum Strength

MITERED AND butt-joined corners can be strong if they have support. Patented fasteners (arrows), open and/or hidden dowels, or nails (on light stock) teamed with glue add strength. Metal fasteners are ideal for joints like these; they're made in many sizes.

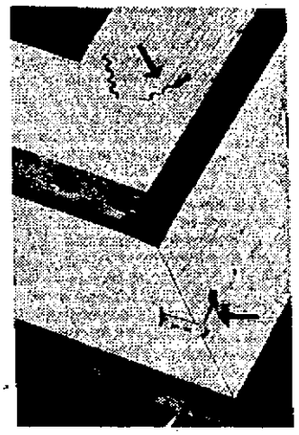

GLUE IS USUALLY the fastest, easiest and cheapest way to fasten two boards together. If job can use it, pick a joint that will give the largest glue area. A combination of glue and metal fastener—screws, nails, and so on—makes an exceptionally strong joint.

IN FACE GLUING and edge-to-edge joining, alternate the grain direction to help prevent warping.

THE SECRET to better wood joints is this: Take the time to make every joint fit perfectly. Speed is often to blame for mismatched miters, ill-fitting splines, sloppy rabbet cuts, and so on, which usually are beyond "fixing" with fastening, blocking devices, or putty.

THE CORRECT SIZE nail or screw also determines strength of joints. Screws hold better than nails; bolts hold better yet. Use nails three times as long as the stock being joined; length of screws is determined by thickness of the bottom board.

THE WAY WOOD grain runs can determine strength of some joints—mainly butt joints, the weakest of them all. Wood, when it's moistened, expands more across grain than with it. Keep grain directions parallel.

GLUE BLOCKS cut from scrap do two jobs in one: They add more glue line, which, in turn, adds more strength. Cut them square. Coat surfaces with glue and push blocks into joint with sliding motion so they seat properly. Metal angle braces do same job.

Some plants, like this camellia, have a floppy habit of growth and need support to keep them on up-and-up.

Straighten Up Slouching Plants

By Bob Gilmore

MANY GARDEN ornamentals, once they become established, have a habit of growing out of bounds. Although they may not necessarily sprawl all over the landscape they do have a tendency to grow crooked or lean away from the wind; vine-like plants may topple due to their being top-heavy; trees may require a bit of straightening up and even dwarf-like shrubs may flop over unless properly supported.

During the past few years many garden products have been introduced that will prove helpful in keeping your plants where you want them. A rather familiar training post is a redwood stake. These are available in various lengths or you may cut the long sizes to whatever measurement is required. The stakes should be driven well in the ground, especially if a fairly tall ornamental requires support. Regulation green-tinted plant ties should be employed for attaching the plant stems to the stake.

PERHAPS the most economical way of training specimen plants is to use a bamboo stake that has been dyed green. The color of the stake blends pleasantly with the foliage of the plant and is thus not objectionable. As a matter of fact, these bamboo stakes may be used in such a way that they can hardly be seen. Due to their small diameter, bamboo stakes may easily be forced into the ground. They are especially valuable for small plants, that have a sprawling habit of growth.

Covering a stucco wall or concrete surface with vinelike plants produces a very attractive appearance and certainly hides the bare surface. However, the vines must be supported or eventually they will tumble of their own weight. A rather ingenious product is a small cement disk about the size of a penny. Embedded in it is a small metal hook that may be bent to hold a stem. The disk is cemented to the stucco or wall and then the stem placed in the loop or hook formed by bending the wire.

FOR SMALL PLANTS that are lazy about growing straight up in the air two metal rods and encircling wire loops will prove ideal. The entire unit is sold in one section. You need simply press the metal rods into the soil, then place the plant

Gladiolus Is an Old Reliable

By Joe Littlefield

GLADIOLUS, a popular, reliable plant in the Long Beach area, should bloom within 90 to 120 days if planted now. Colorful banks of blooms on tall, sturdy stalks will result if the gardener prepares and plants the bulbs properly.

Dip the bulbs in a solution of insecticide spray recommended for control of thrips. Ask your nurseryman or garden dealer for the brand of insecticide that can be used safely.

Dipping insures better thrip control while roots are developing. Plant the bulbs about six inches deep to insure sturdy trunks.

WORK SOME bulb food into the hole for each plant. Group planting, consisting of dozen or more bulbs per group, furnishes colorful masses of flowers.

Most of us prefer to set out young annual plants from flats or pony packs. By this, about three weeks or more of fussing with young seedling plants is saved. However, if you haven't sown seeds of larkspur and scabiosa right where you want them to grow, you haven't had the thrill of watching those plants grow like a young forest and bloom fully. Because they grow tall, sow the seeds at the back part of the flower bed. Then take care of them as you would a newly-sown lawn, till the seedlings are about an inch tall.

YOU'LL GET a more even spacing of the plants if you mix the seeds in a bucket filled three-quarters full of steer manure. When you scatter the manure carefully, the manure acts as a spreader, preventing seeds from bunching together in clusters.

After the seedlings are about an inch long, thin out to about four- to six-inch spacing.

Tall, sturdy gladiolus is result of proper planting.

Tips on Gardening

GARDEN TIPS for the week . . . Peat has the capacity for retaining tremendous quantities of moisture. A mulch of this material tends to keep the surface cool, retards evaporation and protects the roots on hot and windy days.

For pot plans along coastal areas the following will succeed: geraniums, marguerites, petunias and fuchsias. The latter enjoy a cold shower every week or so. This treatment washes off the dust and raises the humidity.

Tomatoes are especially susceptible to damage from the tomato hook worm. You can minimize damage by growing the plants on trellises, thus making it more difficult for worms to get to the fruit.

TIE UP SLOUCHING PLANTS

firmly in the center of the loop made by the metal wires. This is a very neat arrangement and does not in any way detract from the general appearance of the ornamental.

A lightweight netting that looks like a fishnet may be attached to poles sunk into the ground. Vinelike plants such as sweet peas will then attach themselves to the trellis. The material will last for years. At the end of one season's growth it may be taken down and then used the following season.

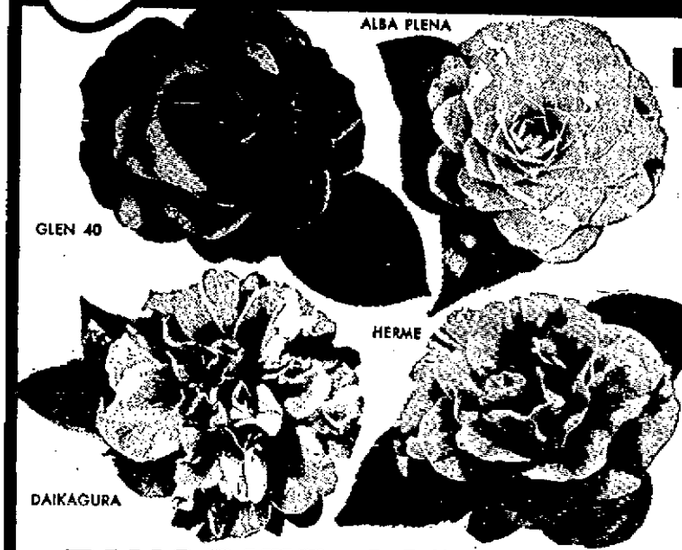

Plant ties made of wire embedded in tar and then surrounded with an attractive green wrapping will securely attach stems to supports. A simple twist of the wrist allows the plant tie to be looped around the stake and the stem and securely fastened. These are available in many sizes and a continuous roll can also be obtained at leading garden supply stores.

Shop for Dwarfs

While you can still plant bare root stock, shop at your nurseryman's for some of the lovely dwarf fruits which produce excellent fruit in a small space. Dwarf forms of apples and pears are widely available. These reach about 8 to 10 feet in height at maturity.

Ancient Tree of Montezuma

By Gladys Diesing

Author's Photo

Close rival in age to California Sequoias, Montezuma cypress of Mexico can be traced back for 2,000 years.

IN THE walled garden of an old Catholic church at Santa Maria del Tule, Oaxaca, Mexico, stands an old, old tree which is estimated to be at least 2,000 years old, making it a close rival of our own Sequoias. This is El Tule, a Montezuma cypress, one of many such old trees found in Mexico, their native habitat. Around the Castle of Chapultepec near Mexico City is a grove of more than 200 aged cypresses, and at Popotla in the valley of Mexico is another tree known as Arbol de la Noche Triste, Tree of the Woeful Night, under which Cortes is said to have mourned the plight of his defeated army. Many of these old trees appear in the legends of the ancient Indian tribes of Mexico who worshiped them as gods or goddesses.

The name cypress is a misnomer as the Montezuma cypress is not a cypress at all but a Taxodium mucronatum, of the same species as the bald cypress of our southern states. It is a tall, loose-branched tree with foliage similar to but sparser than that of our native redwood, giving an airy look to the crown. The trunk with its reddish-brown bark is widely buttressed at the base.

While the Montezuma cypress eventually reaches a size too large for a small lot, it is a beautiful tree to behold and has its place where space will permit. It is occasionally seen in parks and large estates. The tree pictured with this article is growing on the grounds of the Huntington Library in San Marino.

Southland's Short Story

outsize corvina and keep the rest within limits."

"No," said Abel.

I turned to him, amazed at his stupidity. "Abel," I said, "I am not in the habit of making mistakes. If you can ever show me the slightest imperfection in my plan, I'll make a public admission of error. Why," I continued, "you sound as if you thought me no smarter than George." George's face turned red, and Abel returned to his cabin.

GEORGE'S SUPERIORS readily admitted the brilliance of my plan and requested me to proceed. I did, and the results were exactly as I had foreseen. Inside two years not a corvina was left over twenty pounds, and the state reopened the Coachella for fishing and boating.

The Lodge celebrated this event and naturally asked me to be guest of honor.

"I accept," I said. "But you must invite Abel." Abel had not taken advantage of the reopening. Indeed, he still would not get closer than twenty feet to the water. Undoubtedly it was self-abasement for having questioned me, and I wished to show him I bore no grudge.

"Also, I will be expected to make a speech," I said. "I must insist on absolutely no interruption while working on it." The management agreed readily to my two provisions.

That evening I was polishing my speech, entitled "Nature's Balance," which explained the sometimes tragic consequences when this balance is upset by well-meaning but incompetent meddlers. My door flew open and I looked up, annoyed at the management for allowing this interruption. Abel stood in the doorway. One arm was injured, for crude bloodstained bandages showed through the shredded sleeve of his shirt. In the other hand he carried a dip net. In the net, tangled in the mesh but still squirming and tearing viciously at the cords, was a Vanderk Piranha. It was eighteen inches long.

The mail is bringing me so many inquiries about how to grow good dahlias that I think the information I gave last year on proper preparation of the dahlia bed is worth repeating. This should be done in February, even though your plants do not go into the ground for another couple of months.

Spade steer manure into the soil now and use a little bone meal because it requires considerable time to begin its work. At the same time, impregnate soil sulphur into the soil, 2 pounds to 100 square feet (a space 10x10 feet). Soil sulphur begins immediately to release minute quantities of sulphuric acid and, through a phase of decomposition that takes place, this sulphuric acid becomes the working element that releases other mineral elements which are not usually available in our highly alkaline soil. If you will prepare your dahlia bed in this way six weeks prior to planting, you should have marvelous sturdy dahlias in the fall.

Fundamentals of Transplanting

Soil should be thoroughly soaked around roots following transplanting. Simple rules assure successful job.

By John Ronson

ONE OF THE MOST important, but less familiar, gardening practices is transplanting. The process is certainly not complicated; it consists simply of moving plants from one growing location to another.

The rules governing transplanting are few, yet they must be followed carefully. Proper adherence to them will make it possible for you to transfer a bare patch of land into a living bouquet . . . in just a few hours.

Not all garden subjects lend themselves readily to being transplanted. Specimens with a single taproot such as a carrot or a parsnip, for example, are difficult to move. It should also be stated that fast growing annuals such as alyssum, Virginia stocks, nasturtium and other comparable plants grow so quickly from seed that transplanting is just not part of their recommended culture.

But for most types of garden ornamentals, transplanting is the way to save time, money and to accomplish better results faster. When and how to transplant and why are essential steps to an orderly and well kept garden.

THE BEST TIME for transplanting is during the coolest part of the day, preferably when the skies are overcast and when evaporation is at a minimum. Exposing the roots to the sun or wind for any prolonged period will lead to disastrous results. The ball of earth surrounding the plant roots must be kept intact, otherwise the roots will be exposed. This condition is usually responsible for the setback so often suffered when seedlings are transplanted.

Before setting the plants in their new position, it is advisable to thoroughly moisten the ground, then cultivate it when mellow. Moisture stored in the ground will move upwards through the root zone by capillary action.

AMATEUR GARDENERS often insist on picking out the largest transplants available. This refers not only to shrubs but also to seedlings such as vegetable and flower plants. This is not necessarily smart and often it may be the wrong thing to do. This is because the younger specimens usually transplant better, suffering less of a shock than the older plants. In addition, you will be wise to choose the bushy specimens, rather than the tall spindly ones.

Make certain that the soil is firmed well around the roots after planting. Otherwise, air pockets may form. This condition will produce a drying of the roots with a constant failure of the plant to absorb moisture from the soil; also, sufficient anchorage for the plant will be lacking. Then water well if the soil is dry and add a peat mulch to the surface to prevent drying.

For large plants you should make a water basin around the main trunk. This basin may be filled with water and the water allowed to subside; then fill again and add dry soil to bring the level of the planting hole up even with the surface. Adding dry soil or a mulch should prevent crusting and reduce surface evaporation.

MARY BOWER
Helps Glamorize Chicken

THAT FRIED chicken aroma which surrounds Eaton's Chicken House is sort of like radar. It helps you zero in on where you're going.

Anybody lucky enough to be driving or walking in the vicinity of 700 E. 45th St. (near Atlantic Ave.) is just naturally guided to Eaton's by that ummmm, good! fragrance.

Eaton's — owned by Charlie Eaton—is a large and decorous structure dedicated to glorifying the American chicken. Thanks to the careful coordination of Eaton, his personable manager-hostess Mary Bower and expert chef Gerry Javier, this restaurant puts out a $2.60 chicken dinner which is so glamorous that it causes Long Beach mamas and grandmamas to cheerfully admit they can't do as well.

THE PRICE includes choice of chicken broth, cream of tomato or cream of mushroom soup, or a giant tossed green salad with choice of dressing. The golden brown, disjointed and super-meaty chicken is served in stainless steel pans which keep it hot at the table. It is accompanied by creamy whipped potatoes with absolutely perfect old-fashioned chicken gravy and steaming hot biscuits with butter, honey and apple butter. Also included is your choice of Sanka, tea, coffee, milk, buttermilk or Postum and your choice of numerous elaborate desserts, from pies to custards and angel cake.

The chicken dinner can also be ordered a la carte for $2. A child's portion is $1.85. In addition, Eaton's features such complete dinners as the Toad in the Hole ($3.40), a filet mignon in a mammoth baked potato, and broiled stuffed jumbo shrimp ($2.75).

Fred Collins, an outstanding mixologist, presides over Eaton's beautiful cocktail lounge. Large banquet facilities are on the second floor, available for service clubs or private parties. Luncheon meetings are accommodated as well as dinner groups. The restaurant is open from noon to 10 p.m. Sundays; 4:30 to 10 p.m. daily. —TEDD THOMEY

February 23, 1958
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

LLEWELLYN E. THOMPSON, JR.—Our most important ambassador page 12

PIONEER PILOT Ruth Nichols, shown with Colonel F. G. Hook, has been flying since 1924, has set several distance and altitude records. Recently, with Colonel Hook as co-pilot, she became the first woman to fly above 50,000 feet.

I'll always remember . . .

'Get back into the air'

by RUTH NICHOLS

To the public, I suppose I often have seemed to be the original "flying fool." While flying over 140 different models of aircraft, I have piloted a plane in a plaster cast and steel corset, too impatient to wait for bones to knit from the last crash. I have frozen my tongue sucking oxygen at 60 below zero, six miles up. I have escaped twice from burning planes. I have clung to a life raft in cold, mountainous seas. And after each disaster there came the command from something deep within me: Get back into the air . . .

Recently I had to try my hand at flying a twin-engine jet plane taking off from Westchester Airport (N.Y.). I was among a small group of aviation enthusiasts who went out to inspect the new plane, a French Mauraine-Saulnier.

The French pilot was delighted when he found I could speak his language, aeronautically and otherwise. We were off with a whoosh, up in a flash and the pilot invited me to take over the controls.

Never before, even in those moments of heady exhilaration during my early flights, have I experienced the sensation of complete and incredible freedom that came as we streaked through the upper air in complete silence — no propeller sound, no vibration, only the glorious feeling of being suspended in space.

From a great height I looked back at the adventures of my life up to now, the heavenly highs and dismal lows, the eternal struggle to go on and up again, the fears, the doubts, the uncertainties — and all at once they seemed to fall into a pattern.

After years of asking myself why I was compelled to batter my body and spirit with this insatiable urge to fly, I seemed to find the answer. In this way only could I weld the two sides of my nature — the adventurous Viking spirit of my father and the humanitarianism of my Quaker ancestors. Through flight came joy, new perspectives, new frontiers of the mind and heart for the people of the earth.

When finally I depart this earthly sphere for good, I should like it to be in a final burst of flight, farther and higher than any human ever has gone before, somewhere in the infinite mystery of outer space, where at least I can see where I am going . . . ■

On Parade

On Monday a subject vital to our health and national welfare takes the spotlight when the National Food Conference meets in Washington, D.C. Here's what Charles B. Shuman, Conference Chairman and President of the American Farm Bureau Federation told PARADE:

"Americans need to eat better to live better. Many of us have drifted away from the traditional custom of parents and children eating together, overlooking the importance of the mealtime ritual in building family ties. PARADE's articles (pp. 6-9) will contribute to a better informed and healthier nation."

Today's cover consists of two photos by Peter Schmid paired to make a remarkable picture — quite apropos of Editor Jess Gorkin's article on U.S. Embassy conditions in the Soviet Union (pp. 12-14). To make the composite, Schmid's photo of U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson, Jr., was superimposed on a shot of policemen walking in Red Square.

One of the things that impressed Gorkin during his recent visit was the fact that American youngsters in Moscow haven't a decent place to play. One of their pastimes is walking the wall of the Embassy's rear yard, as shown below.

Can You Teach Your Baby To Talk?

You're a speech teacher long before your baby says his first word! "Mothers start influencing a child's speech from the day he is born," says Flora Rheta Schreiber in a fascinating new book, Your Child's Speech (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1956). "Mother's arms, the tone of her voice, the aura of warmth she creates—these affect the way a child breathes and eats. They also affect the way he makes sounds and learns to speak." Through food, baby first finds pleasure and makes happy gurgling noises called "comfort" sounds! Soon he murmurs vowel sounds as he plays.

● Teaching tips: As you hand baby a toy dog, say its chief sound—"awg"—then say "dog." He gradually mimics your words and your tone (is it sweet and low or twangy and high?). Don't try to hurry baby's talking. Early or late—when his ear, mind and muscles are ready—a healthy, happy baby will talk.

● It's a tossup who's having more fun—father or baby! Just remind Dad: No roughhouse on a full tummy or right before bedtime.

● When you're "expecting"—why do you sometimes get special cravings for certain foods? You'll find the answer to this and hundreds of other questions in Heinz authoritative new book, "The ABC's of Prenatal Care." For your free copy, send your name and address to Heinz Baby Foods, Box 28, D-23, Pittsburgh 30, Pa.

● There's twice as much protein in Heinz exclusive new High-Protein Cereal than in regular baby cereals. Let your baby enjoy this nourishing dish with the pleasant nut-like taste soon. To fix it, just mix with milk or formula.

● Why does Heinz have exclusive baby-food kitchens in the nation's garden spots, right where the finest fruits and vegetables grow? So Heinz specialists can select the pick of each crop and pack it at flavor peak. That's how Heinz Baby Foods get their famous better color, perfect texture and finer flavor.

● Baby's face in the mirror is good company! Put him where he can laugh and play with his copy-cat friend.

● Delicious new time-saver: Strained Potatoes in a jar. They taste just like baby's buttery baked potato—but let you forget that daily baking-peeling-mashing chore! Fluffy, smooth Strained Potatoes—a Heinz Exclusive—are a fine source of energy (which your baby needs in his business!), plus Vitamin B_1, Niacin and Vitamin C—for his glowing good health. Later on, Strained Potatoes encourage baby's first tries at self-feeding: they don't go sliding off his spoon!

IN THE PULPIT, the Rev. Rankin Shrewsbury begins service. Only 36, he is the pastor of Daytona Beach's oldest church.

BEHIND THE WHEEL, racing minister receives a trophy for setting speed record. At age 10, he drove a model T Ford.

This minister sets speed records

But religion is first with the Florida champ

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.

For the Rev. Rankin L. Shrewsbury, pastor of the First Congregational Church here, religion comes first — but auto racing runs a close second. In his few spare moments from the pulpit, the "sky pilot" pilots stock cars — and sets records at the wheel.

Two of his records are at stake in the International Safety and Performance Trials now being conducted here by the National Association for Stock Cars. Rev. Shrewsbury set the first as an unknown two years ago, borrowing a Ford Thunderbird and hitting 128.196 m.p.h. Last year, in a borrowed Pontiac, he was clocked at 139.9 m.p.h. This year, in a Pontiac again, he will try to beat his old mark.

The minister has been driving since he was 10, worked his way through seminary as a mechanic. He sees nothing unusual in his choice of hobby, thinks supervised racing is good for teenagers because it teaches safety as well as skill and has a moral lesson. "The good, safe driver," he says, "is the one who practices the Golden Rule." ■

WITH HIS FAMILY, the minister poses for a camera portrait. Besides church duties, he heads a mental-health association.

ON THE TRACK, Rev. Shrewsbury flashes by finish. This year, he was chosen city's "Young Man of the Year" — as a minister, not as a racer.

THE AUTHOR, an anthropologist, is a leading observer of U.S. family life.

A new look at your food habits

by MARGARET MEAD
Professor of Anthropology, Columbia University

Editor's note: Tomorrow President Eisenhower will open the National Food Conference in Washington. The conference of physicians, nutritionists and business leaders aims at reawakening the public to diet essentials. In timely recognition of this objective, PARADE presents the article below. Also see the special article starting on page 8.

Twenty years ago, it was said that one-third of America's people were ill-fed. Since then, there has been a tremendous change in nutrition. We have become a people rich in easily available good food. And still most people worry about what to eat, when to eat, how to eat and how much to eat.

When it comes to food, Americans are confused — needlessly confused and even sometimes dangerously confused. Nutrition has to do simply with a balanced diet for health's and enjoyment's sake. Yet Americans often decide what to eat not on the basis of what they like or what's good for them, but on the basis of attitudes having little to do with food.

Thus, the question of eating becomes bound up with questions of good and evil, duty and punishment, parents and children, love and hatred, beauty and health.

The Housewives' Dilemma

Think of the confusions surrounding the ordinary housewife:

She is urged to show her love for her family by feeding them lavishly on things they love. At the same time, she is supposed to show her love for them by remaining slim and girlish. She is told that, if she wants her husband to live long, she should be sure he doesn't overeat. If she is concerned about her children's growth, she should limit sweets and be sure the youngsters get plenty of proteins. But if she wants to show she loves them, she should feed them cookies and cake.

What causes these contradictions? They are not so hard to understand when we go back into history. America's attitudes toward food have remained the same, while our actual food situation has shifted from too little and too poor in quality to adequate supplies.

From our New England ancestors we've inherited a grim attitude toward food: if you eat enough food that is good for you, but doesn't taste good, then you can eat a little of the food that tastes good, but is not good for you. Much of this attitude lingers on; things that taste good, really good, are suspect.

In the Southeast a different attitude prevailed. A person could say, "I don't like onions" or "onions don't like me," and the loving mother and wife would listen. It was considered bad form to force people to eat food with which they were not on good terms.

California and parts of the Southwest presented a third picture. Vegetables and salads and brown bread became accepted by people who had moved from the East and wanted to enjoy the food and climate of a land of sunshine.

Then immigrants brought with them their own national attitudes towards food: Swiss children were made to eat a little of everything, to be good citizens. German children had to finish everything on their plates or expect the leftovers back again and again. French children were overstuffed and then required to learn moderation, on which enjoyment of food was believed to depend. Italian children were lovingly urged to eat and eat and be strong.

Finally, appetizing pictures of food, glowing with color and described in colorful terms like crispy, golden, bright red, have had a great influence also. Men and children wanted the kind of food they saw in pictures; women served food that looked like the pictures. People came to trust their eyes as much as their sense of taste.

So the aim of the modern housewife has come to be to make food look — and to some extent, taste — like something it isn't. Then she can appear to be the kind of housewife who simultaneously provides nourishing food, delicious food and food with not too many calories. Nutrition and eating have grown poles apart.

How, in this maze of contradictions, can we make sure that children develop good eating habits and that their parents eat enough — and not too much — of good, nourishing food? Research on the psychology of eating habits has shown that the best way is to clear away the thicket of attitudes that are not directly related to food.

Five Important Pointers

These are things to remember:

- Food should not be used as a reward or bribe, or be withheld as punishment.
- Food should not be used to prove to children that you love them after you have been cross and irritable to them.
- Food should not be depended upon to bring home a husband who feels his wife has grown tired of what he has to say.
- Food should not become a battleground, pitting mother against child.
- The more ways food is used to do something besides give straightforward, hearty enjoyment, the more the danger that children will develop wrong eating habits, that adults will undereat or overeat. The most sensible attitude toward food is a simple enjoyment of good nourishing meals and a developed sense of how much is enough. Psychology has shown that this attitude develops in families which enjoy together a varied but balanced diet and do not clutter up meals with emotional scenes.

In today's world, where there is so much variety in food, a wide-ranging appetite is a safeguard. Very narrow food likes can be dangerous, but a few dislikes don't matter very much. But genuine enjoyment of food for itself is the best guarantee of making good food choices. ■

55 important facts you should know about food

Confused about what foods are best for you? Here is an experts' primer of straight talk about diet and health

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

As Dr. Margaret Mead points out on page 6, the U.S. is a land where food is plentiful — and yet Americans have astonishing eating problems. One family in three, for instance, fails to get the right amount of calcium. One in four is short of vitamin C. One in six doesn't get enough vitamin A.

What causes these deficits in diet? Not shortages of food, in a land of bumper crops. Not shortages of funds, in a land as rich as ours. The main reason is a shortage of information — in spite of millions of words published annually about food.

Many Americans simply don't know what to eat. Some are slaves to outdated ideas about food left over from history. Others cling to misguided beliefs which have no basis in science. Some skip from fad to fad. Most, perhaps, are just plain confused.

What are the facts about the food you eat? Authorities at the National Food Conference, meeting tomorrow in Washington, will try to spell them out. Here, in advance, are the basics suggested to PARADE by nutrition experts. They outline the fundamentals of diet and set the record straight about food fads. Taken together, they add up to 55 important facts about food every American should know.

"HARMFUL" FOODS — Do they really injure your health? This is how experts answer:

1) Mixing starches, proteins and fats at the same meal is not harmful. In fact, it is practically impossible to avoid doing this in a well-balanced meal.

2) There is no sound evidence that eggs, butter and milk cause hardening of the arteries or heart trouble.

3) White bread is not harmful to the body. Many white breads are enriched with milk nutrients.

4) Salt is not fattening. It serves merely to retain fluids in the body. And iodized salt is vital in preventing goiter, a disease of the thyroid gland.

5) There is no universally accepted evidence that chemicals used in processed foods are harmful. These chemicals still are under careful study.

Which bread is more healthful, white or whole wheat?

"HEALTH" FOODS — Are they really more valuable than other foods? Here's what experts say:

6) Yoghurt is nutritionally as valuable as the milk from which it was made.

7) The "magic" attributed to blackstrap molasses is unfounded. Nutritionally, it is no more valuable than diluted sugar sirup.

8) Soybeans are a good source of protein, but the idea that they have special life-giving properties is not accepted.

9) Vegetable juices contain no more nutrients than the vegetables from which they were taken.

10) Nutritionally, honey is equal to ordinary refined sugar, but no available evidence indicates it is better.

FOOD IN OTHER FORMS — Are our soils depleted? What damage is done by fertilizing, processing, freezing, cooking? The experts tell you:

11) Overall, U.S. soils do not yield second-rate food. Soils vary, and Americans eat foods grown in many areas — thus benefiting from "trace elements," or minerals, which occur in those areas.

12) Chemical fertilizers and insecticides, when used scientifically, produce foods fully as nutritious as those produced by so-called "organic" fertilizers.

13) Frozen foods have essentially the same nutritional value as fresh foods.

14) In canning, the vitamin content of food is preserved to a large extent.

15) Canned citrus juices are likely to have more uniform vitamin-C content than fresh citrus fruits. That's because canners must meet rigid standards and the content of their products can be controlled.

16) Prolonged cooking of foods is likely to destroy their vitamin content.

17) Boiling vegetables and fruits in large amounts of water does wash out vitamins. Vegetables should be prepared with a minimum of water; the water left should be used in soup.

WHAT TO EAT WHEN — Should your intake change with age? Are bedtime snacks harmful to digestion? Can dieting damage your health? The experts say:

18) If you reach your proper weight at age 25, you must decrease your intake 10 per cent every decade to age 55 to maintain proper weight.

19) Dieting without medical supervision can lead to sickness and even endanger life.

20) An excess of one type of food can lead to trouble.

21) A pound of body fat taxes your circulation just as though it were a 1-lb. sack of sand.

Oils, fats and greens: how often should you eat them?

22) A fat man breathes two or three times more per minute than a thin man. That's one reason his heart and lungs are likely to "wear out" sooner.

23) Except for growing children, midnight icebox raids can lead to obesity.

24) A good substantial breakfast can help you work better in the morning and cut down irritability.

25) A good, filling dessert actually can help your waistline — by decreasing desire for snacks.

26) Heavy eating before bedtime may tax the digestive system and bring on discomfort.

27) A pregnant woman does not need additional calories during the first five months of her pregnancy.

28) A nursing mother does need enough calories for her own nutrition, plus enough to replace the milk nutrients taken by the baby.

FOODS TO GROW ON — How much food does your child need? Which ones furnish the essentials? What does balanced diet do for his hea' ? The experts say:

29) A growing girl aged 10 to 12 needs almost twice as much food as her grandmother, aged 55 or older.

30) A growing boy aged 15 to 19 requires as much food as a 35-year-old heavy laborer.

31) Milk and cheese, which provide calcium, are needed for bone strength and tooth development. After age 16, milk products probably are not so important as in earlier years.

32) Most cheese is on a food-value par with milk. Cheeses supply much the same nutrients and can be used as a milk substitute.

33) Soft ice cream supplies most of the value of milk but does not have milk's butterfat content.

34) Leafy vegetables — lettuce, spinach, cabbage — are the most important source of vitamin A, which helps to keep your child's skin smooth and aids vision. They also supply some vitamin C and minerals.

35) Roughly the same nutrients are present in other vegetables. Potatoes also help maintain the body's acid-alkali balance.

36) Meat, fish and fowl are important sources of protein, fat and the B vitamins, which are valuable in preventing diet diseases like beri-beri.

37) Vitamin C, found mainly in citrus and other fruits, is needed to help maintain your child's blood vessels, build healthy gums and keep the body's glandular network functioning properly.

38) Vitamin C also is found in cabbage, other leafy vegetables, bananas, cherries and apples.

39) The sugars in these fruits are just as valuable to the body as refined sugar.

40) Cherries contain the highest percentage of natural sugar — about 20 per cent of total volume. Apples contain 18 per cent, most other fruits 10 to 12 per cent.

41) In addition to vitamin B, meats contain iron, important to the manufacture of red blood cells.

Here's where you get iron, calcium and protein. How important are they in adult diets?

42) Meat juice is nutritionally less valuable than meat itself, in spite of stories about its healing powers.

43) Pork is the highest in vitamin B-1 content of all meats.

44) Mineral content in the meat of young animals is higher than in meat of older animals. This is why lamb chops are a highly recommended item of diet.

45) Fatty beef can contain more calories than lean pork.

46) Nuts contain high-quality nutrients. Walnuts are highest in certain valuable unsaturated acids.

Is much nutrition destroyed when these are cooked?

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Is fish really "brain food"? On the subject of long-cherished beliefs, the experts say this:

47) Fish is a valuable food, but it will not make you any smarter.

48) Such bizarre food combinations as ice cream and pickles are not harmful.

49) Warm milk at bedtime may taste good, but it has no special curative powers.

50) Spinach contains iron and some vitamin A, but otherwise has no special virtues.

51) Alcoholic beverages have little effect in cooling or warming the body.

52) Large quantities of cool drinks in hot weather do not affect body temperature significantly.

53) Good-quality hot dogs and hamburgers are better for children than sweet carbonated drinks.

MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL: Asked to sum up their findings on two additional facts, the nutrition experts suggest you remember these above all:

54) Good nutrition depends on balance — of what the experts call "The Basic Seven."

55) These include meat, fish and poultry; whole grain and enriched flour products; leafy green vegetables; yellow vegetables; citrus and other fruits; dairy products; oils and fats. Some of each of these should be included in your diet every day for the best possible eating in terms of your health. ■ memo: to U.S. CONGRESS AND NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV from JESS GORKIN, EDITOR OF PARADE

subject U.S. Embassy in Moscow

EDITOR GORKIN (standing) gets first-hand briefing as Ambassador Thompson shows areas outside Moscow closed to U.S. personnel.

I recently overheard two American boys living in Moscow say to each other:

"Tim, how much longer do you have to stay here?"

"Eight months more, Mike."

"Boy, are you lucky! We still have 13 months to serve in this jail."

Tim and Mike, both 12, are the sons of American Embassy personnel assigned to Moscow for two years. What the kids say reflects the view of virtually all Americans stationed here under the most adverse and restricted conditions. Aside from the presence of secret police and travel restrictions, living is extremely difficult because of below-par housing and insufficient recreation facilities for children and adults.

The 10-story Embassy building on Tchaikowsky Street is only about five years old. But it looks ancient. The brick walls are crumbling, floors squeak and the plaster is cracking. The only items sure to be replaced are the many microphones the Russians conceal in the building.

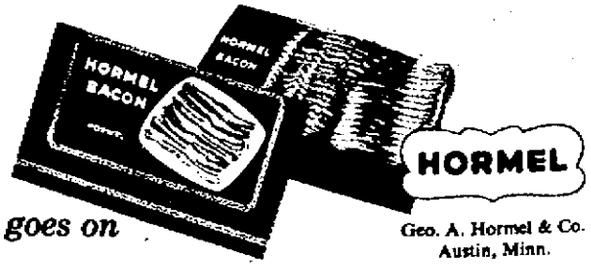

This "new" edifice was constructed in a hurry by order of Josef Stalin. Shortly before his death, he reportedly glanced through his Kremlin window one day and noticed the Stars and Stripes flying from the U.S. Embassy across Red Square. Stalin gave the order to "clean up the scenery"—which meant moving the Embassy to its present site, well out of optical range. The Soviets were in such a hurry that they used Red Army troops for construction gangs which worked in shifts around the clock—even in the dread cold of the Russian winter.

Llewellyn Thompson, Jr., our able ambassador (see cover) is in no official position to attack this difficult question. But he, and others, are aware of the answer to this morale—and prestige—problem. What is it? Turn to page 14.

Who Says The Pope CAN'T BE WRONG?

"The Pope," Bill Brown declared, "is just a man—like you and me. How can you Catholics believe he can't be wrong?"

Bill's challenge came as no surprise to his Catholic friend, Ed. Johnson. For Ed. knew, as most Catholics do, that the doctrine of Papal infallibility sounds presumptuous and incredible to people who do not understand it.

"Remember, Bill," he replied, "what Christ promised Peter? ... that His church would be divinely protected against error — that 'the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' That promise, Bill, was to the first Pope, and all the Popes have been his direct and lawful successors, heirs to the same promise."

But, Ed. went on to explain, Christ did not make Peter incapable of human error. And Papal infallibility does not mean that the Pope is always right in all things. It does not mean his freedom from all human shortcomings. Nor does it make him an unerring authority on science, the state of the nation, or how to build a house.

"The Pope," Ed. continued, "is divinely preserved from error only when acting in his official capacity as successor to St. Peter, and promulgating to the whole Church a decision on a matter of faith and morals. Even then, three conditions must apply:

"(1) The Pope must be speaking ex cathedra ... that is, from the Chair of Peter, in his official capacity; (2) the decision must be for the whole Church; (3) it must be on a matter of faith and morals."

The Pope, of course, has no authority to introduce a new doctrine. He is not the author of revelation—only its interpreter and expounder. He has no power to distort a single word of Scripture, no more right than you or I to break a divine law. His function is to protect and preserve divine truth and hand it down unchanged to future generations.

"Today, Bill, as you know," Ed. Johnson concluded, "the Christian world is divided by numerous differences of doctrine. It is a great assurance for Catholics to be able to depend upon the teaching and interpretation of one whose office is of apostolic origin and divinely protected against error."

If you would like to know more about the Pope, the origin of his office, the doctrine of infallibility, why his headquarters is in Rome, and other interesting facts, write today for free pamphlet "Why Millions Call Him Holy Father." New program could be 'a real step toward easing tensions'

Tackling the problem of poor living conditions, low morale and the prestige of U.S. Government personnel and their families in Moscow should receive top priority. As one Embassy official told me: "If the Kremlin will cooperate in alleviating this situation, it certainly could be interpreted as a real step toward easing tensions between ourselves and the Soviet Union." Last month's U.S.-Russian agreement on cultural and other exchanges was such a step. This would be another.

Here are four possible approaches:

1) A recreation center for U.S. personnel is basic. Today, the 45 American children must play in the rubbish and mud of the walled-in yard at the rear of the Embassy building.

Twenty miles from Moscow, the Embassy has a "country home" for recreation. Even though it is totally inadequate, it is booked for weeks in advance by fun-starved Americans.

Two difficult hurdles stand in the way of the recreation center. To build it, we must obtain a long-term lease from the Russian government and an appropriation from the U.S. Congress.

Closet-sized Rooms

2) Better living quarters are urgently needed. In addition to the apartments in the Embassy building, some staff members live in America House — a former funeral home located next to a cement factory. This building has a few residential cubicles about the size of "walk-in" closets in the United States. The Kremlin refuses to allow the 85 members of the American Embassy to rent living quarters elsewhere in Moscow.

3) Travel restrictions should be lifted. In addition to their unique housing problem, American Embassy personnel are confined to a 25-mile radius of the Soviet capital — and even parts of this zone are closed to them. Excellent recreation areas are within the closed zone. In order to travel outside the proscribed area, Embassy personnel must submit a note to the Soviet Foreign Office and follow a prescribed route. On one occasion, an Embassy group was given permission to drive to a nearby town. En route, policemen were noticed at various points along the road. Suddenly the car had a flat tire and the driver stopped to fix it. Within a few minutes two police cars sped up to see why the Americans had not passed the next check point within the expected time.

4) Constant check by Soviet secret police is a real harrassment. Embassy staff members are followed wherever they go — even shopping. In recent years, hidden microphones have been discovered at the Embassy. This unremitting watchfulness applies to all U.S. embassies in Iron Curtain countries.

Ambassador Thompson is greatly concerned about his hard-working staff. He knows that the lack of recreation and other diversion is extremely hard on morale, but he cannot make headway against the faceless, tone-deaf Soviet bureaucracy.

The Ambassador himself lives at Spaso House, formerly the home of a wealthy pre-revolutionary Russian merchant. The house has handsome appointments, including a ballroom suitable for entertaining. Three times a week his garden and ballroom are used for kindergarten and on other occasions for ballet class.

No stranger to Russia, Thompson was in Moscow during the dark days of World War II when Hitler's armies hammered at the city's gates. He was then secretary and consul in the Embassy and the fact that he stayed behind when other Embassy officials moved to Kuibyshev, the provisional capital, greatly impressed the Russians.

Today, at 53, career diplomat Thompson fights the cold war with quiet determination. He begins his day at Spaso House listening to an early morning BBC broadcast and reading the State Department daily news bulletins. He next takes a lesson in the Russian language — even though he speaks it fluently. He usually winds up his day at the office at 7:30 p.m., after which he may attend a reception or visit with other diplomats. The Thompsons have two daughters, Jenny, 8, and Sherry, 4. Mrs. Thompson's daughter by her first marriage goes to school in the States.

FAMILY GROUP in Spaso House includes Ambassador and Mrs. Thompson, daughters Jenny and Sherry. Sprawling 21-room official residence is hard to heat in the winter.

Thompson is soft-spoken, almost self-effacing in his manner, and the State Department considers him one of its top-flight diplomats. He has shown unusual ability to deal with difficult situations in his previous posts: Ceylon, Switzerland and Austria.

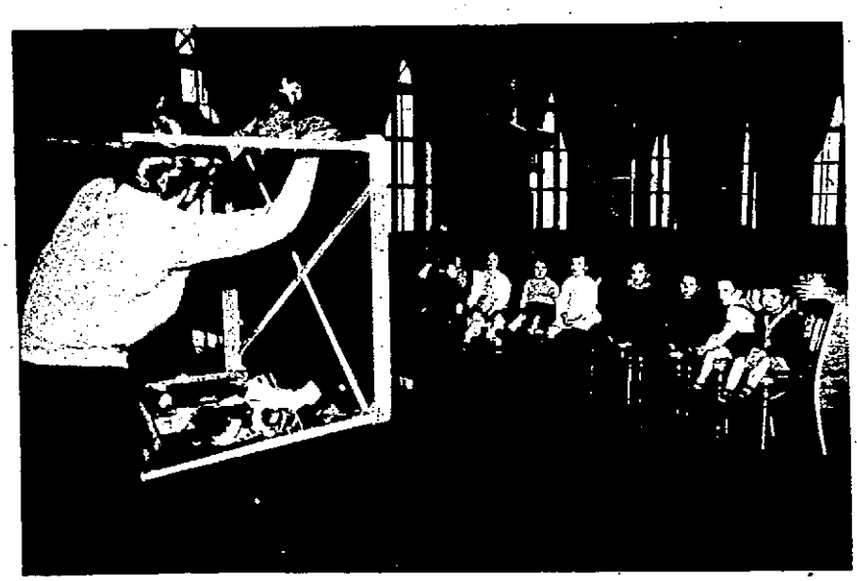

There is no question he could do an even more effective job in Moscow if the numerous harrassing situations were reduced. The United States would like to abolish all restrictions for Embassy personnel on a reciprocal basis. But the Kremlin will not agree.

The following statement by Senator Homer Capehart of Indiana underscores the need for action:

"When visiting Moscow last fall, I was shocked by the unpleasant living conditions endured by our Embassy personnel and their families. Overcrowded apartments, dilapidated buildings, restrictions on travel, lack of recreational facilities, constant surveillance.— these are just a few of the factors that plague our nation's official representatives in Moscow. Inevitably, this prison-like life takes its toll of the spirit and energy of our people in this key post. An adequate recreation center, for example, would be a good place to start.

"I sincerely hope immediate steps will be taken — in Moscow and Washington — to provide some relief for our official family in Moscow. Their welfare should be the concern of all Americans." ■

BLONDE GOVERNESS improvises Punch-and-Judy show for pre-school youngsters. Ballroom of Spaso House also is used for parties, ballet lessons, church services.

BACKYARD GARDEN of Spaso House is setting for a game of ring-around-the-rosy. Children have West German governesses. Older children attend overcrowded school.

ERIN O'BRIEN is her real name

Movie moguls said she had 'no talent'—

MONA LISA smile—with an Irish flavor—may reflect Erin's memories of early rebuffs.

ıntil she proved a hit on TV

HOLLYWOOD.

Most talent pickers here have terrible batting averages. Through the years studio executives have "passed over" stars like Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe, Kim Novak, Bing Crosby, Spencer Tracy, Cary Grant.

The latest example of their "no talent" classification is Erin O'Brien, a 23-year-old, dark-haired Irish beauty who was born here, but had to go to New York to be discovered.

Erin, the first of Vincent and Betty O'Brien's 14 children, has a naturally lyrical voice. As a youngster she performed regularly with the Long Beach Philharmonic Orchestra. After graduation from St. Anthony's parochial school, she became one of the famous Walter Schumann Voices. But true to the Hollywood tradition of missing what lies under its nose, this colleen was consistently ignored — until last year.

In New York, on Arthur Godfrey's talent scout TV program, she sang one number, Only a Rose. She won hands down, and was signed for a week on the Godfrey morning show. From there, she went to Steve Allen's program — and fame. TV had discovered her.

Erin made so much news, that a well-known dramatic actress, Erin O'Brien Moore, demanded that Erin change her name. "How can you force me to change my real name?" Erin asked justifiably.

"My lucky break," says Erin, "was meeting Liberace. He talked his manager, Seymour Heller, into managing me. Since then, I've been off to the races."

"Not Enough Experience"

Heller turned down a six-month NBC-TV contract and submitted Erin for the lead in Warner Brothers' Marjorie Morningstar. "She doesn't have enough dramatic experience to play Morningstar," said director George Cukor, "but she's much too talented and beautiful not to be put under contract."

Ironically, the very same people who had ignored Erin O'Brien before now signed her for leads in TV westerns (Colt 45, Maverick and Cheyenne). A few months later her salary mounted to $500 a week; she was awarded the movie role of Andy Griffith's college girl friend in Onionhead; and Coral Records signed her to a contract. She has guested for top TV shows with George Gobel, Art Linkletter and Bob Hope.

Erin O'Brien finally has made the grade. But, success has its price. For Erin, it is her singer husband Jim Fitzpatrick and their two sons. This year between TV, stage, recording and motion pictures, she'll have little time with her "boys." "But in this business," says manager Heller, "an entertainer's got to strike while the iron is hot. Beauty doesn't last forever, not even with the luck of the Irish." ■

High-Hat Hamburgers

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

Start today's recipe with a sure favorite — chopped lean beef (familiarly known as hamburger). But serve it dressed up in a brand-new way with crisp poppy-seed pastry and a velvet-smooth sauce enlivened with sharp cheese and mustard. It's a dish to remember for year-round enjoyment. Begin dinner with hearty, piping-hot tomato soup. To accompany the High-Hat Hamburgers choose two colorful vegetables such as broccoli and carrots. Instead of salad, serve radishes and scallions (spring onions). And for dessert: lemon tapioca cream and packaged cookies.

ROLL PASTRY dough to ¼" thickness; cut six 5" circles. Coffee-can top is a perfect cutter.

RECIPE FOR HIGH-HAT HAMBURGERS

Pastry:

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup milk (about)
- poppy seed

Meat Balls:

- 1½ lbs. ground beef
- ¾ cup rolled oats, uncooked
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon oregano
- ½ cup milk

Sauce:

- 1 tall can (14½ oz.) evaporated milk
- ½ lb. sharp cheddar cheese, cubed
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard

For the pastry: Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk, stirring only until flour is moistened. Roll out to ¼" thickness; cut six 5" circles. Brush lightly with more milk; sprinkle with poppy seed. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in hot oven (425°) 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown.

For the meat balls: Combine all ingredients; shape into 12 balls; chill. When ready to cook, roll in flour; brown in hot fat over medium heat. When browned, simmer over low heat about 15 minutes.

For the sauce: Scald milk over low heat. Add cubed cheese and mustard. Continue cooking about 5 more minutes, stirring to blend well.

To serve: Place meat balls on pastry circles and top with cheese sauce.

PARADE QUIZ

What's your leisure-time IQ?

by EARLE F. ZEIGLER
Dept. of Physical Education for Men,
University of Michigan

With more leisure time on our hands than ever, many Americans nevertheless troop to work on Monday morning and wonder: "Am I really getting as much fun out of my week ends — and evenings — as I should?"

Today's quiz should help you answer that question. On the right are four questions in each of five scientifically recognized categories of recreation. Question No. 1 in each category seeks to find if you are the spectator type, No. 2-if you engage more actively, No. 3 if you are a whole-hearted participant and No. 4 if you are an outstanding participant.

Answer yes or no to each question. Only yes answers count, and score as follows: 1 point for Question No. 1 in each category; 2 points for Question No. 2; 3 points for No. 3; 4 points for No. 4. A no answer counts nothing.

Put down your total number of points below each category then rate yourself in the box on the opposite page. Give the test to the whole family—and see who is using leisure time best.

Now add up all your points. From 35 to 50 — you're getting nearly every second of fun out of your leisure time. From 24 to 34 — you're using spare time wisely, knowing when to quit for more business-like things. From 14 to 23 — you either have too much interest in one kind of recreation or are only a passive spectator in all types. Less than 13? Wake up — and live! ■

Beverly Shufflebarger

She's been married 14 times

by PATRICK DALTON

Beverly Shufflebarger, a small, gray-eyed blonde from Norfolk, Va., maintains that it's easy for any girl to catch a husband.

At 48, Beverly has hooked 14. She married her first in Oakland, Calif., when she was 16; she divorced her last a few weeks ago in Los Angeles.

Well on her way to becoming the world's champion divorcée, this wispy woman insists she will try one more marriage, her 15th. If that doesn't work, she'll call it quits.

"The problem," she recently explained to me in her lawyer's office, "is not in finding a husband. Any girl can do that. Husbands are a dime a dozen. The trick is to stay married. Somehow I just haven't been able to manage that. I've really tried. But I seem to marry the wrong men. I have two sisters who are happily married, but I can't seem to make it. Yet, I'm just as normal as they are."

None of Beverly Shufflebarger's 14 marriages has lasted more than two-and-a-half years. They range from one night to 30 months, have been lived in Key West, Yuma, Cleveland, Wilmington, Oakland, Tucson, Pasadena, practically every section of the country. In her 14 marriages, Beverly has known 12 husbands. "Two of them married me twice. The second time, each was worse than the first. I guess there's a quality in me that simply brings out the beast in men."

Where does this reed of a lady (5' 1", 90 lbs.) manage to meet prospective husbands?

How to Locate Husbands

"Most of all," she says, "on the job, in eating places or churches, although one of my husbands was a good friend of another husband of mine. I've worked," Beverly confides, "as a restaurant hostess, as a hat-check girl in a night club ("I later married the owner") and as a saleswoman. When I hear about a woman who can't find a husband, I know that she's simply working in the wrong job.

"All men want to get married. They've got it on their minds. Take Mr. Christopher, one of my early husbands. I met him in Philadelphia in a Western Union office. We were both sending telegrams. He struck up a conversation and invited me next door for a cup of coffee. Then, while we were drinking it, he suddenly said, 'I think you're awfully cute. Why don't we go to Wilmington, Del., and get married?' I said, 'Okay!' And that's how it happened. It only lasted a night; but that should give you a small idea of how anxious most men really are to get married."

Although several of her husbands have held well-paying jobs — one was a welder, another an engineer, another a real-estate agent — Beverly received alimony from only three. One paid $25 a month for six months, another $25 a week for three months. A third paid $25 a month for one year.

Once she divorces a husband, Beverly drops him completely, except for using his name. She remembers most of her married names: DeMilo, Monroe, Colton, Howard, Mangone, O'Malley, Christopher, Rosecrans, Avery, etc., but only nine or 10 of the husbands that go with them. "Oh!" she exclaims, "how I used to mope over those men. Now I just banish them from my memory."

Having married men of different religions, nationalities and pursuits, Beverly says she is prepared to make only one generalization about husbands. "At the start," she says, "they're all kind and considerate. But after a few months, they begin to act as if they're trapped. That's what happened to me. Maybe if I'd had children, it would have been different."

Luck of a Loser

Beverly Shufflebarger dresses demurely, uses make-up sparingly, talks softly. There is nothing forward or provocative in her behavior. When she admits that in addition to her marriages she also turned down 60 other marriage proposals in the past 32 years, she does so modestly. She asserts that she's always been honest with her husbands, informing each of his small army of predecessors.

She seems genuinely aggravated about the failure of her marital attempts and doesn't like to discuss them. "I'm just an unlucky woman," she says. "My parents separated when I was four. I was raised by my grandmother and never knew what a happy home life really was."

Has she ever been told, I asked Beverly, that her compulsion to marry in such haste and quantity might be neurotic?

"Yes," she admitted. "A doctor told me once that I was a glutton for punishment. And the judge who granted one of my divorces said, 'Marriage is a bad habit with you, and I don't think you'll ever break it. You're the only 12-time loser I ever heard of. It's a disgrace.' That judge was so mean, he made me cry. Somehow, all the men I get mixed up with are mean." ■

Foreign students help others understand us

by JAMES M. DAVIS
Director, International Center, University of Michigan

Dr. Davis is one of the planners of International Students Day, which occurs Thursday at Lansing for the 4,000 foreigners attending Michigan schools of higher learning.

I was on a round-the-world trip, visiting young people in 25 countries who had studied at American schools. Before I left Ann Arbor, a Japanese government researcher working for an advanced degree at the University of Michigan asked me to look up his mother, wife and two small children in Tokyo.

While visiting his family in Japan, I told them, through an interpreter, of their loved one's work, how he was living and spending his time.

His family were extremely polite. They nodded, they smiled. In their hospitality, I sensed a genuine warmth. Yet somehow I felt that they were not too interested in my report. I was a bit puzzled, until his petite wife explained.

"You see," she said, graciously, "we already know what you tell us. He writes three times a week. In fact, we know more about his present activities than we did about his work here in Tokyo."

Once again, sitting with this family which treated me almost as a member, I was struck with the value of our International Exchange Service.

Letters this Japanese researcher was sending home had paved the way for friendship between an American and his kin. More than 40,000 foreign students in our schools are writing home each week to eager audiences.

Each year between 15,000 and 20,000 of these American-trained people return home, often to positions of responsibility and influence. They may not applaud everything American, but certainly they understand our motivation and sincerity of purpose.

Their opinions of us will count more than those of the professional diplomats, who think in terms of balances of power rather than the mutually common urge for neighborliness among the world's free peoples.

Our exchange student program is a fractional investment in dollars and cents. But its dividends are priceless. How else can you value America's future? ■

$17,000 helps buy happiness for farsighted Texas family

ROBERT FRENCH
Houston, Texas says . . .

"Mutual of Omaha is the only source of income we have"

"If it were not for this policy, I do not know how we could have existed," says personable young ex-engineer Robert French, who became disabled by arthritis just two years after his Mutual of Omaha protection went into effect.

To families without this wonderful income protection, such a long-term disability almost certainly would bring financial disaster. But Mr. French, his attractive wife, and eleven-year-old son are looking forward to a secure and happy family life in the years to come—thanks to the check they receive each month from Mutual. Totalling more than $17,000 in the past seven years, his monthly income will continue for as long as Mr. French is so disabled—*even for life!

No wonder this Mutual policyholder says, "I unhesitatingly recommend your company to all my friends."

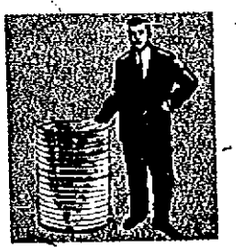

SOME PLANS PAY FOR ONLY 3 MONTHS . . .

NOT ENOUGH!

. . . when you consider that 1 out of 2 persons now disabled has been disabled 6 months or longer!

OTHERS PAY FOR UP TO 2 YEARS . . .

STILL NOT ENOUGH!

. . . to cover a really long-term illness, accident or operation!

But Mutual of Omaha pays up to a LIFETIME*

THAT'S REAL LONG-TERM PROTECTION

Yes, you receive Mutual of Omaha's cash payments each month for as long as you're totally disabled by accident or confined to home or hospital by sickness covered by your policy

. . . EVEN FOR LIFE!

Don't let long-term medical bills sink your family budget

It's a fact . . . most families simply can't afford a long-term sickness, accident, or operation! Yet 1 out of 12 families faces medical bills totalling more than 20% of its income during the coming year! Don't let yourself be bankrupted by unexpected disability! Find out about Mutual of Omaha's income protection plan. It allows for long-term hospitalization . . . and long-term disability at home . . . and pays from the very first medical treatment during covered disability.

ADM. BURKE WARNS:

Half of Fleet to Be Obsolete

By BILL BROOM
Independent, Press-Telegram Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—Uncle Sam is plowing full speed ahead on a nuclear-powered guided missile fleet for the Navy, half of whose ships will be obsolete in five more years.

The new ships will be better than anything the enemy—or our allies—have. They will incorporate every principle of the atomic age.

But at the present rate of construction, the new models will be far too few to replace World War II vessels which will be approaching decay by 1963.

Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, says the nation will be in "very serious trouble" by the mid-1960s unless more nuclear-age ships are built.

One hundred three of the Navy's present fleet of 967 ships will be dropped out of commission by June 30, 1959. More importantly, 450 of the 864 remaining will soon be 20 years old.

Two decades is considered a full life for any ship by Burke and other naval authorities. Submarines, whose hulls deteriorate more rapidly, last an even shorter period.

* * * *

THE REPLACEMENTS under construction are glamorous. All the new fighting vessels will carry at least one brand of missile. Some, including the cruiser U.S.S. Long Beach, and especially submarines, will be nuclear-propelled.

Atomic power gives not only unlimited range and flexibility of operation but also permits full-speed maneuver.

Most of the Navy's punch today is concentrated behind the muzzles of these major ships: 15 attack aircraft car-

HST, Adlai Assail GOP for 'Failure'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Harry S. Truman and Adlai E. Stevenson ripped into the Eisenhower administration Saturday night as tainted with failure and responsible for an economic slump at home and sagging confidence abroad.

Hundreds on hundreds of party partisans, assembled from over the nation, roared approval as the pair of veteran Democratic war horses jumped to the political firing line.

This was the start of the 1958 campaign to strengthen the Democratic grip on Congress in next fall's elections.

* * * *

TRUMAN ACCUSED the Eisenhower administration of imposing five years of "economic misrule" on the nation. The result, said the peppery former President, has been a "Republican recession" in this country and a "crisis of confidence" overseas.

Stevenson, who tried twice for the White House and fell short, slashed at the Republican record as "stained by heavy failure in many areas." He, too, singled out what he termed declining economic and military strength and "the loss of confidence in us abroad."

* * * *

AND, IN A PREVIEW of what the country can expect from the Democrats in the coming campaign, this same theme throbbed through speeches of other party spokesmen — such men as House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senate Leader Lyndon Johnson, a pair of Texans.

It was a switch from the party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners to a gala "Harry S. Truman Dinner." Upwards of 3,000 Democratic big wheels, party leaders said, shelled out $100 apiece to eat filet mignon, wash it down with wine, help fill Democratic coffers and cheer every jab at the GOP.

Many came in formal dress, others in business and informal attire—in such numbers that the ballroom at the Sheraton Park Hotel was too small to hold them all. Half the crowd was in the banquet hall beneath.

Governor Warns on Ideology

VAN NUYS (UP)— Gov. Goodwin J. Knight warned Saturday night that the "whole concept of capitalism" is now facing its most serious tests in the battle against Communism.

In an address at a Van Nuys Chamber of Commerce meeting, marking the 10th anniversary observance of a Chevrolet Fisher Body plant, Knight discussed for the most part, General Motors Corporation's part in economics of the nation and California.

"We know that capitalism has been benefiting mankind and nations," he said, "but, because it has been functioning so well so many years, there are many who mistakenly think that it cannot be overpowered by an alien ideology."

* * * *

THE GOVERNOR complimented GM on its scholarship program and said he believes business "has a vested interest in seeing more people educated to take over the increasingly complex jobs of today's industry."

Earlier, Knight said in Fresno that his recommended three-per-cent pay raise for civil service workers may face tough going in the Legislature. He spoke at the California State Employees' Association convention.

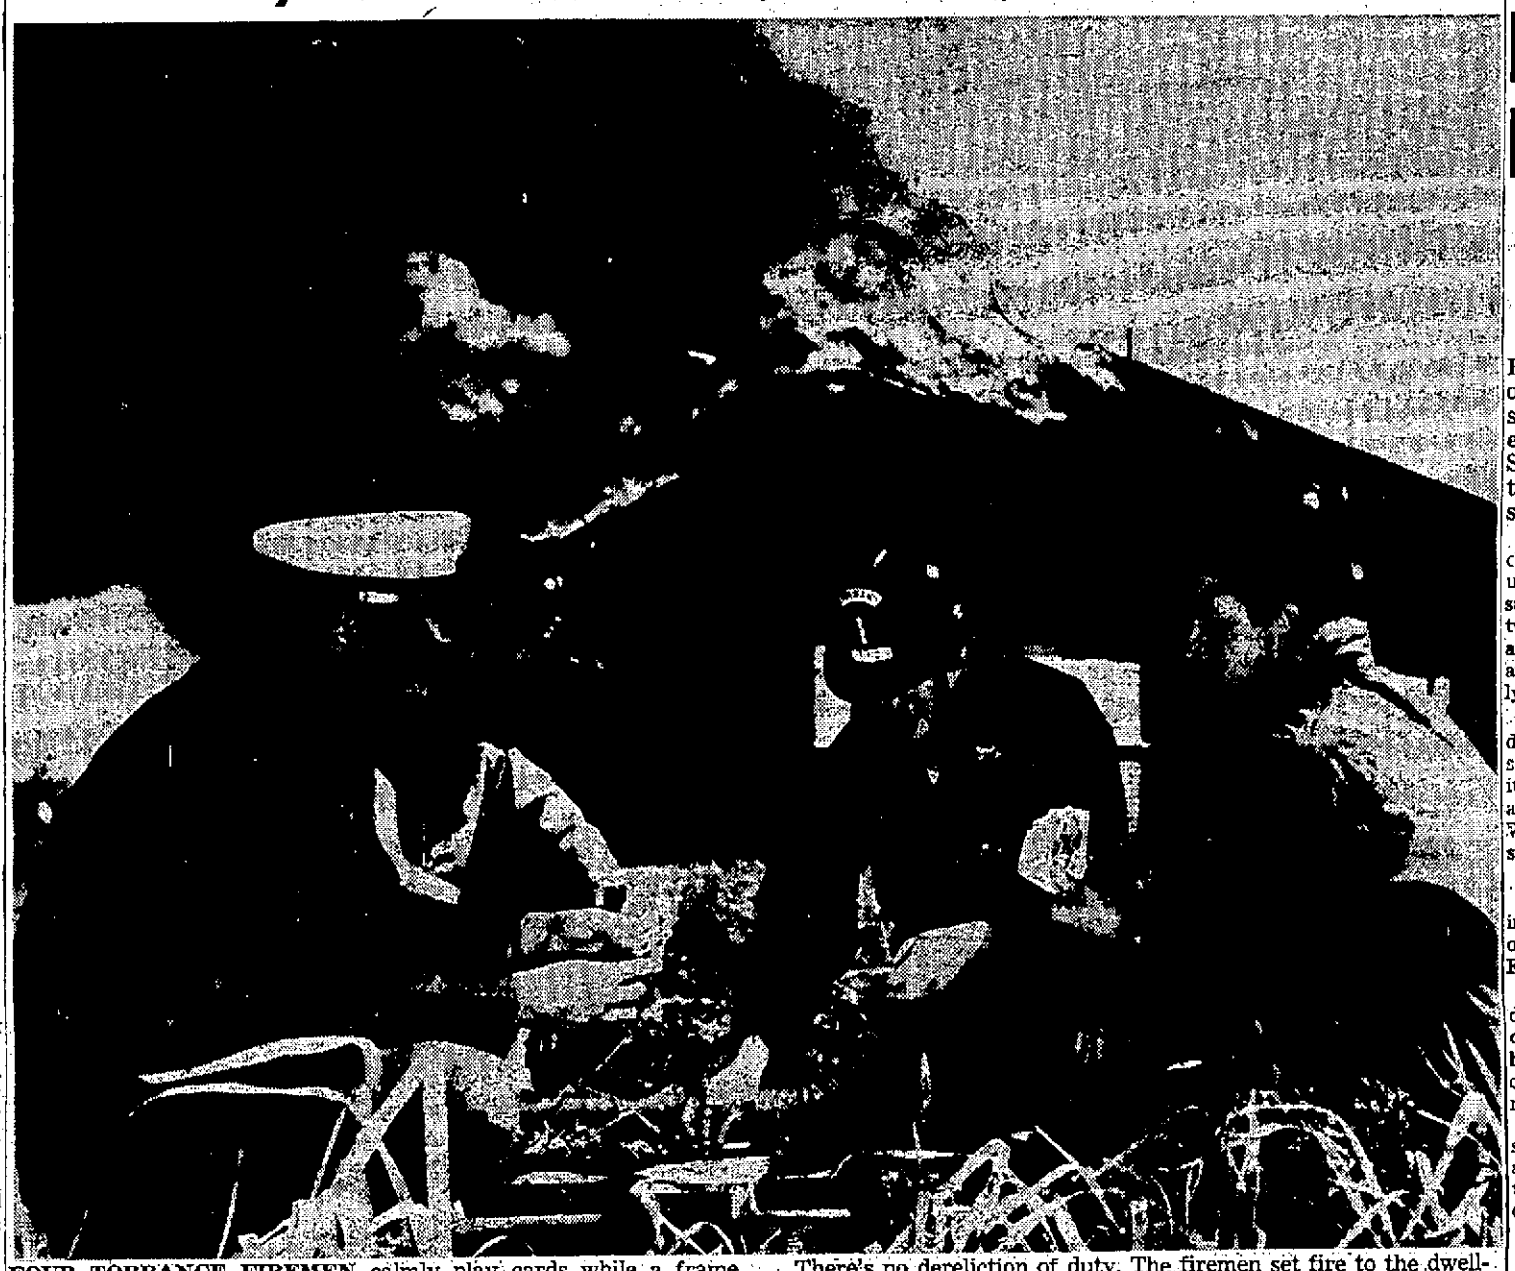

L.A.C. Says: Women in College

Considerable furor has been caused by the suggestion that there be greater restrictions as to the number of women permitted to attend co-educational schools. The professor of journalism at Syracuse University started the furor. It is his method of solving the overcrowding of our colleges now and the tremendous increases expected in the immediate years ahead.

He bases his suggestion on two points. (1) Men need the college degrees more than women, and (2) most women have less sensible or less demanding reasons for a college education. At present, about a third of the students in college are women. Total college enrollment last year was 3,200,000. At present rate that number will double during the next 10 years. Present facilities and instructors cannot take care of

Firemen Burn Down House for Training

TORRANCE—Firemen turned arsonists here last week, but it all was in the line of duty.

The smokeaters starfed a score of blazes in a frame house at 2620 W. 182nd St. Then they set about putting them out.

The structure, located on land planned for an elementary school site, had been condemned as unfit for further use. So the Board of Education gave the Fire Dept. permission to burn it.

* * * *

SMALL FIRES set in various parts of the building gave the blaze-busters experience in coping with problems they're likely to encounter in protecting valuable property.

"A week of work like this is worth five years of fighting accidental fires," said Fire Chief J. J. Benner.

The firemen finally let the house burn to the ground Friday. They had planned to do it Wednesday, but were prevented by a heavy rainstorm.

"Our matches got wet," Benner explained.

Cop Killer Suspect is Ex-Patient

SAN BERNARDINO (AP)—A man held on suspicion of murdering a policeman was identified Saturday as a former patient in Arkansas, Louisiana and California mental hospitals.

Police said fingerprints identified him as Lester Dean Bonds, 39, of Clinton, Ark.

He was booked on suspicion of murdering Detective Russell Grower, 34. Grower was shot Friday when he and two other officers went to a shack in a canyon near Chino to investigate tire thefts.

Bonds was arrested early Saturday in a nearby house.

* * * *

ARRESTING officers said he told them his name was Jefferson Davis, that he was a cotton picker and could not tell them anything about the shooting.

Court records show Bonds was committed to Patton State Hospital here in 1952 after threatening to shoot a Riverside bartender. He escaped in 1953.

Police said their next encounter with him was when he climbed a cliff and rolled a boulder onto a patrol car, breaking a deputy sheriff's leg. The officers said he stabbed two other deputies with an ice pick before being captured.

Business Is Picking Up

A $470 cash register, containing about $150 in cash and checks, was "lifted" Saturday from a service station at 2295 Santa Fe Ave. by a man who drove up in a pickup truck, grabbed the register and fled before the startled attendant could stop him, police reported.

Britain, U.S. Set on Bases

WASHINGTON (UP) — The United States and Britain agreed Saturday on terms for basing 60 U. S.-built 1,500-mile nuclear missiles in England and Scotland.

At the British government's request, authorities tried to impose a 48-hour secrecy blackout on the agreement so that it could be announced to the House of Commons Monday by Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

Before the unprecedented secrecy plan went into effect, however, newsmen in Washington and London were briefed on the historic pact's key terms.

Midwest, East Hit by Thaw

By United Press

A winter "heat wave" thawed much of the eastern half of the nation Saturday, posing possible flood threats from the melting of heavy snows.

But another cold wave—mild by comparison to the extreme cold of the past week—moved through the Midwest into the East and was expected to lessen the flood threat temporarily over the Ohio Valley and the Northeast.

* * * *

FOLLOWING behind the fresh sweep of arctic air, however, was a mild front which shot the mercury to 60 degrees at mid-day at Dickinson, N. D., where normally the temperatures would be below freezing. The warm front, flowing across the nation's mid-section from the West, was expected to rocket temperatures upward for most of the weekend in the Midwest.

Meanwhile, the arctic blast—after plunging temperatures to near zero in northern Minnesota and Michigan—pushed toward the St. Lawrence valley and the northeast, where the

U.S. Manned Spaceship Orbit Seen

ATLANTA (UP) — Dr. Ernst Stuhlinger, research chief of Army missile program, said Saturday the United States can blast a manned spaceship into orbit within five years and send a rocket to the moon 20 years from now.

Stuhlinger, who played a crucial role in the launching of the U. S. Explorer satellite last month, said these achievements are possible under a timetable that "sounds and looks reasonable today." But he added that "I'm afraid the Russians will beat us" to launching a manned rocket.

He said that to overtake the Russian lead in rocketry, the "many excellent (missile) teams at work now" must be "joined and directed by one central agency."

Formation Flies Into Foggy Hill

Craft Hit Near Red Bluff; Two Fall in Flames

RED BLUFF (UP)—Four Army helicopters out of a formation of seven smashed into a fog-shrouded California hillside here Saturday, demolishing three of them and killing six crew members.

The Sixth Army, which claimed to have no information until hours after the crash, said that three-man crews of two of the 'copters were killed and that the three men in another helicopter were slightly injured.

The fourth whirlybird was damaged but managed to land safely and the Sixth Army said it could be repaired on the spot and continue to Ft. Lewis, Wash., the destination of the seven.

* * * *

THE HELICOPTERS were in Flight Two of three flights of seven craft each which left Ft. Riley, Kan., for Ft. Lewis.

The Sixth Army reluctantly disclosed that the two deathcraft had burned when they hit the hillside. Apparently the other crashed helicopter had not caught fire.

The crash scene, 10 miles southeast of Red Bluff, was in an almost inaccessible area and the Tehama County sheriff's office sent a posse to the scene.

* * * *

The Sixth Army said that the helicopters had been flying in fairly good weather when they suddenly ran into a thick bank of fog during a rainstorm and crashed. The craft did not run together in the air, the Sixth Army said.

Sixth Army headquarters in San Francisco confirmed that six of the crewmen were killed, but refused to disclose further details. However, a check with sheriff's officers and civilian pilots who flew over the crash scene indicated crews of two of the choppers perished when their craft exploded into flames.

* * * *

HERB DENNIS, operator of of a flying service in Chico, Calif., south of here, flew over the wrecked aircraft a few hours after they ploughed into the rugged hill country.

Dennis said three of the undamaged craft had made landings nearby.

AF Forced to Drop Missile Job After $34 Million Spent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Air Force spent 34 million dollars developing an antimissile missile it was forced to discard, according to testimony made public Saturday by the House Armed Services Committee.

Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, deputy chief of staff for research, told the committee the Air Force dropped its Wizard antimissile missile one day after Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy's order last month, to press work on the Army's Nike-Zeus missile instead.

The committee made public a censored version of his testimony, given at a closed-door session Wednesday.

* * * *

IN EARLIER testimony, Putt called McElroy's order premature and voiced doubt that the Zeus could successfully combat an enemy missile attack.

Under further questioning Wednesday, Putt estimated it would take about a year before enough information is gained to determine whether it would be wise to put the Nike-Zeus system, costing around six billion dollars, into operation.

He said there is "a terrific amount of development work still to be done" on radar equipment.

Putt said the Air Force started preliminary work leading up to the Wizard in 1946. Out of its 34-million-dollar investment, he added, it achieved a "technological breakthrough" on high-powered transmitters and made numerous developments that will form "the foundation for whatever system is finally evolved to do the antiballistic-missile job."

Release of Putt's testimony coincided with what appeared to be a developing interservice squabble over which branch has the best antimissile missiles.

Putt said he doubts that the Nike-Zeus could successfully combat a Russian missile attack.

On Jan. 18, McElroy had told the Air Force to keep working on detection and control systems it was planning for the Wizard. But he said the Army would proceed with work on the Nike-Zeus as the nation's prime antimissile weapon.

L.A.C. Says:
Women in College

this increased demand. They, too, must be doubled—greater restrictions placed on student enrollment.

At a time when unemployment is spreading one hears the argument that working wives should leave the employment ranks so men could take their jobs. With approximately a third of our working force women, it is argued our unemployment figures include too many two-income families. The old argument that the woman's place is in the home is being repeated more generally.

It is doubtful these arguments will have much effect. The fact is, employers find women workers more dependable than men in the jobs they hold. As to college education it is argued that it is important for the woman to have a college education because she spreads it to the whole family. It is suggested that more rigid screening of all students would be the best way to cut down college enrollment and thereby eliminate those who are less likely to make maximum use of college facilities.

The reluctance of some universities to expand student enrollment is shown in the annual report and president's message of Caltech. It says: "It appears that our most important contribution to national strength will be to select a few superb students and provide them with educational opportunities of very unusual quality."

Caltech is of course a great scientific school. It is not comparable with the great state and private colleges which prepare students for many other important vocations. Many of these vocations are adaptable to women as well as men—some more so. Some now have rigid requirements for entrance. Others are more lax. But the requirements are the same for women as they are for men. It would seem reasonable that a choice of students should be based on requirements of ability rather than sex.

California is doing much to take care of the ever increasing college population. Its state colleges located throughout the state are now taking care of the demands. They are taking the load off the more glamorous universities and providing as good educational facilities in most subjects as are found in the universities. But many other states are far behind in this activity.

One college observer said: "Which is more important—that the mother have a college degree or that the father have one." Another said: "It would be better to bar stupid men from college than it would be to bar intelligent women." These points are being widely discussed in colleges throughout the nation. —L.A.C.

Thaw Follows Cold Air Across Midwest

mercury climbed above freezing Saturday for the first time in many days.

The mercury shot into the 40s from southern New England to Virginia in advance of the arctic air, which was expected to develop cold wave conditions over portions of New York state and trigger about 1-3 inches of new snow over western New York.

Patches of light, sometimes freezing, rain marked the arrival of the chilly air and, in parts of western Pennsylvania, snow borne on northwesterly winds of 40 miles per hour in gusts cut visibility to fractions of a mile.

WARM MOIST air swept out of the western gulf regions, jumping temperatures into the 60s across Dixie and breaking a prolonged seige of cold and snow throughout Dixie.

Locally heavy rains erupted in a band from New Mexico to the mid-Atlantic states.

Embezzler Ready to Face Music

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—John James Tobin, who planned eventually to seek election as mayor of Youngstown, Ohio, waived extradition Saturday for his return to the Ohio city to face a $250,000 embezzlement charge.

The 29-year-old insurance adjuster admitted freely to police and reporters that he had engineered a false claims scheme that netted thousands of dollars from a Newark, N. J., firm.

"I audited one phony claim for $57,000 and was praised for the way I handled it," he said. "But they did finally wise up. It's cut and dried. They got me fair. I knew they'd catch up with me."

Tobin, who was to have taken office last month as a Youngstown city councilman, was arrested Friday night in a Houston apartment. His election campaign manager, Paul E. Shade, 30, escaped. Shade is charged with aiding and abetting an embezzlement.

SEATON REPORTS TO CONGRESS

Progress Seen in Desalting of Sea Water

WASHINGTON (UP) — Interior Secretary Fred A. Seaton reported Saturday that "significant progress" has been made in the past year on reducing the cost of converting saline water to fresh water.

Rapidly increasing use of water within a few years "may make adequate provision of pure water our greatest domestic problem, perhaps even the greatest problem of the world at large," Seaton said.

* * * *

HE MADE the statement in a report to the President and Congress on the work of the Office of Saline Water.

Seaton indicated the need for a proper perspective on costs of conversion of saline waters.

"The actual cost of large-output conversion of sea water today by conventional processes is $2 to $3 per thousand gallons," he said. "In recent months some optimistic announcement of conversion costs running as low as 10 cents to 20 cents per thousand gallons have been made, but these have been carefully investigated by the department and have been found to represent only a minor portion of the total costs."

He said that scientists have made such a start on the problem of converting salt water into fresh "that the initial period of exploratory research in the laboratory must now in part be replaced by pilot-plant operation and field testing of the more promising processes."

* * * *

THE MOST promising of the conversion methods now under development include several distillation and membrane-separation processes, and one form of salt-water separation by freezing. Seaton said pilot-plant work is needed to work out these processes, "and in part is already in progress, in order to explore their economic feasibility and potential fields of application."

Some of the best processes, Seaton said, may be adapted to supply an individual farmstead or home, others to furnishing millions of gallons per day to a city or an industry.

* * * *

LABORATORY and economic study already has narrowed the field from some 20 processes to five broad groups:

Distillation through artificial heat; solar heat distillation; separation of salt by membrane processes; freezing and other chemical or electrical means of separation, including solvent extraction.

Two modified distillation processes, one based on vapor-compression, the other on multiple - effect evaporation, progressed during the past year to initial field testing in December at a seashore location at the test station of the International Nickel Co., Harbor Island, N. C.

Seaton also reported that the potentialities and limitations of solar distillation have been outlined, and investigation of ways to use nuclear heat for sea-water conversion is under way.

STIMULATION of technical interest outside of government was apparent, Seaton said, in the recent international symposium on saline water conversion.

The symposium was held last November under the joint-sponsorship of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council and the Office of Saline Water.

Burke Urges More Ships

Atom Fleet Vital, Says Navy Leader

riers, 10 anti-submarine carriers, 110 submarines, 14 cruisers and some 200 destroyers.

Today's nuclear force consists of three submarines—the Nautilus, the Seawolf and the Skate. Only three guided missile ships are operational — the cruisers Boston and Canberra, and the destroyer, Gyatt. They are conventionally powered.

* * * *

NUCLEAR-POWERED ships under construction are the Long Beach and an aircraft carrier, both scheduled for completion in 1961, and 12 submarines.

The Navy had planned to ask for a second carrier this year, but instead put 300 million dollars into anti-submarine ships. Now it is seeking funds from Congress for the first components of another carrier, for an atom frigate (destroyer leader), and more subs.

Besides the three nuclear subs on the seas and the 12 in shipyards, four more have been authorized, including three for the Regulus missile and one as an attack sub. The supplemental budget just passed by Congress calls for the first three to also carry the Polaris missile.

Another five subs—four attack and one a Regulus II launcher—are sought in the fiscal 1959 budget soon to be considered by Congress.

Nuclear power is only one side of the new Navy. Missiles are the other. All atomic-powered surface ships will be equipped with them, but the Navy is also converting conventional cruisers and frigates into missile-bearers.

* * * *

THERE IS LITTLE criticism of the Navy for not having a larger missile fleet in the works, because missile technology is too recent. Some congressmen are raising the question of whether there should not now be an acceleration. Adm. Burke would like to double the production rate of submarines, frigates, and destroyers.

Here is the outlook in the near future:

The next missile vessel to hit the waves will be the cruiser Galveston, first of three cruisers being converted to handle the Talos anti-aircraft missile. It will be finished in the fall.

In the autumn of 1959, an advanced model of the Terrier missile will appear on the first new frigate of the Farragut class. Ten such frigates are under construction, another eight have been authorized. All are conventionally powered.

* * * *

ABOUT THE SAME time, three more converted cruisers will join the Canberra and the Boston. They will be equipped with Terriers also. An additional three cruiser conversions have been approved.

Thirteen destroyers equipped with the Tartar missile will be ready in 1960 and 1961.

Three subs are now being built to carry the 600-1,000 mile Regulus II ship-to-shore guided missile. One is the atomic Halibut and the others the conventionally powered Grayback and Growler.

The U.S.S. Long Beach will be the Navy's only ship equipped with both attack and anti-aircraft missiles. It will carry the long-range Talos AA weapon, the medium-range Terrier and the Regulus II.

Besides the nuclear frigate and the five atomic subs, the fiscal 1959 budget requests money for starting 14 other new major ships and converting eight.

* * * *

Now operational — three atomic submarines, two conventional subs with Regulus I guided missiles, two converted cruisers, and one destroyer.

In the shipyards or in current requests—24 submarines, one carrier, one cruiser and one frigate.

Conventional with guided missiles — 11 cruisers, 18 destroyers, 24 frigates and two submarines, all requested for construction or actually being built.

Within 10 to 15 years, the Navy sees a need for 150 atomic-driven ships and another 200 with surface-to-air missiles. All combat vessels would have either anti-sub aircraft or anti-sub missiles.

Anaheim Cadets Warship's Guests

Thirty-nine members of the Anaheim Union High School Cadet Corps got a glimpse of life aboard one of the Navy's newest types of ships—the frigate USS Wilkinson—Friday off Long Beach.

The Wilkinson, skippered by Cmdr. Oliver S. Dwire, is the tactical flagship of Rear Adm. Glynn R. Donaho, commander of Long Beach-based Destroyer Flotilla 3.

The cadets saw the frigate from her firerooms and engine rooms, deep down in her hull, to her bridge towering more than 60 feet above the waterline. They witnessed depth-charging and the firing of the ship's automatic-loading, rapid-firing guns and saw how the warship lays down a smoke screen to conceal an amphibious assault.

* * * *

THE WILKINSON has firepower far beyond a standard destroyer, submarine-detection devices and weapons more complete and modern than those of specialized A/S destroyers and radar and combat-information installation superior to that of most cruisers. She is all our destroyers rolled into one—and more added.

The Wilkinson's engine plant has many advanced features never before used in warships. Her boilers deliver steam at 1,200 pounds per square inch, compared with 600 pounds for destroyers. Her main turbines develop 80,000 horsepower, as against 120,000 for new U.S. cruisers. She can make better than 35 knots and can stay with fast carriers.

* * * *

THE WARSHIP is 493 feet in length, has a 50-foot beam and standard displacement of 3,640 tons. All living spaces are air-conditioned and berthing and messing facilities have been enlarged and improved greatly over those of standard destroyers.

The Wilkinson is the third frigate of the Mitscher class to be commissioned. She originally was called a destroyer, was rerated a destroyer leader while building and was reclassified as a frigate in 1955.

The ship belongs to the largest class of destroyers ever built in the world and is larger than some foreign cruisers. She was designed specifically as a long-range fleet-type antisubmarine vessel.

The Navy is building new ships of the type to be equipped for guided-missile launching.

Youth Held for 'Stabbing by Mistake'

NEW YORK (U.P.)—A Bronx teenager was charged Saturday with stabbing a youth he mistook for another boy in a new outbreak of juvenile terror on the sidewalks of New York.

Police said the stabber, who inflicted a critical wound with a seven-inch-long letter opener, was on the prowl for his girl friend's brother. He sought revenge, police said, because the brother was trying to break up the romance.

Instead of stabbing the brother, the young tough wounded Ronald Rudker, 16, after a wild candy-store brawl in the Bronx.

Rudker was in fair condition at a hospital. He suffered a lung wound when the letter opener was plunged into his back by Ronald Murano, 16, police said.

LOOK OUT! HERE COMES OBNOXIOUS!

MONTEBELLO (UP) — Obnoxious, a 3-year-old ram, lived up to his name. As a result, he was sentenced to death Saturday.

George Davis complained to police that he had been butted by the ram belonging to his neighbor, Fred Merkel.

Policeman Hank Couch went to investigate. As he entered Merkel's yard, Obnoxious charged. Couch leaped into a truck and then retired.

Couch had a talk with Merkel—by telephone.

Merkel agreed that Obnoxious was too obnoxious to keep around any longer.

Warning on Theft of Deadly Venom

MIAMI (UP) — A mysterious phone caller told a snake farmer Saturday he stole $5,700 worth of deadly venom because he was "plagued by snakes."

The poison—enough to kill 600 persons — was stolen from the Miami Serpentarium Friday. William E. Haast, owner of the farm and tourist attraction, said the containers apparently were taken from a laboratory table while he was "milking" venom from a cobra in another area.

* * * *

TWO BROWN sealed bottles and two lightly colored vials were taken. The bottles contained dried copperhead and water moccasin venom, while one of the vials contained liquor copperhead venom, and the other venom from a rare African rhinoceros viper.

Mrs. Haast, who works with her husband, said she received a mysterious phone call Saturday morning from a man who admitted stealing the lethal poison, which represents a year and a half of work. The venom is worth an estimated $5,700 according to the sheriff's office.

Mrs. Haast said the phone-caller would "not give his name, but he said he took the venom for his own protection—he said he was plagued by snakes. I don't know what he meant."

* * * *

MRS. HAAST said she tried to explain to the mysterious caller that the venom he allegedly stole was not the specially-prepared serum used in treating snake bites or combating various illnesses. But she said he slammed the receiver down when she warned him the venom was extremely dangerous.

Slick Airways Quits Cargo Service Field

Slick Airways, which was started in Long Beach 12 years ago, disclosed Saturday it is dropping its nationwide scheduled cargo service—a field in which it once was the leader.

The announcement was coupled with an attack on the government's policy toward cargo airlines.

Delos W. Rentzel, board chairman and president, said the company would continue its military charter business and the service and supply activities it now operates at San Antonio, Tex.

Rentzel said the cessation of Slick's common carrier freight service would involve the immediate release of more than 200 persons, reducing the remaining employment to about 400. The company had a peak employment last May of 1,800 persons.

* * * *

HE SAID THAT "failure of the government to give the same permanency of operating rights and quality of treatment enjoyed by the subsidized passenger airlines to the all-cargo airlines, and refusal of the defense establishment to use the commercial airlines on a sound economic basis" were the main reasons behind the Slick's action.

Both Slick and another leading cargo service, the Flying Tiger Line, got their start at Long Beach Municipal Airport just after World War II.

Slick was founded by Earl F. Slick, a Dallas oilman and wartime Air Transport Command pilot, and a group of associates. Many of his pilots were men who had served with him in the ferry squadron stationed here during the war.

Both the Slick and Flying Tiger lines moved to Burbank in 1947 when their growth forced them to seek larger facilities.

In 1953 and '54, the two made plans to merge. The plans later were canceled.

Leopold . . . A Genius Who Killed

Slayer of Bobby Franks Commands 27 Languages

By BERNARD GAVZER

JOLIET, Ill. (AP)—After 33 years behind bars for a senseless murder, Nathan Leopold is a free man—or nearly so. And the quality within himself he feared would forever deny him freedom turned out to be perhaps his greatest asset.

BOBBY FRANKS
Slain for Thrill

That quality is his undeniable brilliance.

The Nathan Leopold who at 19 callously joined in a plot to snuff out the life of 14-year-old Bobby Franks for sheer excitement is gifted with rare intellect.

He possesses an intelligence quotient — the psychologists' measure of mental capacity—of 208. The genius plateau is far less—160. He is master of 27 languages. He is an authority on several sciences, ranging from ornithology to mathematics.

The great men of many fields of study, including the late Albert Einstein, hailed his exceptional mind.

Yet Leopold himself, through a long campaign for freedom, feared this very brilliance was his greatest enemy.

* * * *

THIS IS DISCLOSED by Elmer Gertz, the attorney who presented Leopold's plea to the Illinois Parole and Pardon Board. The board granted the plea Thursday.

Gertz said Leopold begged off any presentation that would represent him as a genius, saying:

"Gee, if you want me to stay in prison forever, just create the impression I'm a genius." He feared this would turn people against him.

Gertz said Leopold wants to be forgotten. "He wants to blend into the normal stream of society and serve his fellow man, quietly, efficiently, gratefully."

It was with a pledge of devotion to his fellowmen that Leopold — now 53 — acknowledged the parole awarded him. He'll leave prison after necessary technical procedures are completed in possibly three or four weeks.

Leopold did not appear personally Thursday before newsmen at the penitentiary here. But he issued a typewritten statement which said:

"I am acutely conscious that more than my own future hangs in the balance. Thousands of prisoners, especially long-term prisoners, look to me to vindicate the rehabilitation theory of imprisonment. I will do my best not to fail in that trust."

And in cautious, precise terms, he expressed gratefulness and determination. He said:

"I am grateful first of all to God. For men can do only what God permits them to do.

"And I am determined to do my utmost to justify the faith shown in me."

* * * *

LEOPOLD HOPES to do this by spending his five-year parole working as a laboratory technician in a remote village hospital in Puerto Rico. It is a 30-bed clinic operated by the Church of the Brethern Service near the mountain town of Adjuntas.

When he entered prison, Leopold already had won recognition as an ornithologist and knew 14 languages.

"Today, he knows 27 languages," Gertz said. "He found years ago that he knew little about mathematics, so he bent his efforts in that direction and then into other sciences. He corresponded with the learned and the authorities everywhere. Einstein said of him that, put in a free world with his brilliance, Leopold could make an important contribution in the field of science.

"It turned out that he benefitted unexpectedly from things that he did. For instance, there was a blind prisoner who needed to be led around and helped with everything. Leopold decided to help him and learned Braille so he could teach it to the blind man. Later, Leopold found that with this ability he could study after 'light out' by reading books in Braille."

* * * *

LEOPOLD ALSO authored a book recounting his prison life. Titled "Life Plus 99 Years," it is due for release March 6. Leopold has decided that royalties from the book will be distributed to worthwhile philanthropic organizations.

The lawyer also said that devotion on the part of Leopold's family played "an immense part in his magnificent rehabilitation."

There was never a single visiting day in all those years, Gertz said, that some member of the family failed to visit Leopold.

Through all the years of imprisonment, the attorney said, Leopold has never attempted to dismiss "his sense of responsibility for the Franks murder."

"As he said when he was before the parole board early this month, he has carried grief and remorse with him for 12,000 days and 12,000 nights. He has never presumed to ask to be forgiven. He was only asked for mercy."

A spirit of gratefulness has directed Leopold's life ever since the moment he entered prison as a youth in 1924, Gertz said.

* * * *

LEOPOLD AND RICHARD LOEB, who was then 18, were co-authors of a crime which shocked the nation. On May 21, 1924, they picked at random Robert (Bobby) Franks as victim of a "perfect crime." The boy, like each of them, came from a wealthy South Side Chicago family. They killed him as part of a scheme to study their own reactions to the deed.

They were saved from the gallows through the strategy of famed attorney Clarence Darrow, who had them plead guilty. Each was sentenced to life for murder and 99 years for kidnaping.

Loeb, who had been described as the archvillain of the plot, came to a violent end. Another inmate, James Day, 23, slashed him 56 times with a razor in 1936. Day claimed Loeb wanted him to engage in perversion.

Leopold, meanwhile, plunged into prison activity. He established a prison correspondence school which today offers more than 100 courses.

"Penologists considered the school the greatest and most significant contribution ever made by a prisoner," Gertz said.

* * * *

LEOPOLD ALSO participated in World War II malaria experiments as a human guinea pig. For this, former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson reduced the kidnaping sentence to 85 years.

This was the first easing of sentiment that had gone against any mercy for Leopold since the day he was imprisoned. Judge John E. Caverly, in sentencing the two "thrill" slayers in 1924, had called upon officials of the future "never to admit these defendants to parole."

After Stevenson's decree, Leopold and his attorney made three earnest attempts to win parole or executive clemency. Leopold last appeared before the board Feb. 5.

The board obviously was impressed by Leopold's intellectual and humanitarian achievements as a prisoner, achievements which a man of lesser mental capacity would not — could not—have attempted. He was a man who could contribute to the welfare of society.

Still, the conscienceless slaying of the Franks boy—and the slayers' attitude of being above the law—have angered persons who weren't even alive when the child was killed.

* * * *

BOBBY FRANKS was lured from a sidewalk into a car occupied by Leopold and Loeb on May 21, 1924. He was bludgeoned to death—each of the slayers later said the other had struck the blow—and his body cast into a South Side culvert. Leopold and Loeb sought ransom but, before they could collect, Bobby's body was discovered.

Also found near the body were Leopold's spectacles. This clue led to his arrest, and to Loeb's seizure, and to their ultimate confession.

Arraigned before Judge Caverly, they first pleaded innocent, then on Darrow's strategy—changed their plea to guilty.

At their trial, the testimony of psychologists, then known as alienists, played a big part.

In the end, the judge went along with Darrow's hope that "hatred and cruelty will not (forever) control the hearts of men."

But so loathsome was the crime that Judge Caverly felt it incumbent upon him to urge that freedom be denied forever to both Leopold and Loeb.

For Richard Loeb, who died in prison, this injunction was upheld.

For Nathan Leopold, it has been mercifully lifted.

MURDER TRIAL PRINCIPAL THEN . . . AND NOW

CONSUMERS' MEAT STRIKE BOOMERANGS

GENEVA (AP)—Civic leaders ruefully conceded Saturday a meat consumers' strike they organized to protest high prices was a boomerang.

Housewives stocked up on meat because they thought "meat strike" meant a butchers' strike.

Geneva butchers happily reported the biggest sales in months.

Nature Lovers Halt Bombings

BONN, Germany (UP) — The British and U. S. Air Forces have bowed to pleas of nature lovers and have agreed not to drop any more bombs on the Grosse Knechtsand, a sand spit off the North Sea Coast.

The West German Foreign Office said the agreement to use the Knechtsand as a practice bombing target ran out last year and will not be renewed. Nature lovers have protested for years that the bombings have killed wild fowl and fishermen complained that the bombs scared the fish.

Polio Shots Advised Now for Tiny Tots

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Public Health Service Saturday launched an all-out nationwide drive to persuade parents to have children under five vaccinated against polio.

Surgeon General LeRoy Burney announced the stepped-up campaign in the wake of new evidence that 5-year-olds and under are the most susceptible to paralytic polio.

He said it is up to the parents to take the initiative in getting preschool children vaccinated and getting antipolio shots themselves.

He said preliminary figures on paralytic-polio-attack rates last year indicate a "substantially higher rate" among children under five than in other susceptible age groups.

The highest attack rate—5.7 per 100,000—was among 1-year-old children. The next highest rate—5.5—was among 2-year-olds. For all children through the age of 4 the rate averaged 4.4, compared with 1.4 for the 5-through-19 age group and 0.8 for those 20-through-39.

REGIONAL POLITICS

Griffin Seeks Assembly Seat

By THE LOOKOUT

Democratic competition for endorsement for 70th District State Assemblyman warmed up Saturday when Thomas Griffin, Long Beach attorney, announced his candidacy.

Griffin, 38, is asking endorsement of the 70th Democratic Council convention to be held March 7. He will file for the Democratic nomination if the convention gives him its ok. Other Democratic candidates to be before the convention are Fred Chel and Paul Strader, also attorneys.

The 70th Assemblyman is Republican W. S. Grant, who is expected to seek reelection. There is no indication of Republican opposition to Grant.

Griffin attended Washington Junior High and Poly High schools here, received a degree at San Jose State College, spent three years in the Navy and then went to University of California, where he got a law degree in 1949. His law offices are in the Times Building.

The candidate has been active in the bar association, YMCA, Lakewood-Belmont Toastmasters Club, and served two terms as president of the Lakewood Plaza Citizens Improvement Association. He and Mrs. Griffin, the former April Wingard, live at 2912 Nipomo Ave.

KLOCKSIEM BUSY — Assemblyman Herbert R. Klocksiem is home from Sacramento for 10 days of reelection campaigning. Klocksiem, a member of Ways and Means in the Assembly, has been busy with committee work so far this month.

On the Assembly subcommittee he voted for continued child welfare centers, voted for an $800,000 augmentation to build Youth Authority camps, voted against $300,000 to reflectorize auto plates, voted against a $600,000 appropriation to put pictures on driver's license cards. He said there has been no proof of good results from experimenting with reflectorized plates.

Klocksiem said there is no apparent solution to the statewide water problem in sight. "Too many ideas and too much confusion," he said.

BONELLI DRIVE — Assemblyman Frank Bonelli's campaign for First District County Supervisor was carried into a dozen communities Saturday with the candidate in a whirlwind drive for votes.

The day's activities started with a breakfast at the Lafayette Hotel in Long Beach, with an enthusiastic crowd cheering the Assemblyman on his way.

Bonelli and his party then moved northward through the district, hitting Santa Fe Springs at noon and concluding the day at Pomona with dinner.

POLITICAL BRIEFS—Danny Brice and Kay Vincent are co-chairmen of a labor liaison committee set up by Fred Chel, Democratic candidate for 70th District Assemblyman. . . . Mrs. Carmen Warschaw of Los Angeles has been named campaign chairman in the 24th Congressional District for Atty. Gen. Edmund G. Brown, candidate for governor.

TEMPERS IN A SNARL

Ike, Mamie Guests of Elizabeth Arden

ELIZABETH ARDEN
Presidential Hostess

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (U.P.) — President Eisenhower will accompany his wife today to Phoenix, Ariz., where she is going for a rest, a White House spokesman announced Saturday at a press parley where tempers grew edgy over details of the trip.

The President will fly with Mrs. Eisenhower from his vacation headquarters here and spend about eight hours in Phoenix, then fly back to Washington in his personal plane, the Columbine III.

The presidential couple has visited here 10 days with former Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey. It was to have been a quail-shooting holiday but one of the worst cold spells in Dixie history kept the party indoors until the last few days.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said that the President would fly out with his wife to Phoenix, where Mrs. Eisenhower will rest at the Maine Chance Farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham, noted cosmetician and sportswoman.

* * * *

MRS. EISENHOWER will stay in a cottage that normally rents for $400 to $700 a week in the resort located at the foot of the famed Camelback Mountain near Phoenix. This price includes meals and also beauty treatments, a feature of the exclusive women's resort.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon last week visited one night in the nearby home of Publisher Henry R. Luce. Mrs. Claire Boothe Luce stayed at Maine Chance for a rest after the "poison paint" incident in Rome while she was ambassador to Italy.

Reporters questioned Hagerty closely about the reasons for the President making the trip and the press secretary grew noticeably irritated.

Asked why Eisenhower did not take another plane directly to Washington, Hagerty replied:

"I think that when the President of the United States wants to go any place that he wants to with his wife, that is his business and nobody else's."

* * * *

HAGERTY THEN engaged in an exchange with Laurence Burd, White House reporter for the Chicago Tribune who said "I think I have a right" to ask such a question.

When the President "has to account for that or make any reporting on that, I think you are getting a little out of bounds," Hagerty said.

Burd and Hagerty exchanged a few more words before the topic shifted.

Hagerty said that Mrs. Eisenhower will be accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Gordon Moore of Washington, and Mrs. Ellis D. Slater of New York, wife of a retired distillery executive.

Reporters asked if Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Slater "will be billed" for their trip on the presidential plane and Hagerty stiffened again.

"Of course they don't get billed," he replied. "This is the President's plane and they are the President's guests."

The party will take off from Spence Field at nearby Moultrie, Ga., at 6 a.m. (EST) and arrive at Phoenix at 1 p.m. (PST). After spending the rest of the day there, Eisenhower will take off from Sky Harbor Airport scheduled to arrive in Washington at about 4 a.m. (PST) Monday.

THAT SHOTGUN WAS EMPTY, HAGERTY SAYS

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP)—James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said Saturday President Eisenhower's shotgun wasn't loaded when he held the muzzle in the direction of his face.

Newsmen questioned Hagerty about pictures showing Eisenhower sitting in a hunting surrey with his 20-gauge double-barreled shotgun between his knees, muzzle pointed upward into his face.

Hagerty said, "The gun was not loaded. The President was asked to hold the gun up by the photographers and he did."

AMNESIA VICTIM?

Police Can't Identify Blonde

Police were at a loss Saturday night to identify a blue-eyed blonde about 20-25 who says she "can't remember anything."

The young woman, who says her head hurts almost constantly, was found by an elderly woman Friday night on Alamitos Ave. near 10th St.

A surgeon who examined the girl said she was unharmed and apparently was suffering amnesia.

Police said the young woman was found about 7 p.m. She was taken to Mrs. Jewel Cunningham, wife of the pastor of First Assembly of God Church. Mrs. Cunningham called police.

"I seemed to recall the name 'Lou' and the name 'Fluff,'" she said. And she remembers "something" about Utah, although she doesn't know if she has lived there.

When she was found, the girl was wearing green and red capri pants with white dots, a white short-sleeved blouse and low-cut black shoes. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 135 pounds.

She is being sheltered at City Jail.

Hoover Advises Self-Reliance, Independence in Time of Trial

Ex-President Receives Honor at Valley Forge

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover, repeating an address he made 27 years ago at historic Valley Forge, observed Saturday that Americans are "confused and some are discouraged" but that the nation will rise again "to a period of greatness."

Hoover, at 83 still resolute, alert and abreast of America's problems, told a nationwide television audience from Freedoms Foundation headquarters here that "the way to the nation's greatness is the path of self-reliance, independence and steadfastness in time of trial and stress."

* * * *

THESE WERE the identical words he used in his 1931 Memorial Day speech on a similar spot overlooking the rolling hills where George Washington's Revolutionary War army spent the bitter winter of 1777-78 and "kept alive the spark of liberty in the world."

Hoover returned to this hallowed campsite Saturday to accept the Freedoms Foundation "George Washington Award" for the most important contribution in 1957 toward "the improvement of the American structure of freedom."

The occasion, too, commemorated the 226th birthday anniversary of America's first President—a day on which the foundation annually honors hundreds of individuals, organizations and schools for writing, talking and doing things to promote the American way of life. Awards went to 768 this year.

* * * *

THE EX-PRESIDENT was the second man ever to receive the foundation's highest award. Another Hoover won it last year. He was J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief.

Hoover delivered his 1,500-word address after noting at the start that he'd have a surprise at the end. Then he revealed that, "with slight elimination of less pertinent paragraphs," it was the same talk he made in 1931 "in the depths of that period of anxiety and discouragement."

He did make one significant addition when he pointed out that the depression of the 1930s "was an inheritance from mistakes in the peace and the aftermath of destruction from the First World War," adding:

"Again today we inherit the mistakes of the peace and the aftermaths of destruction from the Second World War. Our people are today again confused and some are discouraged."

* * * *

BUT HE FOUND his 1931 words still pertinent in looking ahead:

"Many have doubt and grave concern for the future," he said. "But no one who reviews the past and realizes the vast strength of our people can doubt, this, like a score of similar experiences in our history, is a passing trial.

"The nation is beset with difficulties and confusions. These temporary reverses in the march of progress have been in part the penalty of the malign inheritances of world forces beyond our control."

Hoover said Washington and Valley Forge met the challenge in times of war but that it is America's test now "to meet this challenge in times and terms of peace."

* * * *

"IF WE ARE firm and farsighted, as were Washington and his men, we shall be writing the introduction to a yet more glorious epoch in our nation's progress."

Freedoms Foundation handed out $39,900 in cash, including the $5,000 award to Hoover. An additional $60,000 will go for medals, libraries for schools and expenses for teachers and pupils making annual pilgrimages to Valley Forge.

Other winners included:

The Florida Bar Assn. of Tallahassee for Community Programs; the American Farm Bureau Federation of Chicago; the American Legion and Kiwanis International for programs designed to involve more Americans in public and patriotic activities; the Rev. Frederick M. Meek of Boston for a sermon; Harding College, Searcy, Ark., for college campus program.

FORMER CHIEF REPEATS SPEECH 27 YEARS LATER

Air Force who also received an award. —(AP Wirephoto.)

Draft Damper Stops Bottles' Popping Act

SEAFORD, N.Y. (UP)—Police said Saturday they thought they finally had put the lid on the 18-day-old case of the popping bottles.

If they have, a 74-year-old Revere, Mass., widow, will get all the credit.

It was just 18 days ago, but it seems like an eternity to the James Herrmann family, that bottles, jars and other containers began flipping their lids in their six-room Long Island home.

* * * *

TELEPHONE CALLS and letters poured into the home of Herrmann, an Air France executive, his wife and their two children. All sorts of information was volunteered, including theories that the house was haunted.

Finally the Herrmanns got what they considered good advice a few days ago. Mrs. Helen Connolly telephoned from Revere to tell the distraught family about a similar experience that befell her last April.

Mrs. Connolly said a building inspector told her there was a downdraft in her chimney that swept hot gases into the house. This made dishes jump and the furniture jiggle, she said.

* * * *

THE HERRMANNS, fed up with all the bottle-popping and the telephone calls, moved out temporarily Friday. They spent Friday night with friends, getting their first good sleep in 18 days.

Herrmann, with the aid of Detective Joseph Tozzi, decided to act on this advice. They installed a turbine-style ventilator in the chimney on the Herrmann home.

"I hope it works," he said.

Tunisian Feud End Discussed

LONDON (AP) — A British-U. S. effort to end the feud between France and Tunisia began rolling here Saturday under the wary eyes of a worried French government.

U. S. Deputy Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy flew into London and quickly opened talks with Harold Beeley, Middle East expert assigned by Britain to help resolve the bitter French-Tunisia dispute.

Their official assignment is to provide good offices in easing relations between France and its former North African protectorate. The two nations have been at odds since the French bombing two weeks ago of a Tunisian village believed harboring rebels from neighboring Algeria.

Murphy and Beeley met amid rising fears in France they may be considering measures to halt the Algerian conflict as well as settle the French-Tunisian dispute.

Any such move to introduce the tender topic of Algeria would be certain to arouse hostile reaction in France, still locked in a bitter war against rebels fighting for independence.

Marines Land Carrier Style on Desert

'Mirror Trick' of Navy Adapted to Halt Planes

By JAMES ALLEN

The Marine Corps has adapted the Navy's aircraft carrier for use on dry land.

This has been done by making mobile the carrier's mirror landing equipment and arresting gear, two essentials of plane recovery aboard the most modern flattops. A mobile catapult is under development.

Marine All-Weather Fighter Squadron 542 of El Toro Marine Corps Air Station has successfully completed landings with the new equipment at the Marine Corps Auxiliary Air Station, Mojave.

* * * *

THE SQUADRON, which pioneered the F3D Skynight fighter and brought it to combat worthiness, is the first F3D squadron on the West Coast and the first El Toro unit to use the two devices on a maneuver.

Mirror landing equipment consists of a large concave mirror from which extend two arms about eight feet long. Each arm has a number of green lights, which a pilot can see from a great distance. Red lights bordering the mirror are used only when a plane is waved off.

Amber lights are placed facing the mirror, 150 feet down the runway. These lights are reflected from the mirror, creating a large orange "meatball" which the pilot can see about one-and-a-half miles away on his landing approach.

* * * *

THE PILOT TRIMS HIS plane by keeping it and the "meatball" in line with the two extended arms on the mirror. If the plane veers off, the pilot can see the error and make instantaneous correction.

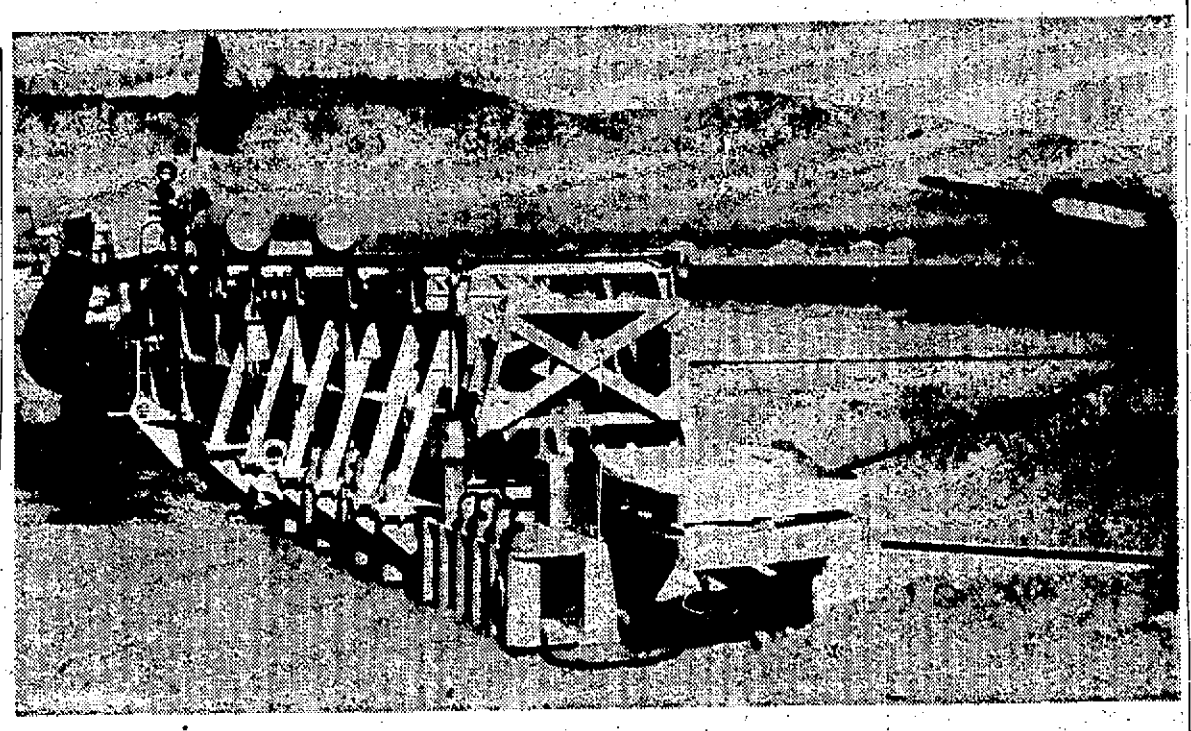

The mirror system removes the element of error which exists when a landing signal officer gives signals to the pilot by swing paddles. Jets come in at such a high rate of speed that any time lost in transmitting signals could be fatal.

After the pilot lines up with the runway by means of the mirror, he drops his tail hook. This engages a cable of the mobile arresting equipment and the plane is pulled to a stop quickly.

* * * *

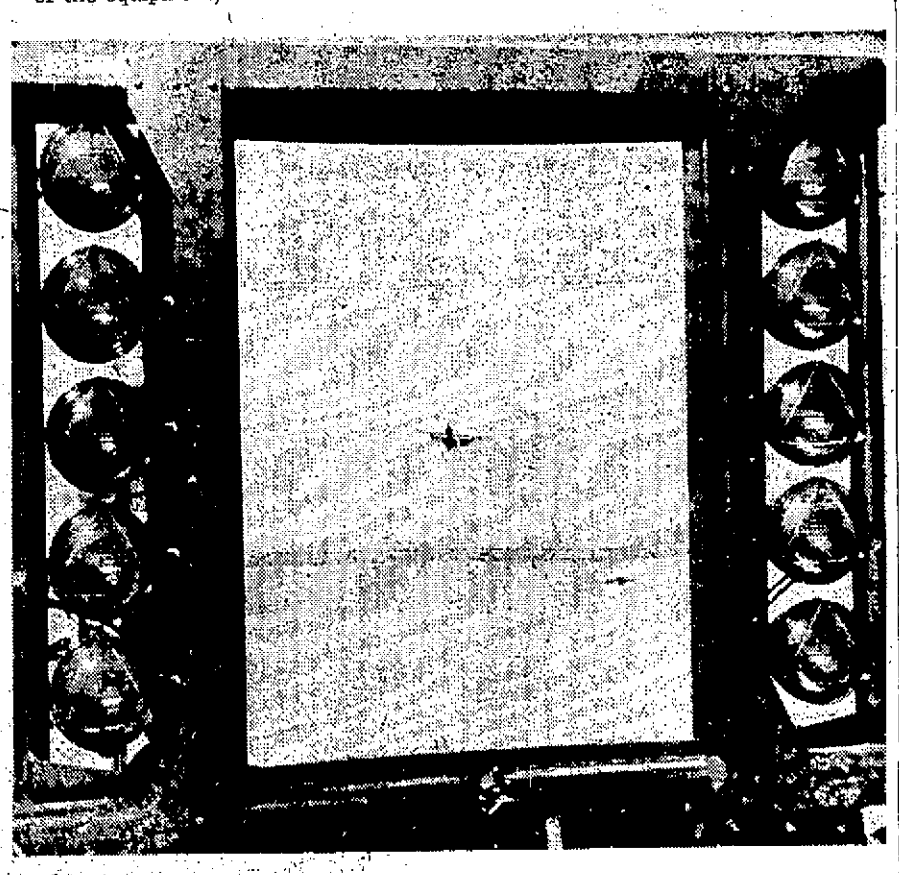

PLANES NORMALLY requiring a landing run of about a mile can be stopped in 300 feet by the arresting equipment. The system uses two arresting engines, one on each side of the runway. The engines are connected by two steel cables, called deck pendants, which are about five inches above the runway. Aircraft can be arrested at intervals of 40 to 50 seconds.

The equipment can be installed rapidly on small landing strips and adjusted to handle planes of various weights and landing speeds. This provides an important contribution to the primary mission of Marine Corps aviation: Close air support for the troops.

HOW TO LAND A JET IN A HURRY

This mobile adaption of the aircraft carrier's arresting gear is being used by the Marine Corps to land jet planes on extremely short air strips. The tail hook of this El Toro plane has just engaged one of the cables of the equipment, which will halt it in 300 feet.—(Marine Corps Photo)

THEY DO IT WITH A MIRROR

Amber lights 150 feet up the runway are reflected in this concave mirror and seen by the pilot as an orange "meatball." He keeps plane and "meatball" in line with lights on two arms extending from the mirror and guides himself in for the landing. Red lights bordering mirror are used to wave off planes. The pilot sees neither his plane or the mirror.—(Marine Corps Photo)

Expelled Little Rock Negro Girl Arrives in N.Y. to Enter School

NEW YORK (UP)—Minnijean Brown, 16-year-old Negro girl expelled from Little Rock's Central High School, said Saturday she was ousted for breaking an agreement with the school superintendent not to retaliate in any way to words or deeds of white students in the school.

Minnijean said the agreement was made with Superintendent Virgil Blossom when he met with the nine Negro students admitted to the school last year and their parents.

The agreement was reached, she said, before the school was integrated at the start of the fall term.

* * * *

MINNIJEAN held a news conference at La Guardia Airport after arriving here by airplane to enroll on a full scholarship in the New Lincoln School, an interracial private school with tuitions ranging from $695 to $1,050 a year.

The American Airlines plane on which Minnijean and her mother traveled was delayed 40 minutes in taking off from Little Rock because of an anonymous telephone call from a man who said a bomb would be aboard the aircraft.

Police and FBI agents found nothing suspicious in a search of the plane.

Minnijean, with her mother, Mrs. W. B. Brown at her side, answered newsmen's questions readily.

* * * *

WHEN SHE WAS asked whether there had been an agreement by the Negroes not to retaliate, she replied:

"That was the agreement—not to talk back and not to do anything to those kids no matter what happened. We had to take it.

"I was the target for most of the segregationist acts during most of the school year. I don't know why they picked on me.

"I took abuse from them. I was kicked twice. I was called all kinds of terrible names, but I always walked away and laughed at it. But finally, I couldn't. After so much provocation, I got mad and decided I was going to do something."

* * * *

AS A RESULT of this decision, Minnijean was suspended for six days for dumping a bowl of chili on two students in the school cafeteria. Another time, a student spilled a bowl of hot soup on her. She later was suspended Feb. 6 for fighting with a white girl.

"The day Minnijean was suspended, we got the news over the radio," Mrs. Brown said. "We called Mr. Blossom and he said he didn't know anything about it, but it turned out that she was suspended.

"Mrs. Blossom said later he recommended permanent suspension. We appealed before the board but were not allowed to bring an attorney."

Minnijean said the official reason for her expulsion was "failure to adjust to the situation and talking back."

* * * *

"I MADE AN agreement not to talk back," she said, "and I took kicks and verbal abuse."

Minnijean said she thought the eight other Negroes at Central would "stick it out," and added:

"It's very tough. They get notes left in the locker saying 'You're next.' I've received cards in the mail—a cemetery card and a Chirstmas card that was the opposite meaning of Christmas."

Fifty of New Lincoln's 410 students, both Negro and white, greeted Minnijean and her mother and presented each with an orchid corsage.

He's 'Toughest'

LONDON (UP)—Lance Cpl. Thomas Hutton said Saturday his 14-day, 600-mile hike from London to Newcastle and back proved he was the "toughest lance corporal in the army." Hutton said he felt fine—except for the blisters.

Fog Hampers Air and Sea Search for 22

LAGES AIR BASE, Azores, —(UP)— Bad weather Saturday hampered a search by a huge group of air and surface vessels for survivors of a U.S. Navy plane which disappeared with 22 aboard.

A spokesman at the joint U.S.-Portuguese base here said the poor visibility has prevented the searchers from finding even a trace of the plane.

He said the search would be continued north and west of the Azores until there was absolutely no hope left. The Constellation disappeared Thursday after giving its last position as 110 miles west of Corvo Island in the Azores.

A ship reported sighting flares Friday 500 miles southwest of Flores Island but other ships that raced to the scene found nothing.

More than 50 planes and 15 ships are involved in the search.

One of the crew members aboard the missing craft was identified at Lt. (jg) Paul Leo Brousseau, brother of Mrs. Joan Derochea, 1873 Harbor Ave., Long Beach. Brousseau, 25, has a wife and child in Pensacola, Fla.

Snark Range Hits 6,300 Mi.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturers of the Northrop Snark guided missile said Saturday the weapon now has a range of more than 6,300 miles. It heretofore has been credited with 5,000 miles.

Able to cruise for 10 hours at almost the speed of sound, the Snark was described as the only current weapon capable of low altitude attack upon virtually any target in Soviet Russia.

A powerful tool for "massive intercontinental deterrent" purposes was the way Northrup Vice President John R. Alison of Los Angeles described it.

New or little known facts about the pilotless bomber were brought out by Alison and other Northrup Aircraft officials at a briefing here designed to correct what they said was "widespread misunderstanding" of the Snark's mission and performance.

They said a new electronic device, specially installed on the Snark, can trick enemy radar into mistaking the fighter-size missile for the largest of the jet bombers. Thus Snarks can be flown ahead of a B52 bomber attack as decoys to cut down enemy interception of U.S. strategic bombers.

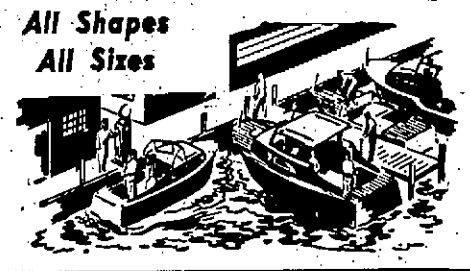

A "big load carrier," they said the Snark can plunge a large thermo-nuclear warhead into enemy targets with "truly amazing accuracy."

Once it has left the ground, a Snark is on its own. A preset self contained inertial guidance system directs it on a straight, zigzag or looped course.

Although the Snark cannot be "jammed" by the enemy, it can be called back from its mission if a suspected enemy attack turns out to be a false alarm.

More than 50 Snarks have been launched from the Air Force missile test center at Cape Canaveral, Fla. Altogether they have flown the equivalent of three times around the world at the equator.

Public Hit for Apathy on Schools

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Secretary Marion B. Folsom Saturday night rapped the American public across the knuckles for not caring enough about education.

The trouble with education is that the American people don't respect it enough, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said in a speech prepared for the American Assn. of School Administrators.

"Finding fault with our schools has recently become a somewhat popular pastime," Folsom said in a sharp-tongued speech at the start of the four-day regional convention attended by 9,000 school administrators.

* * * *

THE SECRETARY received the organization's "Golden Key Award" for making a "significant contribution to the national welfare."

Last year's winners were Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, and economist Beardsley Ruml. Also receiving the same award Saturday night was Miss Lila Windsor, 82, of McRae, Ga., who was Folsom's fourth-grade teacher.

"What is needed most of all is a new emphasis by the American public on the pursuit of learning," Folsom analyzed. "America's stake in good teaching is freedom, itself."

The Secretary said that too often teachers are considered "errand boys or workhorses" for all kinds of community activity.

All 5 Want to Be Chief

BROOKFIELD, Mo. (AP)—There's no ill-feeling among the five members of Brookfield's police force, Chief James W. Clark explained Saturday—they just all want to be chief.

Clark and his four patrolmen have all filed for the office at the non-partisan April 1 election. Clark is completing his first 2-year term.

"There is harmony in the police force and everyone has the same ideas on how the department should be run," Clark said.

The chief's job in this northern Missouri town of 6,000 pays $220 a month. Patrolmen get $200.

Experience among the candidates ranges from a year to 10 years. Chief Clark has been on the force five years. The patrolmen and their years of service are Olen E. Gates, 10 years; Luther Thompson and H. O. Nickerson, seven years, and Eldon Holloway one year.

was holding forth in the ballroom. Truman gave his address in the ballroom. Closed-circuit television carried his image and words to the crowd below, and CBS televised and broadcast the speech nationally.

Before the oratory got under way, Stevenson and Truman meandered through the twin parties, shaking hands and greeting friends.

Sen. John McClellan of Arkansas brought Gov. Orval Faubus up to Truman and the two posed for photographers, with clasped hands. Truman told a reporter he had known the controversial Arkansas governor for years and the meeting had no particular significance.

* * * *

THERE WERE some earlier reports that, because of the Little Rock school-integration issue, Faubus wouldn't be too welcome at the affair.

Looking over the wall-bulging turnout, Truman grinned and remarked that when the dinner was named for him, "I was dead sure it wouldn't have a half a dozen customers."

The big turnout, he said, "means we are on our way to restore our country to the people, for their benefit."

Truman ad libbed a line that he was used to criticism, and "whenever the press quits abusing me, I know I'm in the wrong. When they start throwing bricks at me, I'm pretty good at that myself."

* * * *

FINALLY, HE swung into his prepared speech. The Republican leadership, Truman said, is weak, timid, complacent, has failed to advance with the times. Now, he said, the American people are fed up, disillusioned, disturbed, "tired of being bamboozled by the Republicans."

His sallies at the GOP drew laughter at some points, applause at others.

Stevenson got his biggest hand when he said the Eisenhower administration has an almost unprecedented "systematic and unblushing misrepresentation, concealment and half-truth."

Democratic Westerners Urge Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the Democratic National Committee from 11 western states Saturday called for "bold action" to create new jobs in their region.

They adopted a resolution urging members of Congress from their states to seek sufficient appropriations to continue western irrigation and reclamation projects already approved as one way to combat unemployment.

The resolution said President Eisenhower originally asked for funds for certain work in the Upper Colorado Basin, but is now proposing to substitute such projects as post office-building improvements to ease unemployment.

* * * *

CALVIN W. RAWLINGS, Utah national committeeman, said the conference also decided to meet in Los Angeles, May 17, when more definite action will be taken to make the "voice of the West" more audible in Washington for development of western resources.

The Los Angeles meeting, Rawlings added, also will decide where to locate a western regional headquarters for the 1958 election campaign.

The western states conference is made up of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, plus Alaska and Hawaii.

TRUMAN, FAUBUS SHAKE HANDS

Former President Harry S. Truman (left) and Arkansas' controversial Gov. Orval Faubus clasp hands across the flower-decorated head table at a Democratic party dinner Saturday night in Washington. Faubus, a central figure in the Little Rock school integration controversy, said he was treated "most graciously" by other guests and that Truman is "a wonderful guy."—(AP).

Knowland Spurns Franking Privileges

By WALTER T. RIDDER, R. E. LEE, BILL BROOM
Independent, Press-Telegram Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—Sen. Bill Knowland, a candidate for governor in California, is bending over backwards to avoid using his congressional mail franking privilege to push his candidacy.

Knowland refuses to use his free mail privilege to send out press releases, speeches and other information to the press, even when it has nothing to do with his campaign. If a constituent writes about a congressional issue, Knowland's reply bears a regular 3-cent stamp if the question has concerned any issue he has discussed in the gubernatorial campaign.

The senator avoids campaign duties during his regular work day in the Senate. These matters are held in abeyance until 8 p.m. in the evening after the other work is cleaned up.

All California calls on the campaign are charged to a special private line Knowland has had installed in his office for personal use.

REP. KEN KEATING (R-NY) says the partisan spirit that wins elections is the kind shown by a friend of his who went to the hospital for an operation.

The nurse asked him what kind of ward he wanted to be put in.

"I don't care what kind of ward it is," said Ken's friend, "as long as it's in a Republican precinct."

* * * *

THE POLITICALLY explosive probe of influence peddling around the Federal Communications Commission is certain to have one happy by-product—at least for the members of Congress.

Senators and representatives are constantly hounded by constituents who want errand-boy chores performed around various government agencies. Sometimes only an introduction to "the right person" is requested. Often the request is to "put in a word for me."

All congressmen pride themselves on the services they render, but too often an excess of pressure is demanded.

Now, however, it will be easier for congressmen to get insistent constituents off their necks by pointing to the unfavorable publicity from the current FCC hearings.

* * * *

LETTERS UNEARTHED these days in the hearings on federal regulatory agencies and from such remote points as Texas remind us of the old warning to young men: "Do right, and fear no man; don't write, and fear no woman."

That might well be extended to include not writing anything which can conceivably be dug up by congressional hawkshaws. We don't know it for a fact, but we suspect that as the current investigation unfolds, a whole lot of letter-burning is being carried on.

Nevada Leaders Seek Re-Election

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—Three of Nevada's top Republican office holders announced their plans Saturday to seek re-election.

Gov. Charles Russel, Sen. George W. Malone and State Controller Peter Merialdo all advised the Republican State Central Committee meeting here they will seek third terms this year.

Only one other Nevada governor—Democrat L. R. Bradley—has sought a third term in office. That was in 1878. Bradley lost to Republican John H. Kinkead.

Reds Delay Trucks en Route to Berlin

HELMSTEDT, Germany (AP)—Berlin-bound trucks queued up on the Autobahn at the East German interzonal checkpoint of Marieborn Saturday as Communist border guards tightened their control of cargoes.

Officials at the West German checkpoint here said Communist guards were concentrating on whether the payload registered in the freight-documents checked exactly with the weight of the cargo.

AMERICANS GETTING SOFT?

Hardy Horse Players Say 'Neigh'

By WALTER T. RIDDER
Of I, P-T Capital Bureau

WASHINGTON—The recent snowstorm — nay, blizzard — which engulfed Washington has been and remains the leading topic of conversation in this town which is never at loss for words. The conversational pitch has changed from how each one of us fared during the horrendous aftermath of the snow to the heroism or cowardice of those whose job it was to serve us and to reestablish communication between our homes and the outside world.

There were, to the mind of this reporter, lots of heroes and convincing displays of courage and stamina. On thinking it all over, though, perhaps the finest exhibition of the human being's resolve to triumph over nature was put on by the horse racing fans at Bowie, Md., who allowed not snow nor cold nor anything else to interfere with completion of their appointed bets.

While one may question their judgment, one cannot deny the raw courage and stick-to-itiveness of the improvers of the breed as they egged on the ghostly quadrupeds dashing silently and presumably unseen through the mantle of snow which ultimately buried the racetrack, the stables and most important of all the automobiles of the horse players. As far as one can make out from survivors' accounts, when the seventh and final race had been concluded, the bettors who numbered more than 5,000 suddenly awakened, as it were, from their reverie and discovered the harrowing fact that it had indeed been snowing.

THE ATTEMPTED return home trips bogged down in snow drifts and the uncontrolled skidding which bespeaks the amateur snow driver and a good portion of the race-lovers settled down for a long stay at the Bowie clubhouse. The Pennsylvania Railroad, its heart properly bleeding for the plight of the $2-on-the-nosers, sent a couple of rescue trains which took care of most, but not all, of the stranded. Those who were left spent the night in rehashing whatever horse players rehash and scrambled home by one means or another the next day.

As tribute to their grit and staying power, however, it is worth while pointing out that several of the unexpected overnight guests, far from being relieved at their rescue, were in high dudgeon because the course stewards viewing 14 to 20 inches of snow piled over the course had reluctantly canceled the race program for the next day or so, thereby cheating the would-be bettors of that, which by their presence, was rightfully theirs.

The saga of the sturdy racegoers would not be worth repeating did it not so demonstrably contradict the oft-repeated assertion that Americans are going soft. We have, particularly in recent months, heard much of the sorry debilitation of the American species. It has been said we have become corpulent, lazy, fatigued, infatuated with the blandishments of an economy in which the living has become easy.

Doctors Let Sir Winston Sip Brandy

ROQUEBRUNE, Cap Martin, France (UP) — Sir Winston Churchill was all but out of danger Saturday in his bout with pneumonia and pleurisy. Physicians permitted him to resume his usual after-dinner cigars, brandy and conversation.

Except for the fact that the 83-year-old British statesman must remain in bed at his vacation villa in this Riviera community, he has "nearly returned to normal routine," according to his secretary, Anthony Montague Browne.

A brief medical bulletin, edited by Churchill himself, said: "The improvement in Sir Winston Churchill's condition is fully maintained. The temperature has fallen and his progress is satisfactory."

Nab 8 Yacht Pirates

QUITO, Ecuador (AP)—Eight escaped Galapagos Islands convicts among the 21 who hijacked an American yacht for three days, have been recaptured, prison authorities reported Saturday.

Six convicts were seized Friday night in Esmeraldas and two more were captured in Guayaquil Saturday. Two others fled after an exchange of shots with police.

The convicts in their flight took over two island prison camps, then seized two fishing boats Feb. 12 and put to sea.

On Feb. 15 they sighted a yacht belonging to William Rhodes Hervey Jr., of Los Angeles and Balboa, Calif., and seized it, forcing the crew at pistol-point to take them to a point on the coast near Esmeraldas.

Master of the yacht is Capt. William McKay, 62, of 2008 San Anseline Ave., Long Beach, Calif.

Hervey and his party reported their seizure and freeing by radio and then proceeded to Panama where they conferred with U. S. authorities and Panama port officials.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Indonesia Radio Stations Bombed

PADANG, Sumatra (U.P.)—U. S.-built Indonesian air force planes Saturday bombed, rocketed and strafed key rebel cities and silenced the two rebel radios in the second day of aerial raids that brought closer the threat of all-out civil war.

DR. ARTURO FRONDIZI
Argentina Candidate

The government in Jakarta admitted that in its attack Friday on the rebel stronghold in central Sumatra one bomb accidentally was dropped on the town of Jambi in southern Sumatra, which still is loyal to the Jakarta regime. The government promised to make restitution, but it did not mention casualties.

In the attack Saturday, three P51 fighters and a B25 bomber, all of World War II vintage, bombed and strafed Padang and Bukittinggi in central Sumatra, seats of the revolutionary government established last Saturday in opposition to President Sukarno in Jakarta.

Argentine Election Today

BUENOS AIRES (U.P.)—Six thousand soldiers and sailors were mobilized Saturday with orders to guarantee a peaceful, honest presidential election today which will be Argentina's first completely free balloting in 30 years and its most crucial. 1956, revolution that overthrew Dictator Juan D. Peron. There are 13 parties running for the votes of 10 million Argentines. But experts predict a close race between only two:

—Dr. Ricardo Balbin of the People's Radical Party. He has moderate and rightwing support and stands for free enterprise, wage increases, and investment of more foreign capital.

Dr. Arturo Frondizi of the Radical Civic Unin. He has the support of a conglomeration of parties ranging from Communist to Peronist.

Ike Names New Envoy

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (U.P.)—President Eisenhower Saturday picked career diplomat John M. Allison to be ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

Allison, who has been serving as ambassador to Indonesia, will succeed U. Alexis Johnson in Prague. James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said he had no information on a new assignment for Johnson.

Hard of Hearing?

Do you know that a great many people who have a hearing loss also have sinus trouble, catarrh or both? Many of these cases could have part or even all of their hearing loss restored; many who now have sinus trouble and no hearing loss may develop a hearing loss later on in life.

Many of our patients now listen to TV and radio at volume that the family enjoys.

Thanks to the new system now being used in all of the Basic Diagnostic Offices throughout California, many who have tried this proven method are overjoyed. Just like magic in many cases, improvement is shown after the first treatment.

If you have a hearing loss, no matter how slight or how bad, it may be due to sinus trouble or catarrh. Why not find out?

Don't delay, we will give you the first treatment and our complete sinus and catarrh examination for the small sum of only $3.00.

We are one of the busiest offices in Southern California, so if we cannot help you, be assured that we will not take your case.

The total charge is only $3.00 for the first treatment and the examination, and if you see no improvement from the first treatment we do not want you back. This offer will be withdrawn in ten days.

RED ICBM HAS 12,000-MILE RANGE?

Missileman Sees Big Lead for Russ

By BEN ZINSER

Russia has a working intercontinental ballistic missile in the 12,000-mile range, believes a German missileman who now lives in Palos Verdes Estates.

Furthermore, says Dr. Hugo H. Woerdemann, who worked on the German V2 rocket at Peenemuende in World War II days, the Soviets probably are turning out their ICBM at an underground factory in the Urals.

If their missile is as far-reaching as he thinks it is, Dr. Woerdemann says it could be launched from the factory site.

* * * *

"MOBILITY NO longer would be a problem for them," he observes.

Dr. Woerdemann, 42, of 1532 Paseo del Mar, came to the United States in 1946 with a group of 125 German scientists and engineers. He first was assigned to missile instrumentation work at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Since 1952 he has been president of Magnetic Research Corp., with headquarters in Hawthorne. The firm designs, develops and produces magnetic components for industry, the U. S. missile program and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Magnetic Research furnished some of the parts for the Jupiter-C rocket which launched America's first artificial satellite. Now the firm is bulding an emergency shutdown and alarm system for reactors on nuclear submarines.

* * * *

DR. WOERDEMANN, an electrical engineer, says Russia has had intermediate-range ballistic missiles "sitting around" for at least two years. "Lots of them," he says.

He adds that the United States is five years behind Russia in missile development.

Reason: A difference in viewpoints, he says.

After World War II the Russians immediately set to work on missiles. To aid them they had Germany's "futuristic plans concerning rockets," Dr. Woerdemann says.

But in the United States, he adds, German scientists "were put on ice."

* * * *

THIS HARRASSMENT was nothing new to Dr. Woerdemann. He can remember when the German Army Ordnance Rocket Research Center at Peenemuende had a "low priority."

"The story went out," he recalls, "that Hitler had dreamed that rockets wouldn't work and that Peenemuende was to become a truck factory."

DR. WOERDEMANN
A Time to Hurry

"America didn't get into the rocket business until 1950 or 1951," he says, "and even then not with the zest required.

"To draw even," he continues, "the United States must increase its missile activity 20 per cent over that of Russia's—whatever that figure may be.

"This will take all of five years."

And it's going to cost us, he says.

* * * *

"THE UNFORTUNATE HOOKER," he says, "is that time is of the essence. A crash program always is more costly."

He has two suggestions for accelerating the program:

1. "Maintain a double-development program. Set as a goal development of two ICBMs and two IRBMs. For the ICBMs, have a target of 5,000 miles. All this will cost more, but it will be money well spent."

Dr. Woerdemann recalls that in 1948 "we had a budget of one million dollars. After salaries, this left $250,000. This isn't even a starvation diet. This is death."

2. "Another missile proving ground is needed. A nearby ground would do a lot to enhance morale of missile workers. Three thousand miles is too far away.

* * * *

"WHEN YOU HAVE a concentration of people—proving-ground participation of engineers—it gives you a feeling of belonging, a feeling of dedication.

"This is an invaluable thing. Any other system is awkward. Here, we have separate expert groups, but I suppose it has to be this way because private industry has a say-so in the program. I doubt if Douglas and North American would agree to putting their people in the same housing project.

"But a man who works on a missile should be given the opportunity to see the rocket's smoke."

Dr. Woerdemann believes space conquest will come "sooner than we think, thanks to Sputnik and the competition that has resulted."

* * * *

BECAUSE OF Sputnik, he says, "you can say 'space' nowadays and still maintain the status of a scientist. I can remember when they called Wernher von Braun 'fiction boy' and 'Disney man.' They don't do it anymore."

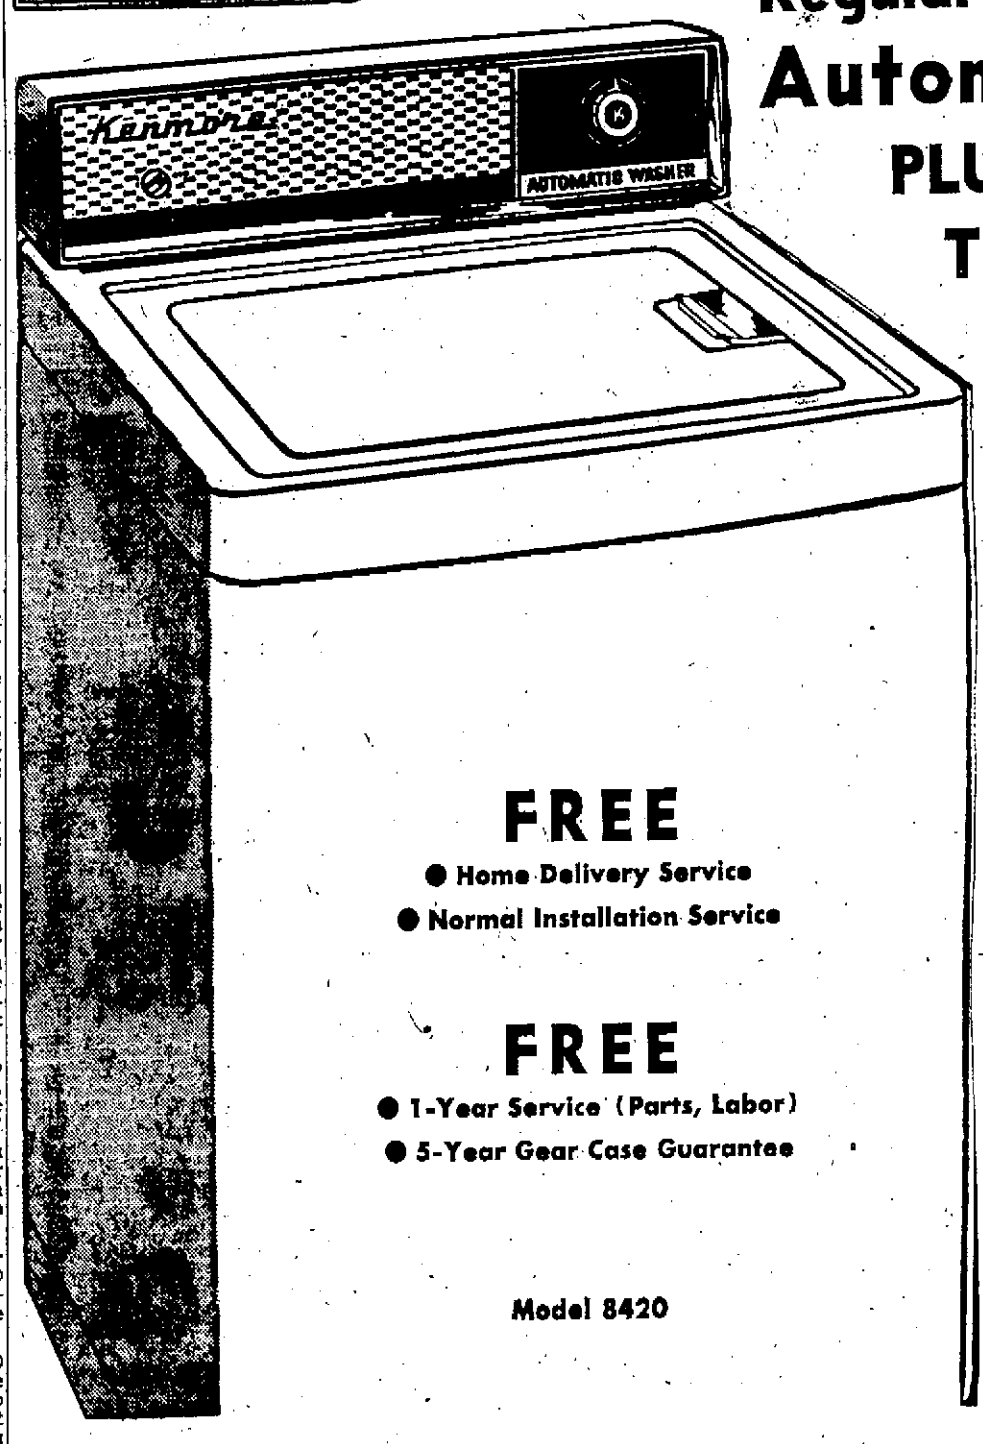

To conquer space the United States is going to have to produce "tremendously larger rocket engines," he says. "I mean engines far larger than what we can put together now. At present Russia probably has engines 10 times larger than what we have.

"Otherwise the problems are all known. The theoretical solutions are well established. Now comes the cumbersome part: Putting all this into technical hardware."

Tide Takes Pilot Body Out to Sea

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) — A midnight joyride in a plane reported stolen at Van Nuys ended in a crash in the ocean about a half mile off San Clemente early Saturday.

The pilot is presumably dead in the ocean. His male companion is in jail.

Peter Holloway, 40, Van Nuys, who swam to the beach and was found by two Camp Pendleton marines about 2 a. m., was taken to Van Nuys —75 miles north of here—and booked on suspicion of grand theft of the plane.

* * * *

DETECTIVE John Garrick of Van Nuys police said fishermen saw a body pitching in the surf near where Holloway left John L. Sipple, 34, Reseda, clinging to the plane. An outgoing tide carried the body to sea before it could be recovered, Garrick said.

Van Nuys police said Holloway gave this account:

He and Sipple, whom he knew only as "Whitey," met at a restaurant-bar near the Van Nuys Municipal Airport shortly after midnight.

"We had both just cashed our checks and were having a few drinks when Whitey suggested we fly to San Diego. I assumed he was a pilot and had his own plane and had nothing better to do, so I decided to go along."

Sipple taxied the four-place Piper cub to the back door of the bar and Holloway got aboard.

"I remember seeing the San Pedro harbor lights. Next thing I recall is the motor sputtering. Whitey shifted to the other tank, but nothing happened, so he tried to glide the plane down."

Holloway said Sipple apparently was seriously hurt when the plane hit the water. Holloway received minor scratches and bruises. The plane sank.

Van Nuys police said it was stolen from a charter and rental flight service at the Van Nuys airport.

Nikita Dons Uniform, Heaps Lavish Praise on Soviet Army

MOSCOW (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev, decked out in a bright blue lieutenant general's uniform, Saturday heaped praise on the Soviet armed forces on their 40th anniversary.

The Soviet communist party leader spoke at the huge sports palace in Lenin Stadium surrounded by other uniformed Soviet chieftains.

He said the Communist Party organizations in the armed forces are rallying servicemen around the party's central committee.

He called on Soviet forces to "strengthen military collaboration with the soldiers of the socialist countries who stand shoulder to shoulder with our army to guard the peace and security of the people."

Khrushchev's address was a message to the armed services from the Central Committee, the Supreme Soviet and the Council of Ministers.

* * * *

MARSHAL RODION Malinovsky, the defense minister, gave the main speech. He charged the United States, Britain and "other capitalist countries" with following a foreign policy that strives to "aggravate international relations and continue the arms race and preparations for war against the Soviet Union and the countries of the peoples democracies."

Malinovsky said the December NATO meeting in Paris proved the western powers plan to continue the arms race and "hatch plans for an attack against the Soviet Union and the socialist camp countries."

But he said the Soviet Union is prepared to repulse any attack. Soviet forces have missiles which can take a hydrogen charge to any point on earth, he asserted.

WASHINGTON (AP)—American military officials saw nothing new in a claim Saturday by Soviet Defense Minister Malinovsky that Russia has missiles able to hit any point on earth with nuclear explosives.

In general, Malinovsky's reference, in a speech marking the Soviet armed forces' 40th anniversary, seemed to follow closely what Soviet Boss Nikita Khrushchev said last summer.

There is no disposition by U. S. experts to deny that Russia may have tested rockets of 5,000-mile range. But Air Force officials and others raise the question of whether such Soviet missiles are operational, reliable and accurate—or still in the development and perfection phase.

GM Veep Launches Crusade

Edward T. Ragsdale, vice president of General Motors and general manager of Buick, will start a nationwide economic "crusade of confidence" Monday to spur car sales and "get our economy rolling again."

Ragsdale has charged a great deal of the lack of confidence in the economy has been caused by the over-emphasis of gloomy economic news and de-emphasis of good news.

Possibly in line with this philosophy, General Motors last week continued its policy of declining to report layoffs and plant closedowns unless confronted with information about a specific facility.

Ragsdale and his general sales manager, Edward C. Kennard, during the next three months will meet with many of Buick's 3,500 dealers in 26 cities in all sections of the country.

* * * *

RAGSDALE SAID he has asked each dealer to sell two more cars in February than were delivered in January and most have agreed.

"The President says we have reached the bottom of the business downturn," Ragsdale said. "But we won't have, unless something is done to bolster the people's confidence and get them to buy the things they need.

"Everytime anyone buys a new car he provides 30 days employment for an automobile worker, plus additional employment for workers in allied industries.

"The same is true when you buy a new suit of clothes, or a new home. You are contributing to the economy of the country. A little extra effort by a lot of people will get our economy rolling again," he said.

And, speaking of Jamestown, the heavy wind last Wednesday morning scalped the big neon sign off the top of the agency building at 1350 American Ave. The huge structure crashed down on the sidewalk right at the service entrance but, fortunately caught no pedestrians or cars.

There are two new faces at C. Standlee Martin's Oldsmobile emporium here. Elmer Romeyn, Cyril McTighe and Gordon Roberts have joined the new car sales staff and will be happy to help their friends "out of the ordinary and into an Olds."

Cadillac

The Decision That Needs No Explanation!

There are relatively few personal decisions a man can make that command the unanimous approval of his friends and acquaintances.

And among these is his choice of a Cadillac car.

For the things that inspire a man to Cadillac are simply too numerous to be overlooked.

Considered from a standpoint of its beauty—or its Fleetwood luxury—or its performance—or its craftsmanship—or its soundness of investment—Cadillac occupies a position entirely its own.

At the heart of this great goodness is, of course, Cadillac's experience in the creation of quality cars.

For more than half a century, Cadillac's sole concern in the manufacture of its products has been to make them as fine as automotive science would permit.

It is out of this unique constancy of purpose that has come Cadillac's international recognition as the Standard of the World.

We invite you to see, both in the showroom and on the highway, how brilliantly this latest Cadillac exemplifies all of these great traditions.

Whether you might choose the Sixty-Two Coupe or the Eldorado Brougham—you will find your decision beyond the realm of argument.

Naples-Bay Flood Curb Proposed

WELL, I found out who among our fellow citizens are wearing the finest clothes and why.

The dapper manager of the men's department of a store where I stopped for a look at some suits told me all about it.

He wrapped me in the coat of an imported fabric number and had me look in the glass.

"Now that," he said, "is the best. That's the suit worn by judges, lawyers and doctors. They wear suits like that to impress people. Buy that suit and you'll look like judges, doctors and lawyers. You'll be right there with the best dressed men in town."

It happened that I was rather roughly dressed when I went into the place—Pendleton jacket, slacks, no necktie. It was obvious to the salesman that I wasn't any judge, doctor or lawyer in casual attire. Probably he smelled an editor, for he said discreetly, when commenting on the rather substantial price of the suit:

"How often do you buy a suit—once every four or five years? You can afford this one so you can impress people the way judges, doctors and lawyers do."

DURING a State College English class discussion of the character and habits of Edgar Allen Poe, a student volunteered some information obtained from psychological research regarding the poet's imbibing.

Soon the conversation turned to the question of heredity, and someone suggested that drinking—or more precisely, the tendency to be a drinker — might be inherited.

Another student added to that the following thought-provoking comment:

"A man I know drinks martinis, and his little boy has a special appetite for olives."

Gin-soaked, I'll bet.

I'M INDEBTED to old newsman Roy McMillan for some interesting facts about George Washington, whose birthday was celebrated yesterday:

He never wore long trousers. Madison was the first president to do so.

Washington suffered from toothache. He finally had false teeth made which opened with springs and closed by jaw pressure. This made it difficult to smile—or maybe to stop smiling once he started. So he was usually grave.

He was one of America's first wheat growers. He planted wheat in 1762, by 1792 was growing 5,000 bushels a year.

He founded mule raising in the U. S.

He foresaw the crossing of the oceans by air. In 1784 he wrote: "I have only accounts of air balloons, to which I do not know what credence to give; as the tales related of them are marvelous, as they lead me to expect our friends in Paris in a little time will be ploughing through the air instead of the ocean to get to America."

Bro. McMillan picked out these two quotations from Washington as among those worth remembering:

"We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purposes of profiting by dear-bought experiences."

"Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."

THE TELEPHONE, according to a fellow I was chatting with yesterday, is an enemy of courtesy.

"I took the trouble," he said "to come here and speak to you in person.

"We were in the middle of our conversation when the telephone rang. You took the telephone off the hook and began listening to somebody else who had made no appointment, had not taken the trouble to come here in person, and who just simply butted in between us."

He said he knew the remedy, though.

Hereafter, he's just going to telephone me.

Burglar's Life Dreary One

Poor Pay, Jail Terms Reward His Long Hours

By FRED BOLINGER

There must be something very attractive about burglary because it is one of the most common crimes. About one-fifth of all Long Beach police work has to do with burglaries.

There were 2,522 reported here in 1957.

Easy work? Big pay? Detective Inspector Charles C. Sullans pointed out Saturday that it's really just the opposite.

"Burglary is one of the poorest paying jobs in the world," Sullans revealed.

This is agreed to by Detective Inspectors Don C. McMahan, Maurice Z. Wishon and Pat A. Paris, who also work on burglary investigations.

SULLANS FEELS that if more people knew how dreary the life of a burglar can be, fewer persons would want to become one.

"It's also one of the loneliest jobs," Sullans adds. "And for a night burglar the hours of work are disagreeable. He usually has to work alone, so he can keep whatever small profit accrues."

If a burglar realizes 10 per cent in cash of the value of a stolen article, he's lucky, according to Sullans.

He may average 25 cents an hour, if he keeps busy all the time.

Recently, a $600 motion picture camera was stolen in Long Beach. The crime was pinned on four youthful burglars. Detectives found that the camera was sold by the gang to a supply house for $58.

That amount split four ways comes to only $14.50 for each burglar.

A NIGHT-TIME burglar will pay a more severe penalty when he gets caught than a day-time operator.

Suspects who stole the camera could serve 5 years to life, for first conviction, if the article was stolen at night; 1 to 15 years, if it was a daytime job.

A burglar who specializes in stealing only money earns even less than one who steals household articles and merchandise.

"If $20 is found in a housewife's purse, it's a good haul," Sullans said. "Most burglars sometime or other swear never to steal anything but money, because it's easier to trace a burglar through cameras, jewelry, TV sets and what have you, when they're disposed of."

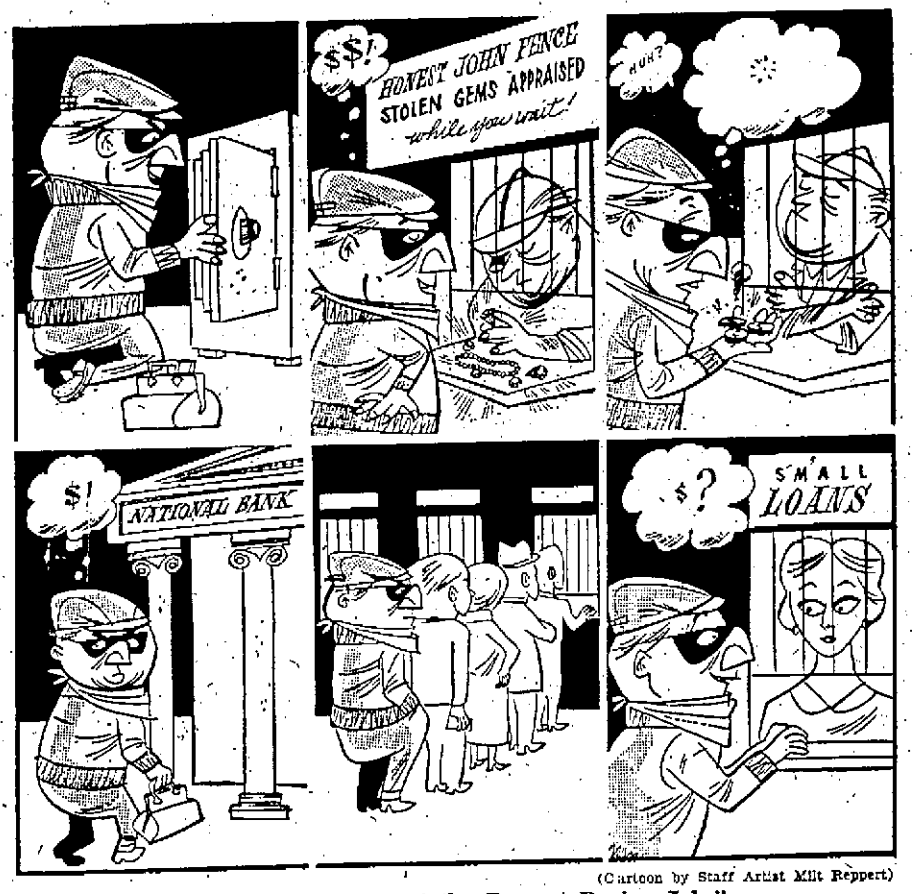

However, the temptation generally is too great and a burglar will snatch up other things along with money if he gets a chance, Sullans revealed.

BURGLARY ALSO is a hazardous occupation.

It may lead to crimes of violence. A burglar who is surprised by his victim may shoot him in a moment or panic, or the victim may shoot the burglar.

Or the burglar may hit the victim on the head with a butt of a revolver. That swing with the gun can turn a nice quiet burglary into an ADW—assault with deadly weapon.

(Cartoon by Staff Artist Milt Reppert)

"Burglary Is One of the Poorest Paying Jobs"

As to how most burglars get their start, Sullans explained: "They begin as sneak thieves, or petty shoplifters—all misdemeanors. But it's mighty easy to 'graduate' into burglary and that's a felony."

ABOUT 60 PER CENT of the 2,522 burglaries were committed by so-called professionals.

The other jobs were what detectives describe as "left-handed burglaries."

These were pulled by boy friends, youngsters, or "guests" who may have roomed in the victim's house, or stayed to dinner long enough to spot some choice loot.

As to solving burglaries, Sullans observed that the arrest of one suspect may solve a single burglary, or a hundred.

"That's why it's fun to catch a suspect. We never know how many jobs he'll clear up."

Sullans concluded: "It's easy to break into a house after dark, where no one's home. But it's tough to go to prison for 15 years."

New Walls Planned to Guard Shore

By GEORGE WEEKS

An $835,000 subsidence remedial program to prevent recurrence of recent tidal flooding in the Alamitos Bay-Naples area has been proposed by City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson.

Timing of the projects is uncertain, however, because the State Lands Commission has refused to authorize expenditure of tideland oil funds for similar works in that area.

City Mgr. Sam E. Vickers said he will attempt to get such an authorization and then recommend City Council approval.

Gilkerson's proposal calls for expenditure of $625,000 for protection of Alamitos Bay peninsula and $210,000 for Naples.

* * * *

MAIN ITEM in the peninsula program is a new bulkhead along Bay Shore Walk from 55th Pl. to 69th Pl.

The existing sheet-pile bulkhead is in poor repair with leaks at many of the joints, Gilkerson said.

Design of the new bulkhead is intended to make available a permanent beach on state park land between the existing wall and the new wall. Its location also would eliminate any question of its being within the tidelands—one of the legal objections raised against a proposal to heighten the existing wall.

* * * *

FOR NAPLES, the engineer has recommended the construction atop the existing wall coping of a reinforced concrete parapet wall two feet high and 10 inches wide. Tide gates to be installed at the end of existing storm drain outlets also are suggested.

A similar plan for increasing the height of the Bay Shore Walk seawall was submitted to the Lands Commission in 1956 but rejected as not being a subsidence remedial measure of the type that can be financed from oil money.

"The peninsula has subsided between 15 and 18 inches in the period from 1928 to the present, and the annual rate of subsidence is continuing at approximately one-half inch per year," said Gilkerson.

"Inasmuch as the original protective walls, both on the peninsula and in the Naples area, were constructed to an initial elevation of from 18 to 24 inches above high tide, this subsidence has virtually eliminated protection in these areas from tidal overflow at extreme high tides."

* * * *

HE RECALLED that on Feb. 4 the entire seawall along Bay Shore Walk was submerged by the sea, the flooded area covering a substantial portion of the peninsula. Flooding occurred at the same time in Naples but not to the same extent. The tide was reported at 6.2 feet, some 8 inches below the highest on record.

Gilkerson recommended against an alternative remedy, the proposed installation of tide gates with a navigational lock in the entrance to Alamitos Bay.

Such a facility would increase operational problems in small-craft activity.

Hastings Stricken Fatally

Glen Elmer Hastings, 55, long-time Long Beach businessman, died Saturday after a heart attack at his office, 430 E. Ocean Blvd.

Hastings, whose home was at 3511 E. 1st St., had resided in Long Beach since 1908. He was graduated in 1921 from Poly High School where he was a star athlete, playing on the school's first state championship basketball team.

He attended Washington State College.

With his wife, Wilma, Hastings owned finishing and modeling schools, beauty salons and a dress shop.

* * * *

HASTINGS WAS a member of the Palo Verde Masonic Lodge, El Bekal Shrine Temple, Scottish Rite Masons and was a charter member of the Pacific Coast Club.

Surviving are his wife, Wilma; a son, Glen; his mother, Mrs. William E. Hastings, and two grandsons.

Private service will be Monday afternoon in Sheelar-McFadyen Mortuary Chapel. The family has requested that flowers be omitted and a donation to the Heart Fund be made instead.

Judges Lengthen Work Day to Ease Court Congestion

By DON MADDOCK

Long Beach Superior Court judges will begin work 15 minutes earlier, effective March 3.

Presiding Judge Beach Vasey said Saturday the judges voted to lengthen their working day in hopes of helping to meet the present congestion of litigation.

The master criminal calendar and divorce calendars will be called at 9 a.m. instead of the present 9:15.

* * * *

JUDGE VASEY will call the civil trial calendar at 9:15. It now is set at 9:30.

Adoption hearings, set in Department B the first and third Thursdays of each month, will begin at 9:30 instead of 10, beginning March 20.

Other Department B calendars—law and motion, probate and orders to show cause—will not be changed from present times of 10, 9:30 and 9:30, respectively.

* * * *

THE LONGER WORK DAY is in line with plans of downtown Los Angeles courts to open 15 minutes earlier both morning and afternoon.

Long Beach Superior Court judges now begin afternoon work at 1:30 or 1:45 and no afternoon change was needed to align their courts with those in Los Angeles, Judge Vasey said.

Mate Jailed in Kidnap of L.B. Wife

John D. Wade, 44, was booked in city jail Saturday for investigation of kidnaping after his wife, Lorraine, 37, told police he held her captive for 10 days.

Mrs. Wade, 3823 E. 1st St., told investigators she obtained an interlocutory divorce decree from Wade Feb. 4 in Los Angeles.

Wade was arrested Friday afternoon and originally booked for investigation of grand theft.

Mrs. Wade told officers Wade forced her to accompany him on a trip through the Southland beginning Feb. 10.

Mrs. Carpenter was a native of Burlington, Iowa.

* * * *

SHE WAS A member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Episcopal Church.

Surviving are a son, Lee Carpenter; daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Sturges; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Service will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Bellview Cemetery, Ontario. Christensen-Pino Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Tax Protest Meeting Set

A taxpayers protest meeting sponsored by the Long Beach Apartment House Owners Assn. is slated for 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Lafayette Hotel.

Corinne Griffith, former motion picture star, will speak on "Abolish the Federal Income Tax." Advance reservations must be made with the association office.

No Increase in Taxes If Charter Changed

There's no tax boost involved in passage of a charter amendment at the March 4 city special election, City Tax Collector Frank Brejcha pointed out Saturday. On the contrary, he indicated, failure of the purpose of the election could result ultimately in tax increases.

The election has been called for the single purpose of adopting a charter amendment to permit unitization of the Wilmington Oil Field by the city in cooperation with private oil operators to stop land sinkage.

"Since the city's share in the unitization program will be paid for out of Tideland Trust Funds and no part of the repressurization work is to be financed out of tax moneys, this plan, if adhered to, can have no effect upon the tax rate," Brejcha said.

* * * *

"ON THE OTHER HAND, if the oil field is not repressurized and subsidence stopped, future land sinkage could damage property and reduce the tax base materially, thus increasing the tax rate.

"Also the loss of the Naval Shipyard is a real possibility, if land sinkage is not halted. That would put several thousand persons out of work."

Rustler Steals Horse, Leaves Lariat on Post

Podnah, there's a hoss thief loose in Long Beach.

The rustlin' culprit lassoed the critter, name of Kitten, from a pasture — that's right, a pasture — at Hammond Ave. and Artesia St. and made off with it.

He left his lasso on the gate post.

Kitten is about 8 years old, dark brown with three white stocking feet and a white crescent on its head and stands nigh onto 15 hands.

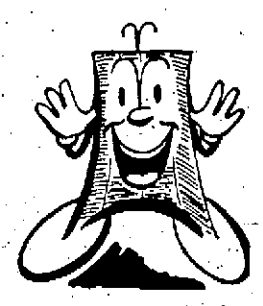

The owner, Judy A. Dedmon, 18, of 6837 San Luis Ave., Compton, told police Saturday that Kitten "looks more like a mule than a horse."

Girl, 9, Hurt by Car

Aileen M. Davis, 9, of 2606 E. 2nd St., suffered cuts and bruises Saturday when she was struck by a car while pushing her bicycle across Broadway at Temple Ave. She was treated at St. Mary's Hospital. Police identified the driver as Elma Lula Biehler, 60, of 350 E. Esther St.

The Road to Party Suicide

SOME CALIFORNIA Republican leaders seem determinedly bent on party suicide.

Despite a constructive move by Gov. Goodwin Knight to restore Republican harmony—disrupted by acts not of the Governor's doing—they are persisting in a course that spells division, chaos and the danger of defeat.

This is a year for which the Republicans needed a united front. Their best bet was to run the incumbents, and therefore the strongest candidates, for Governor and United States Senator.

BUT AFTER GOV. KNIGHT, the California party's top man, declared for re-election, Sen. W. F. Knowland announced his candidacy for the same position. Gov. Knight pointed out this conflict was unnecessary and that each incumbent should stick to his own position. But Knowland and his supporters refused to withdraw and Gov. Knight, placing party harmony above personal preference, himself withdrew from the governorship race and declared for U. S. Senator.

Instead of welcoming this attempt to close ranks for a harmonious campaign, Republican leaders hostile to Knight saw a chance to purge him entirely. Having first run out on him as a candidate for Governor, some of them ran out on him as a Senatorial candidate.

Thus at the California Republican Assembly's fact-finding committee meeting, members summoned to recommend an endorsement on Senator split 18 to 18 on the issue of supporting Knight against Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco. This left the recommendation undecided and the final decision on endorsement must be made at a convention of the CRA to be held in San Jose in mid-March.

GOV. KNIGHT HAS HAD 20 years of public service in the judiciary and in the legislative and executive branches of the state government. He has achieved a remarkable record of public support. As a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1950, he won both Republican and Democratic nominations. In the 1954 gubernatorial primary election, he not only won 1,198,896 Republican votes but 718,695 Democrats marked their ballots for him. In the general election of that year, Gov. Knight ran up the remarkable total of 2,290,519 votes, winning the election by a margin of over half a million votes.

With a Senatorial candidate of such demonstrated statewide popularity available to them, the only explanation of the action of the 18 CRA "fact finders" must be the desire to weaken the liberal wing of the Republican Party.

The Republican voters will have a chance to show their sentiments at the primary. If they want to repudiate the candidate-juggling that has been going on and to vote for the record and on the record, they should give Gov. Knight an overwhelming victory.

Happy Memories Encourage '58 Crossfiling Candidates

CANDIDATES for the top offices to be filled by California voters this year—the U. S. Senatorship and the Governorship—have indicated they will crossfile, seeking support in both parties at the June primary.

And it happens that the experiences of these men in past elections lend encouragement to all of them in their bids for votes in and out of their own parties.

EPLEY

In the Senate contest, only Gov. Knight has been in statewide races, where his record for bipartisan support has been exceptionally favorable.

In 1950, when he ran for re-election as lieutenant governor, Republican Knight won both the GOP and Democratic nominations at the primary. His Democratic opponent that year was Sen. George Miller of Contra Costa County, who trailed Knight in the Democratic voting by 173,000 votes. Knight, of course, won the GOP nomination by a big sweep.

In the 1954 primary, when he was running for governor, Knight got several hundred thousand Democratic votes in the primary. They weren't enough to give him a double nomination over Democrat Richard Graves, but it was an impressive showing that carried through to the general election, which he won handily.

REP. ENGLE, the Democrat in this year's Senatorial race, has not been in a statewide contest. But Engle has regularly been getting double nominations in his bids for re-election in the Second Congressional District, where he has become virtually a fixture.

Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, battling Knight for the GOP Senatorial nomination, has not been in a statewide election, but he is mayor of a major city and in the non-partisan contest for that office presumably received substantial Democratic support.

MOVING over into the governorship race, we find that both Republican Sen. Knowland and Democratic Atty. Gen. Brown, can look back on some happy experiences as candidates for double nominations.

Knowland was returned to the U. S. Senate in 1952 with the nominations of both Republican and Democratic Parties. His Democratic opponent that year was Clinton McKinnon, who made a pitiful showing.

Then in 1954, Democrat Brown romped off with the Republican as well as the Democratic nominations in his bid for re-election as Attorney General. He snowed under Fred Howser, Republican, in that primary. Brown even had considerable Republican newspaper support in that campaign.

CANDIDATES have long memories, and like all of us, their memories like to dwell on pleasant things. The men running for the top California jobs in this year's election have some pleasant things to think about as they review the past, and no doubt these happy experiences bolster their morale for the tough struggles ahead in 1958.

FCC Investigators Bent on Making Martyr of M'Carthy

WASHINGTON.—They seem to be intent here on making a martyr out of the late Sen. McCarthy. For never in the heyday of his anti-Communist crusade through congressional committee procedures did he indulge in the amount of hearsay stuff, innuendo and "guilt by association" which has characterized the hearings currently being held by the congressional subcommittee now investigating the affairs of the Federal Communications Commission.

Someone writes a letter to someone else saying it might be a good idea to contact a senator or a presidential assistant or the office staff of the Vice President to get some influence brought to bear on the subject of the grant of a TV license. Someone else says he hears through a friend that another friend heard that maybe some relative of the President by marriage may have been importuned to help to exert influence. Promptly the headlines are filled with the innuendoes, and the public is led to believe there is "guilt by association."

* * * *

FEW ON THE so-called "liberal" side—not even the various civil liberties organizations which are zealous defenders of individual rights when persons are seemingly accused unjustly of association with Communist "fronts"—are clamoring for a fair and orderly way of conducting the congressional hearing in question.

M'CARTHY
In His Footsteps

It's just too bad that the persons involved in the TV-license controversy were not accused of some sort of Communist connection. They would have had lots of defenders. The speechmaking would have been loud and long on the subject of the violation of personal liberties and the Bill of Rights.

To take refuge in an aphorism of the days of the McCarthy controversy, it isn't the "objective" of the House committee's current investigation which is to be criticized but only the "methods" used.

Certainly every corrupt influence should be exposed. But there is a right way and a wrong way to expose the improprieties whereby such pressure is exerted.

The right way, when stumbling on a name mentioned in a letter or in an executive session hearing, is to get hold of the person involved and get his side so it can be simultaneously presented to the public for what it's worth. Instead, there has been a lapse of several days between the time of the disclosure of some alleged connection or improper pressure and the establishment of the exact facts. The "leaking" to the press of staff memoranda prepared for a congressional committee has become a favorite device by which innocent persons are crucified.

* * * *

IF OFFICIALS are to be held up to the public as charged with some wrongdoing, they should have an opportunity to confront those who make the charges and even to cross-examine them through counsel. This is supposed to have been the net result of the debate which arose in connection with the hearings conducted by the late Senator from Wisconsin.

Every wrong allegedly committed in the McCarthy hearings has been committed over again in recent hearings but with even less basis for the charges than in the controversy over Communist activities and associations.

Bureaus Blind to Spirit of Law

TO THE EDITOR:

Recently an unemployed aircraft worker was denied his weekly unemployment payment because he was "unavailable for employment" on the day he and his family were held prisoners by a couple of convicts.

One reason state bureaus are often discredited in the public's mind is that they appear blind to the difference between the letter and and the spirit of the law.

Politics and Strontium-90

TO THE EDITOR:

Having recently read in the editorial writer's own newspaper that the rate of increase of cancer-producing strontium-90 in the bones of children is increasing at a surprising rate, one can only assume it is the editorial writer who is naive and not the hundreds of scientists who advocate abolishing nuclear tests.

* * * *

OUR GREAT scientific minds have been educated in the humanities as well as in science. It was his concern for humanity as well as his scientific discoveries that made Albert Einstein truly great.

The fallacy that scientists are not competent in the affairs of human living is just another way to discredit men who are at least as capable and often more so than politicians and editorial writers.

MRS. E. DAWSON

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We only wish the alarmists would worry as much about Russian strontium-90 as they do about U. S. strontium-90. If we ceased development of our nuclear weapons, and the Russians hit us, we will no longer have strontium-90 to worry about. We won't have anything to worry about.)

A Handout Is a Handout

TO THE EDITOR:

I like Eisenhower's proposals for expanding our military powers and curtailing some of the frills we enjoy, but apparently Sen. Kuchel doesn't.

Let's start at home. You are lampooning the farmer constantly about his subsidy (and I agree with you) but who stands to benefit most from the water storage project for California's San Joaquin Valley? Californians, of course, and Southern Californians in particular. Then let us solve our own problem. We're asking $225 million from the federal government.

In this subsidy business, I believe the grants to California have exceeded those of any other state, and in some instances have exceeded those of entire areas of other parts of the country. And it is subsidy. A handout in whatever guise is still a handout.

SENATOR SOAPER SAYS:

Sports-Car Driver Best Space Travel Candidate

By BILL VAUGHAN

A MICHIGAN professor thinks that the two-car family soon will be the rule. On the other hand, with more young people getting married and living with the folks, isn't there a trend toward the two-family car?

* * * *

MEN WHO can operate complicated controls while crowded into restricted quarters will make the best space travelers. So we may expect that the first humans to reach the moon will be sports-car drivers.

HIS LONGEVITY is attributed by a 102-year-old Nebraskan to the fact that he never drank or smoked. And, of course, at that age you don't have to try to impress people by thinking up something original.

* * * *

IN A WAY, we wish the politicians wouldn't talk about a tax cut. It would be easier on everybody's nerves if they'd just keep quiet and surprise us with it some morning.

DREW PEARSON

Halleck Hits Loose Talk on Economics

WASHINGTON—The big economic meeting at the White House between cabinet members and Republican congressional leaders was enlivened by some blunt, realistic lecturing by Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana, assistant GOP chief of the House.

"I'm getting a little fed up with all this loose talk from both sides on our economic problems," declared Halleck. "From the Republican side, it's a mistake, in my opinion, for our guys to be sounding off continually with these optimistic assurances to the nation. If we keep it up, people will begin to wonder if we are protesting too much.

REP. HALLECK
A Plague on Both Sides

"They will wonder if we are telling them the score, and they may get the idea maybe that we don't know the score ourselves.

"On the other hand, I think we ought to begin calling some of these professional gloom doctors on the Democratic side. They were predicting the same gloomy prospects in 1953, but they were wrong. We pulled out of the 1953-54 downturn, when unemployment averaged about what it is today, into the prosperous years of 1955-56-57.

"We are hearing the same free-swinging statements from the other side today, that we are going to pieces economically. It only makes matters worse by upsetting the confidence of the people."

Secretary of the Treasury Robert Anderson told the conferees that he didn't want to commit himself at this time on a tax reduction, adding that he hoped and felt business conditions would improve sufficiently by midyear to preclude the necessity of a tax cut. However, the conferees were dubious that "pump priming" public works alone would be enough to lift us out of the slump.

"THE DEMOCRATS WENT IN for a lot of this so-called 'pump priming' between 1933 and 1939," snapped Senate GOP Leader William Knowland, "but it didn't do much good. There were over 10 million people out of work in 1938. That's more than twice the number of unemployed we have today. The Democrats had another recession under Truman in 1949-50 when the unemployment average also was higher than it is today."

"Well, let's tell them about it when their calamity howlers moan about how the Republicans are selling the country down the river," broke in Halleck. "But we ought to put a brake on these constant protestations of optimism from our own side. If I was hunting in the mountains somewhere and had a guide who kept constantly assuring me that he knew the way, I would begin to doubt that he did."

L. L. COLBERT, PRESIDENT of Chrysler, has been lobbying both in Congress and the Pentagon to stop Secretary of Defense McElroy from cutting back the production of Jupiter missiles. Chrysler is supposed to manufacture the same number of Jupiters for the Army as Douglas Aircraft is making Thors for the Air Force. But lately, McElroy has considered cutting back the Jupiter because it will be more expensive and take longer to get into production than the Thor.

The Big Bidding Contest: Dollars vs. Rubles — How Long Will It Last?

IS IT FOREIGN AID, or mutual security?

Is the President's $3.9 billion request a foolish giveaway, or is the money "fully as important to our national defense as expenditures for our own forces"?

JOHN S. KNIGHT

Mr. Eisenhower says the safety of our families, the future of our children and even our continued existence as a nation depend upon the Mutual Security program he is submitting to Congress.

There are many patriotic Americans who disagree with this view. But their voices will not be heard in Washington next Tuesday when a bi-partisan all day meeting will be held under the high-sounding name of the National Conference on Foreign Aspects of U. S. National Security.

The purpose of the NCFAUSNS is to "sell" foreign aid to Congress and the American public.

* * * *

IT SEEMS that some "unenlightened" people are asking why the $60 billion already spent in foreign assistance hasn't persuaded our allies that we are a kindly, generous and peaceful nation.

How will more billions of our money buy their loyalty if they are still susceptible to Soviet blandishments?

Must the bidding contest—dollars vs. rubles — go on forever?

To answer these questions — and many more — President Eisenhower commissioned Eric Johnston to invite some 700 leading citizens to hear the NCFAUSNS sales pitch.

Of this number, approximately 100 have accepted "places of honor" on the platform.

Former President Harry Truman, ex-Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Adlai Stevenson will carry the work load for the Democrats.

On the Republican side, there will be the President and Vice President, the Secretary of State and Neil McElroy, the Secretary of Defense.

Eric Johnston has had a very gratifying response from those who were asked to attend. Few people decline an inviation written on White House stationery.

It will be interesting to see, however, what effect Johnston's sales promotion will have on the Congress.

Many Senators and Congressmen are questioning the magnitude of the recommended program, especially with a recession at home.

* * * *

SOME OF THEM may wish to ask Mr. Dulles, who has been predicting a crack-up of the Soviet economy, how the Russians are able to outdo us in economic handouts.

Everyone will concede the necessity of maintaining our military installations abroad. But must we, in order to make friends, exhaust our own resources to prop up the economies of 67 nations presently receiving our assistance?

10 Key Scientists Grads of Schools in California

WASHINGTON—Ten of the 16 key scientists who developed America's first satellite at California Institute of Technology are graduates of California public schools.

The National Education Association, which sent out letters commending the 15 public schools, said this underscores the relationship of the nation's public school system to America's scientific achievements.

NEA Executive Secretary William G. Carr commended the school systems for "academic programs that over the years have helped to educate men of such calibre."

The 16 Cal Tech men are associated with the Institute's jet propulsion laboratory, which shares credit for the launching of the Explorer I satellite. Laboratory Director William H. Pickering, born and educated in New Zealand, is the only member of the crew who is not a U. S. high school product.

Californians and the high schools they attended are:

John G. Porter, supervisor of the data analysis section, 24th Street High School and Pasadena Junior College.

Jack E. Froehlich, project director, Burbank High School.

Henry L. Richter, a native of Long Beach, coordinator of International Geophysical Year experiments, Narbonne High School in Lomita.

Manfred Eimer, assistant supervisor of satellite observations, Dorsey High School, Los Angeles.

Karl W. Linnes, supervisor of tracking station development, Francis Polytechnic High School, Los Angeles.

Robert J. Parks, supervisor of equipment tests, Newport Harbor High School in Newport Beach.

Eberhardt Rechtin, a consultant, Redondo Beach high school.

John G. Small, in charge of missile operations, San Rafael High School.

Robertson Stevens, in charge of microlock and satellite antenna, Herbert Hoover High School, San Diego.

Allen E. Wolfe, supervisor of electric circuitry, University High School, Oakland.

All of them are young—in the early and middle thirties.

Urge End to 3 C.C. 'Luxury Services'

A proposal to end three "luxury services" provided by the City of Long Beach is expected to be presented to the City Council by the Chamber of Commerce board of directors next month.

Majority sentiment of nearly 1,000 answers to a Chamber questionnaire favored discontinuing the Long Beach Municipal Band, city tax assessment services and the outdoor school camp program, according to the Chamber.

* * * *

CHAMBER COMMITTEES are planning a study of the questionnaire results this week and are expected to recommend to their board that the City Council be asked to halt the services.

Savings of $619,538 could be realized by ending the three programs and would nearly halve the city's $1,500,000 budget deficit expected this year, Chamber members point out.

Costs of operating the services annually include $201,839 for the city band, $262,000 for the city's tax collecting and assessment services and $155,699 for the outdoor camp program.

* * * *

CRITICS OF THE tax supported programs say:

The band is a luxury which cannot be afforded by the taxpayers.

The tax assessment program should be in the hands of the county, eliminating duplication.

Long Beach taxpayers provide all outdoor school camp capital improvements while other areas in the district make use of them without financial support, the Chamber report said.

Four-Cent Mail Rate Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) predicted Saturday that the Senate will vote next week for a four-cent stamp on all letters instead of the five cents asked by President Eisenhower on nonlocal mail.

The issue is to be fought out on the Senate floor, starting Tuesday, when a postal-rate-increase bill comes up for debate.

The present three-cent stamp, in effect since 1932, appears to be on its way out by July 1.

The House voted last year for a flat four-cent rate as part of a postal-revenue-increase bill. Then the Senate Post Office Committee voted 7-6 last Thursday to amend this measure to put a five-cent rate on intercity letters for a three-year period, July 1, 1958, to June 30, 1961.

MONRONEY AND Chairman Olin Johnston (D-SC) of the Post Office Committee plan to lead a fight to knock off the five-cent-stamp amendment.

Senate Republican Leader Knowland of California told reporters he expects "a fairly close vote" on the issue. Knowland said there is a "good chance of retaining" the amendment as long as the additional one-cent increase is for a limited number of years and revenue from it goes for modernization and construction of new Post Office buildings and facilities.

Dodger Hurlers Uncork as Florida Sun Arrives

By GEORGE LEDERER
(I, P-T Staff Writer)

VERO BEACH, Fla. — The sunshine state lived up to its name Saturday for the first time in weeks, and along with rays of warmth from old sol came rays of encouragement from Dodgertown.

Stringbean Stan Williams, a 6-4 righthander, drew the rave notices as the Dodgers went through a four-hour workout in temperature that reached the mid-70s.

Manager Walter Alston, Coach Charlie Dressen and chief scout Al Campanis are extremely high on Williams, who cut loose with some fastballs that took off like a grasshopper.

* * * *

"WILLIAMS is exceptionally fast," commented Alston. "His curve is only fair, but he has great potential. He needs only a change in speed to be a big winner."

The change, a valuable pitch that helped Johnny Podres handcuff the Yankees twice in the 1955 World Series, is what Alston and Dressen were trying to add to Williams' repertoire Saturday.

Williams, only 21, had a 19-7 record and 3.04 ERA with St. Paul last year. He struck out 223 batters in 246 innings.

* * * *

ANOTHER BRIGHT spot during the second full day of workouts was the performance of veteran Carl Erskine, plagued by a sore shoulder most of last year.

Erskine, who claimed he was throwing only at "medium batting practice speed" Friday, put a little more zip into it Saturday and reported his arm felt fine and his shoulder was free of pain.

Alston observed that Erskine was pitching better and with more ease Saturday than he did in the first three months of the 1957 season.

"There's really no way of rating our pitchers until they start bearing down in about two weeks. I can't tell yet just how many pitchers we'll carry, but we'll probably go north—I mean west—with about 12 or 13.

* * * *

"BUT IT ALL depends. If Erskine, Don Newcombe and Clem Labine are sound, we may carry fewer pitchers. It will depend on where we need more bench strength—in the infield or outfield."

Except for the usual stiffness, pitcher Danny McDevitt is the only early training casualty. He has been bothered by blisters on his pitching hand and feet.

Alston divided his pitchers into three squads of six each for competition workouts under coaches Dressen, Joe Becker and Greg Mulleavy.

Coaches keep score of this unique workout which includes fielding bunts, running, bunting (most fair balls of 25) and pitching strikes (most out of 25). The winning squad is allowed to quit one-half hour ahead of the others.

Today's drill is scheduled at 1 p.m., but with the weather turning warmer Alston announced he will switch the starting time to 11 a.m. beginning Monday.

DODGER DIS AND DATA—Vice president Fresco Thompson announced that Columbus, Ga., in the Alabama-Florida League will replace Shawnee, Okla., of the defunct Sooner State League as one of three Dodger Class D farm clubs. . . . Coach Joe Becker is a dead-ringer for movie star John Wayne. Reminded of this, Becker said, "I only wish I had his money." . . . Carl Furillo, at 200 pounds, is seven pounds lighter than at this time last year. His best playing weight is 195. "I did a lot of gym exercising and hunting during the winter," Furillo said, after rapping several solid line drives out of the batting cage. Asked if he was looking forward to playing in Southern California, "Skoonj" as he is known to teammates, said, "I'm more inquisitive. I'm anxious to find out what the fans are like." . . . Don Newcombe probably does more running than any other player in the game . . . Newk hasn't thrown much but is doing extra pickups (fielding short grounders). . . . Charlie Dressen claims that a major league pitcher today needs either a good sinker or a high fastball to be a big winner. . . . Roger Bean, a catcher on the Pueblo roster last year, checked into camp Saturday to help out during spring training. . . . Infielder Don Zimmer motored in from St. Petersburg and is expected to be in uniform today. . . . Alston claims he has no shortage of outfielders even though only five, including pinch-hitter Elmer Valo, are listed on the roster. "Don't forget," Alston said, "we also have available Junior Gilliam and John Roseboro . . . Gilliam, a switch-hitter, played on the picket line frequently last year. Roseboro originally was an outfielder before he was converted to a catcher. . . . Connie Grob (6-3 at L.A. and 5-8 at Montreal) and Bill Harris (16-10 at Montreal and 0-1 with the Dodgers) arrived Saturday to bring the squad to 25 players. . . . Pitcher Jackie Collum remains a holdout, while the two Renes, outfielder Frio and pitcher Valdes, are among the missing because of visa difficulties.

OSC Drubs UCLA, 77-61; SC Spilled

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

Led by Dave Gambee, who pumped in 30 points to become the all-time scoring king in Pacific Coast Conference history, the Oregon State Beavers handed UCLA a 77-61 whipping in their "fight for survival" in the conference title race here Saturday before 3,500 fans in the Long Beach City College gym. Stanford toppled the Trojans of SC, 69-61, in the first game of the doubleheader.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The 6-7 Gambee surpassed the old record of 855 points held by Bob Houbregs of Washington with 27 seconds left to go when he dropped in two free throws . . . and then boosted his three-year conference scoring total to a record 858 with a sensational 40-foot set shot as the gun ended the game.

* * * *

EARLIER this season, Gambee became Oregon State's all-time scorer and has now run his total for all games—both non-conference and conference—during his three varsity seasons at Corvallis to 1398 points, which is 143 more than the old mark set by Cliff Crandall in the late 1940s.

The Gambee-inspired triumph over the Bruins was Oregon

State's ninth conference win against three defeats and keeps them hot on the heels of the pace-setting California Bears. Meanwhile, the loss was the fourth for UCLA against nine victories, leaving them only a slim hope of overtaking either Cal or the Beavers in the final two weeks.

UCLA opened with a rush and forged into an early 8-2 lead, but the Beavers with their superior speed, rebounding strength and Gambee's scoring punch gradually assumed command in the next few minutes.

Oregon State caught up with the Bruins at 9-9 and then charged into a lead they never relinquished after only seven minutes had elapsed when Lee Harmon netted a 10-foot jump and Jim Anderson followed with a 15-footer.

FROM THAT POINT, the Beavers pulled out to a 13-point advantage in the next 12½ minutes which the Bruins managed to slice to nine points at

Hanna Glad to Be 'Home'

By JERRY WYNN

Hanna, Hanna . . . rah, rah, rah . . . the cheers swept like wild fire through the City College gym as big Jim Hanna scored 34 points to lead the Rabbits of Poly High to the Southern California CIF prep championship.

That was a little more than two years ago. This weekend Hanna returned to the scene of his greatest triumph for the first time as a member of the University of Southern California basketball team. A fraction of an inch taller (6-7¾), many pounds heavier (235) and a mature married young man of 19, he was happy to be back.

"I just love this place," he said, surveying the glistening hardwood, empty stands and tall rafters. "I still get goose pimples thinking about those CIF games. We sure wanted to win badly for the coach (Del Walker). I don't know if I'll ever have a greater thrill."

* * * *

CIF CO-PLAYER of the year in basketball and a triple letter winner (football and baseball) at Poly, Hanna left Long Beach for SC as one of the most sought-after prep cagers in local history. He had great size, good speed and quick hands. He couldn't miss.

Jim lived up to his promise as a freshman, pacing the Trobabes to a 14-1 record with a 17.0 scoring average and 46.1 shooting percentage. But this year on the varsity—although second leading scorer with a 10.8 average and a good rebounder—his success has been limited.

"I think I'll do much better now that I'm playing offensively at forward instead of center," he observed. "I like to shoot facing the basket and moving in. At center, you have to hook. Since our team works off the forwards, I was often left out of the play. At forward, I'll be able to dribble, move around and play as I did in high school."

* * * *

HAVE THE TROJANS played up to expectations?

"No. We haven't hustled enough and our inexperience has hurt. The PCC is awful rough you know. You've got to hustle all the time. You just can't let up without getting hurt."

Hanna bent back his strong, crew-cut head, paused, then earnestly said:

"I'll tell you something. The boys on this team are real close, and that's what makes for a championship club. I wouldn't be surprised if we took it all the next two years."

Which has been the best team you have played?"

"USF. They've got great balance, move the ball well and

Konrads Sets Four Records

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Konrads, 15-year-old Latvian-born swimmer, won the 1,650-yard freestyle swim in the Australian National Championship Saturday night, setting four world records en route to his easy triumph. His time was 17 minutes 28.7 seconds, world records for both 1,650 yards and 1,500 meters.

Along the way he was timed in nine minutes 17.7 seconds for the 880-yard and 800-meter distances.

If Konrads' four times are approved, it will give Australia every world record in men's freestyle swimming.

It was only the second time that Konrads, whose parents now are Australian citizens, had gone 1,650 yards. The first was two years ago at the Olympic trials when his time was 19:13. Since then he has grown four inches and added 28 pounds.

Dawn Fraser, Australian Olympic mermaid, shaved three full seconds off her own world record in winning the 220-yard freestyle in two minutes, 14.7 seconds. Lorraine Crapp, another Olympian, was second in 2:22.

The men's 110-yard freestyle went to John Devitt, who was timed in 55.9 seconds.

All My Troubles Are Behind Me--Newk

By GEORGE LEDERER
(I, P-T Staff Writer)

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Big Don Newcombe, a Dodger disappointment last year, believes all his troubles are behind him.

Looking exceptionally trim at 240 pounds, his lightest spring reporting weight in five years, Newk revealed Saturday that his back and right elbow, which plagued him during most of 1957, are cured.

After pitching the Dodgers to the pennant in 1956 with 27 victories and only seven defeats, Newk slipped to an 11-12 record last year as the Dodgers fell to third place.

The new Newcombe, relieved by a hypnotist of his mental block against flying, also vows he'll never again sleep in an air-conditioned room without a shirt. This was but one of many incidents leading to his downfall last year.

* * * *

"I CAUGHT COLD sleeping in that air-conditioned hotel room last August and as a result my arm was a bit stiff," Don recalled. "When I tried to favor the arm, I pulled a muscle in my back. I wasn't the same after that."

Prior to that, Newk had a bad elbow and then injured the middle finger of his pitching hand. For three weeks Newcombe had to change his grip on the ball. "But it was impossible to pitch with just the thumb and index finger. I couldn't get anything on the ball.

"Now I feel fine and I'm looking forward to playing in the Coliseum. It'll be a tremendous thing."

* * * *

NEWCOMBE is not a stranger to Southland fans. He has pitched five times in post-season exhibition games at Wrigley Field under the promotion of Bill Veistner.

"I've always pitched well at Wrigley. I had one of my best games there when I beat Bob Lemon's All-Stars, 2-1, in '53."

Newcombe has not turned a ball since the end of last season. He turned down an offer to barnstorm with Willie Mays' Major League All-Stars and instead was advised to take regular steam baths and exercises in a gym.

"I weighed in at 248 at the end of the season. I'm already down to 240 and that's my best playing weight."

Newcombe has not seen the Coliseum and its controversial 251-foot leftfield foul line. But he isn't particularly worried about a deluge of home runs.

* * * *

"LET'S FACE IT," Newk says. "A hitter will pull the inside pitch no matter how hard the pitchers throw. But in the Coliseum the emphasis will be on control, keeping the ball away from the righthanders. And the pitcher will be more conscious of the homer hurting him."

Since Newcombe is one of the league's finest control pitchers he should have no rea-

Delany Scores in 4:03.7

NEW YORK (UP) — Late-charging Ron Delany scored his 21st straight indoor mile triumph Saturday night when he ran Hungary's Istvan Rozsavolgyi into the boards with two laps to go in four minutes, 3.7 seconds in the National AAU championships at Madison Square Garden.

Missing Gunnar Nielsen's three-year-old world indoor record by only one-tenth of a second, the Irish whippet from Villanova who became the first man to win three straight AAU miles, indoors, sprinted home 15 yards in front of Rozsavolgyi. Jim Grelle of the University of Oregon was third.

* * * *

ROZSAVOLGYI thrilled a crowd of 13,500 as he sprinted into the lead with two laps to go and bolted 10 yards in front. But Delany overtook him with a brilliant burst of speed, roared into the lead with one lap to go and never was threatened from there on in.

In other events, Bob Backus of the New York A. C. set a world record of 65 ft. 4¾ in. in the 35-pound weight throw; Parry O'Brien won the 16-pound shotput with a heave of 60 ft. 1¾ in.; and Greg Bell of Indiana took the broad jump at 25 ft. 5¼ in.

In running events, Hayes Jones, 19-year-old Eastern Michigan sophomore, set a meet record of 7.1 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles; Ed Collymore of Villanova won the 60-yard dash in 6.2 seconds; Yugoslavia's Velisa Mugosa won the three-mile run in 13:54.2; Charlie Jenkins of Villanova took the 60-yard run in 1:11.3; and Zbigniew Orywal of Poland captured the 1000-yard run in 2:14.1.

A WILD TALE

Bowler Hits 300 Game

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A bowler sought help from an instructor to cure a wild hook.

Conrad Wild of Milwaukee, who averages a net 188, told Ray Schanen about his flighty ball.

"Roll the first one and I'll try to see what's wrong," Schanen said.

It was a solid strike.

"See anything wrong?" asked Wild. Schanen shook his head. Two, three, four, five more balls—all strikes.

"See anything wrong yet?" Wild inquired, a bit embarrassed by now. Schanen said he hadn't.

Wild's strike string stretched to 8, 9, 10, 11 and finally 12—every one in the 1-3 socket for his first 300 game.

Sports Merry-Go-Round

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

"I don't know why I'm sitting next to you, the way you newspaper fellows from Long Beach have treated me. But, here I am!"

Such was the introduction of Kenny Fagans, the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF) commissioner, Friday night as he pulled up a chair at the press table next to yours truly and prepared to view the SC-Oregon State basketball game.

Fagans had just worked the UCLA-Stanford game with Lou Batmale and admitted he didn't want to talk shop, but just to sit back and enjoy the Trojan-Beaver affair.

However, midway through the first half, Fagans realized—as did everyone else in the City College gym—that the one-sided game wasn't too enjoyable and he proceeded to "talk shop."

"You fellows in Long Beach certainly keep a fellow on his toes, especially at the end of football season," chuckled Fagans. "Why, do you know that your newspapers have been on my back for the last three football seasons. It's getting to be a game now."

I don't know how much of a game it is, but we've certainly been on Mr. Fagans' back for the past three seasons. The first two "debates" centered around certification of St. Anthony High School for the post-season playoffs and last year's concerned an asserted slugging match between Fagans and Long Beach State College gridder, Jerry Sullivan. Fagans was officiating the 49er-L.A. State game when the latter incident was ignited.

What will this coming football season bring?

"I shudder to think, my friend," Fagans roared, "I shudder to think."

★ ★ ★ ★

FAGANS CONFESSED the Stanford-UCLA game was a rough one for an official.

"I'd rather officiate a fast-moving game, even when I'm forced to blow my whistle more," stated Kenneth, "than a deliberate game like Stanford and UCLA played. We're used to officiating at a fast pace out here and a comparatively slow game makes it real rough on us.

"We took some fancy jockeying from one fellow at this press table during that first game, but I think we did a good job officiating. When do you find a boy ending a game these days with a free throw and not having the 1-and-1 advantage?"

What Fagans meant was that he and Batmale called a foul-free game. For a player to have a two-shot free throw opportunity, the other team must have committed seven fouls during that half. Stanford hadn't when UCLA's Jim Halsten ended the game with a free throw.

As for that "one fellow at this press table," Fagans was referring to the second game's telecaster, who was "relaxing" during the first contest. The relaxed Sam had a hazardous time steering UCLA to that 46-43 victory. He almost didn't.

NOTABLE QUOTES . . .

"Milwaukee will NOT romp to the National League title this season," snapped the Braves' captain, catcher Del Crandall, in Fullerton. "We may win the title, but we won't romp. Stuff I've been reading like that from the East makes me sick. We're in a tough league. And those Dodgers will be murder this year. Oh, they may miss guys like Campanella and Snider—if Duke's knee doesn't come around—but they'll be tougher to beat in the Coliseum than they ever were in Ebbets Field. With that tremendous fan enthusiasm that's bound to rub off on the players, the Bums will be 50 per cent better than last season!"

"I was touched to read in your column a few days ago that your office was flooded, your files floating around like the lost animals on Noah's Ark, and that your assortment of record books had fallen victim to damp plaster that the rains nudged from the walls. I'll remember this when I cover a fire and the sparks are flying, when I cover a flood and the water's raging, or when I have to wade through hell and high water to snap a picture" — John Neagle, crime photographer.

"If I was in the American League, I'd worry myself to death about Cleveland," declared Dodger veep Buzzie Bavasi, in Los Angeles. "Frank Lane is sharp and tricky. He pulled off a deal two days ago that made everybody laugh at him. Why? In essence, he swapped an aging, no-hit catcher (Jim Hegan) for a kid with lots of potential (J. W. Porter). Do you know, we would have jumped at the chance to get Porter, who may be the big surprise in the American League this season?"

"When your time comes, it just comes, that's all. I cheated death twice in the last three months, but it wasn't my time, so I'm still here. In December, I ripped into a hay bale at Riverside and my midget auto flipped into the air. There was hardly a bolt worth salvaging when the dust settled, but, thanks to a sturdy safety belt, I'm still here. Then, two weeks ago, a stock car bumped me from behind at Phoenix and sent my car out of control. I went over and over again and the car was a total loss. I wasn't hurt a bit. So, I'll be out there again today"—George Amick, 5-foot-5 driver, who is entered in the Pomona 100-miler.

THE PONY EXPRESS is on time again:

"Tell Duke Snider that if he doesn't like to live too close to pitchers, so that he don't have to ride home with them after a game, that I'm sure the pitchers will hold up under the loss. I see Mr. Snider is still the quiet, unassuming young gentleman that he was when we played together at Compton High." (signed) An Ex-Tarbabe, Compton.

(Now that Duke's stationed in the Southland, you two friends should get together one of these summer days.)

"No wonder people hate you and Kelley. You always pick fights. Like when you get mad at Charley Church because he didn't let USF play Saturday night. Who came here first, Long Beach or San Francisco?" (signed) Dick Chapman, Long Beach YMCA.

(Now, there's a real $64,000 question!)

"So the Dodgers are mad because SC is protesting loss of their parking lots. Will you tell that larcenist, Slick O'Malley, to go right back to his gopher hole in Brooklyn where he can rob the tenement trash, and leave us civilized people alone. While you're at it, join him!" (signed) Clifford Powell, 1832 Junipero.

(What, and miss the fun when Don Newcombe tangles with one of those SC parking lot attendants?)

Problems? Even Haney and Stengel Have Them

By BEN OLAN
The Associated Press

Problems? Every one of the 16 big league baseball managers has them.

And the headaches are bound to increase next Saturday with the official opening of the spring training season.

Even pennant-winning pilots Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves, and Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees won't be excepted from the demanding grind. Like the others they'll have to worry about Rookie trials, hectic exhibition schedules, player injuries and inevitable roster-trimming decisions.

Will the Bums of Brooklyn become the darlings of Los Angeles? Will the Giants come out of their fog in San Francisco? Can Walt Alston of the Dodgers find a catching replacement for the injured Roy Campanella? Can the Boston Red Sox count on another banner year by the 39-year-old Ted Williams? Will Cleveland's Herb Score be able to come back?

* * * *

THESE ARE only a few of the questions to be tackled in the next few weeks.

All 16 clubs will be back at their 1957 spring training camps this year. The only new manager hired since the close of the last campaign was Bobby Bragan. He caught on with the Cleveland Indians after the Pittsburgh Pirates dropped him in favor of Danny Murtaugh.

Let's look at some of the strong and weak points of each club as the official start of the training season approaches (clubs listed in order of last season's finish):

AMERICAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK—Good rookie crop to help Mickey Mantle, Yogi Berra and Co. But Stengel must come up with left-fielder and firm-up the shortstop situation involving Gil McDougald and Tony Kubek.

Chicago—Pitching definitely improved with the addition of Early Wynn and Ray Moore. But skipper Al Lopez needs power yielded in giving up Minnie Minoso and Larry Doby. The Sox hope Al Smith, obtained from Cleveland, and big first baseman Ron Jackson can pick up the slack.

Boston—Very little change. Infielder Pete Runnels seems only important new man and he'll likely only be used as a reserve. Second base and shortstop jobs are open although a strong comeback by Billy Klaus would help.

Detroit—Acquisition of Billy Martin, Jim Hegan, Gus Zernial and Tom Morgan appears to have strengthened club considerably. To go all the way, Tigers need improved performances by Harvey Kuenn, Billy Hoeft and Frank Lary.

Baltimore—Doby gives Orioles lefthanded power it lacked. And manager Paul Richards helped out by recommending shortening of home park fences. Southpaw Billy O'Dell may be ready to become big winner.

Cleveland — Frank Lane has helped each team he's been with. So why stop with Indians? Score must win 20 games for them to move into first division. Addition of Minoso and pinch-hitter Mickey Vernon should help.

Kansas City—Harry Craft has numerical pitching strength with 23 on roster. Duke Maas, acquired from Detroit, looms as ace of staff, backed up by Ralph Terry, Jack Urban, Ned Garver, Alex Kellner and Wally Burnette. Other new faces include outfielder Jim Small and catcher Frank House, also from Tigers.

Washington—Most important newcomer is big first sacker Norm Zauchin. Catching strongest point with three topflight men in Clint Courtney, Ed Fitzgerald and Lou Berberet. One of three may go in trade.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Milwaukee—Stronger, if anything. Exceptional pitching looks even better with addition of Bob Rush and Don Kaiser from Chicago and Joey Jay and Carleton Willey from Wichita farm. A healthy Billy Bruton will straighten out lone weak spot in outfield.

St. Louis—Still looking for first rate centerfielder. Also needs more pitching depth to match Braves. Some of stars such as Stan Musial, Al Dark and Del Ennis moving up in older age bracket.

Dodgers — Alston counting heavily on rookie Don Demeter to win outfield job. Pitching of Don Newcombe and John Podres figures to improve. But none of available catchers appear near Campanella's class.

Cincinnati — Numerically stronger in pitching bolstered in trades with Cardinals and Philadelphia. Harvey Haddix, from Phils, should fill southpaw needs. Infield strongest department with three good first basemen in Dee Fondy, George Crowe and Steve Bilko.

Philadelphia — Wally Post (from Cincinnati) gives club fine outfield. Ed Bouchee will be missed. Comeback by Robin Roberts could put Phils in the race.

San Francisco—Manager Bill Rigney counting on youngsters Willie Kirkland and Orlando Cepeda to back up Willie Mays. Pitching will be adequate if Johnny Antonelli recovers form. Catching is sore spot.

Pittsburgh — A healthy Ted Kluszewski coupled with right-handed punch supplied by Frank Thomas can move Pirates up a few notches. Fine double play combine in Bill Mazeroski and Dick Groat. Pitching is sound.

Chicago — (Tied Pittsburgh for 7th)—Taylor Phillips will have to come through with fine season to make deal with Braves pay off. Some promising rookies on roster, but looks as though team will have to count again on Ernie Banks and Walt Moryn for most of batting punch.

Alumni '9' Wrecks Vikes 20-3

Long Beach City College's Alumni broke a three-game loss streak and routed the Viking varsity, 20-3, in their annual clash Saturday.

The Alumni wrapped up the game in the first inning when it scored six runs on six hits, two errors and a hit batsman. The first five Alumni batters singled.

Gordon Seyfried, under contract to the Detroit Tigers, got credit for the win. The loss was the Vikings' second straight of the season.

Idaho Rips Washington

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP)—Borrowing a page from the California Bears who defeated them Friday night, Idaho used similar tactics to surprise Washington, 85-63, in a Pacific Coast Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The Vandals took over midway in the first half and built a 42-31 intermission lead and steadily increased the margin in the second half.

Capt. Gary Simmons stopped all scorers with 30. Big Doug Smart of Washington, who has been runnerup to Simmons in the PCC scoring race, got 28.

STUNS KANSAS
Nebraska in Upset

LINCOLN (UP)—Little Jim Kubacki hit a long, twisting jump shot with two seconds left Saturday night to boost Nebraska to a 43-41 upset victory over fifth-rated Kansas.

The Huskers, who were beaten, 102-46, by the Jayhawks earlier, took time out with 1:10 remaining and went into a stall, waiting to take a chance with one good shot.

Kubacki, who minutes before had begged Coach Jerry Bush to let him suit up and had rushed from the stands to put on a uniform, took the ball and, with his back to the basket, twisted and sank the decider.

Wilt Chamberlain of Kansas scored 18 points.

Cal Rolls On, 59-48

PULLMAN (AP)—The confident California Bears were content to shoot only when clear Saturday night in beating Washington State, 59-48, to retain their lead in the Pacific Coast Conference basketball race.

It was a team victory for the Bears who appeared to hustle only when their comfortable margin, which they held most of the game, was threatened.

5 YANK HURLERS HOLDOUTS

ST. PETERSBURG (AP)—Five members of the New York Yankees' pitching staff were officially listed as holdouts Saturday when they missed the American League champions' opening workout of the spring.

Righthanders Bob Turley, John Kucks and Bob Grim conferred with personnel director Lee MacPhail and walked out to think matters over.

Righthander Tom Sturdivant is enroute from his Oklahoma City home for a conference, probably today. Lefthander Tommy Byrne is at his Wake Forest, N.C., home and hasn't disclosed, as yet, whether or not he intends to play ball this year.

Only 13 pitchers and four catchers, 12 shy of full strength, were on hand Saturday as spring training began for the battery men of the world champion Milwaukee Braves.

Heading the list of absentees were six unsigned pitchers—Lew Burdette, Bob Buhl, Gene Conley, Don McMahon, Juan Pizarro and Humberto Robinson.

Joe Ginsberg, second string Baltimore catcher, was signed Saturday to a 1958 contract calling for a slight raise, reducing the list of unsigned Orioles to seven.

Vie for Crown Tuesday

By HAL ILLINGWORTH

Long Beach City College routed Bakersfield, 66-50, Saturday night and moved into a tie for the Metropolitan Conference basketball lead before 1500 fans in the Viking gym.

The Vikings and Valley JC are now tied with 11-2 records and meet next Tuesday at Valley for the title. Bakersfield is third with a 10-3 mark.

The game was never close as the Vikings took advantage of poor Bakersfield first-half shooting to grab a commanding lead. The Renegades tried 33 shots in the first half and hit only seven while Long Beach hit on 11 of 27. The Norse led 24-9 with 8:01 left in the half and held a 32-16 halftime advantage.

* * * *

BAKERSFIELD made a gallant bid to get back into the game during the second half but could get no closer than five points, 49-44 with 5:44 remaining.

At that point, however, Bill Ellis hit a lay-in and Dick Markowitz a jump to push the Vikings back into a commanding nine-point lead. In the last three minutes the Vikings hit 13 points while Bakersfield could get only four.

Long Beach hit on 24 of 50 shots for the entire game and out-rebounded the Renegades, 42-32. Dave Jones was the top Norse man of the boards with 12 rebounds.

MARKOWITZ topped game scorers with 18 points while teammate Ellis scored 16. The Vikings are 22-4 for the season and did not lose a game at home.

Pajarito Cleared; Fight Definitely on for April 1

MEXICO CITY (AP)—An official said Saturday night the Mexican Boxing Commission has proof Ricardo "Pajarita" Moreno was not in a night club brawl, and that his suspension would be lifted Monday.

The popular young fighter is scheduled to meet Hogan "Kid" Bassey in a featherweight title fight April 1 in Los Angeles.

When he was reportedly involved in a night club brawl, the boxing commission Feb. 13 suspended him indefinitely pending an investigation.

California boxing promoter George Parnassus, worried about the case, flew here early this week. After watching the Pajarito (Little Bird) in workouts, he said the fighter was in top form, and the fight would go ahead as scheduled.

Mexican newspapers sharply criticized the boxing commission, which has delayed action. Papers have charged that the night club incident was "sabotage" by opposing promoters who wanted the fight in Mexico.

Stan the Man Plays in Coliseum May 16

(31st and final article of a series on National League stars who will visit Los Angeles during the 1958 season.)

Stan the Man!

That's the well-earned title of Stanley Frank Musial, a modern-day ball player for whom the Hall of Fame's portals will be opened when he hangs up his St. Louis Cardinal spikes.

You'll be seeing him in the Coliseum Friday, May 16.

His bat does his talking:

FIFTEEN straight seasons hitting .300 or better — a modern National League Record.

Seven batting championships (only one short of Honus Wagner's all-time mark).

A lifetime mark of .580 in slugging for an NL record.

One hundred or more runs in 12 different seasons, including 11 in a row—both NL marks.

He shares the league record with George Burns and Rogers Hornsby by having led the league in runs scored five seasons.

Thirteen seasons with 300-or-more total bases is a major league standard, also held by Lou Gehrig.

Ranking 10th in the all-time hit list, he is scheduled to join the 3,000-club with his 43rd 1958 safety. By leading the league in hits on six occasions, he set another league mark. He needs a single to tie Mel Ott's NL record of 5,041 total bases.

Ten seasons with 100-or-more RBIs is another of Musial's circuit standards.

He has led the league in doubles eight times, and if he does it again, he passes Wagner and Speaker for the major league record.

He's the only NL player ever

Once Over Lightly

By DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

This being the first spring that Southern California has ever had a major league team of its own in training—and, of all places, in Florida—fans will be far more interested in the stories and features coming out of the various training camps than in previous years.

Last spring when the prospect first loomed that we would have a major league club by this year, we queried the various writers coming through Los Angeles with their respective clubs —Red Sox, Indians, Giants, Cubs, etc.—what readers should expect in the way of coverage from the training bases.

Up to this year, spring training news in Southland papers, of course, just barely scratched the surface. Only major developments were reported.

Now, we'll be getting much more detailed reports.

What's it like in the typical Florida training camp? One Eastern writer summed it up perfectly. He guaranteed that the following situations are bound to be recorded this spring in the various camps:

A manager is an odds-on choice to announce "I'm ready to deal anyone on the club if it can help me."

The fast-baller will tell people he is now a "pitcher" instead of just a "trower."

THE TEAM PLAYBOY WILL DECLARE he has taken the pledge.

A kid-pitcher will get some hitters out in an exhibition game and will be hailed as a new Bob Feller.

The sore-armed hurler will explain that a winter's rest has cured his ailment, but will add that it's too early yet for him to throw hard.

It's a cinch a catcher will get his finger split by a foul tip during batting practice.

The manager of a second-division team will declare that "every position on this club is wide open."

A player who showed up overweight will resent any mention of his surplus poundage.

At least one coach on every club will sit in the hotel lobby after dinner and stay there until it's time to go to bed.

A player who gripes about being worked too hard will head for the golf course the first time he has any leisure time.

There will be deep-sea fishing excursions with one or more players getting seasick.

A manager will get into an argument with an umpire in the lobby of the hotel about the interpretation of a rule.

THE OLD-TIMERS WILL TELL the rookies how tough it was years ago when they tried to break in.

There will be endless arguments on how to pitch to Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, etc.

Fans staying at the hotels will attempt to join groups of players even though they are uninvited.

There's always a player who will give free advice on the stock market.

Several managers will be quoted as saying "all I ask from a player is that he hustles."

And a pitching coach will repeat the old line—"you got to get it over."

The players who like Western movies will team up, as will those who like to attend the dog races or enjoy some other activity.

The players will complain about the size and tenderness of the steaks. It always happens.

The writers will predict a pitcher will win 25 games.

A bonus player will ride around in the flashiest car.

There will be screams from several sources that "they" were misquoted by reporters.

And there'll be the ever-present players who head for their rooms early with a few cans of beer concealed under their coats.

THE GUYS WHO HAD BAD YEARS will have reasons for them.

You'll always have a player around who will get up and sing if there is an orchestra in the hotel dining room.

More than one manager will say of a player, "I'll wait until he tells me he's in shape."

The various chamber of commerces will give boring dinners. The ballplayers hate 'em.

No matter where a club trains, the manager will praise the town as "the greatest training site in the country.

The players will grouse about the weather.

There will be stories galore about deals that never come off.

Several actors will show up in uniform to have their pictures taken with the star players.

Veteran reporters who cover the training camps claim that no matter how homely a girl is, she will get a play from the athletes if she owns a car. Cheaper than taxis, you know.

And (attention Walter O'Malley) if a team plays in Miami, it's a foregone conclusion that at least one player will be fined for violating the curfew.

The Dodgers, of course, open their exhibition season—in Miami!

Stock Race to Turner

DAYTONA BEACH (U.P.)—Curtis Turner, Roanoke, Va., gunned his 1958 Ford stock car to an average speed of 98.563 miles per hour here Saturday to win the 160-mile National Convertible Championship race at the NASCAR safety and performance trials.

Lee Petty of Randleman, N.C., and Joe Weatherly of Norfolk, Va., gave the crowd plenty of thrills in their tight battle for second place a few hundred yards behind Turner. Petty, driving a 1957 Oldsmobile, finally won after both he and Weatherly went into a spin on a turn within 100 yards of the finish line.

Bell Captures So. Atlantic Golf

ORMOND BEACH (U.P.)—Judy Bell, 21-year-old college girl from Wichita, won the South Atlantic Women's Amateur golf tournament over Margo Burns of Greensboro, N.C., 1 up in 37 holes Saturday.

Miss Bell was 4 up after the morning 18 but lost control of her game in the afternoon.

Miss Burns, in her seventh year of campaigning for the South Atlantic title and playing in the final match for the first time, had the title within her grasp until she bogeyed both the 36th and 37th holes. In both cases she was short of the green with a second shot and couldn't chip up close enough for one putt.

EKABA TRAILS IN BIRTHDAY 'CAP

Longden Boots in Tall Chief

By HANK HOLLINGSWORTH
Executive Sports Editor

The $57,300 Washington's Birthday Handicap was chopped down fittingly enough Saturday at Santa Anita by the father of his turf world, ancient Johnny Longden, as "Old Moneybags" wheeled the 11-1 shot, Tall Chief II, to a thrilling half-length victory over Promised Land.

Longden's victory was his fourth in the seven-year history of the classic, as Grandpa John grabbed a real stranglehold on this particular race.

TALL CHIEF II, an Irish-bred former steeplechase horse that raced prominently in France a few years ago, had won only one race this season—the San Gabriel Handicap over the same grass course on New Year's Day.

The 6-year-old horse's time for the mile and one-half grass race Saturday was 2:30 1/5, a slow time in view of St. Vincent's track mark of 2:25 2/5. Tall Chief paid a sparkling $25.40.

Tall Chief was content to stay back in the 11-horse field until the pack wheeled around the backstretch. Then he waded through horses like a Sherman tank through beanstalks.

Tall Chief appeared a winner going-away through the stretch, until Promised Land made his belated bid. Jockey Manuel Ycaza's mount was driving hard at the finish and getting to Tall Chief, but time ran out.

Solid Son was third, one and one-quarter lengths behind Promised Land and nearly four lengths ahead of Hi Pardner, a 31-1 shot. The rest of the field finished in this order: Infantry, Born Rich, Eddie Schmidt, Ekaba, Special Look, Rumbo and Whatitoldyou.

* * * *

LONGDEN VISITED the press box after the race and said the victory was "one of the happiest of my life." He explained:

"Ever since I've returned to the saddle after my broken leg, I've had plenty of trouble finding that winner's circle. This is only my third win and lotsa people been saying I'm all done. I guess I kinda showed 'em today, eh?"

Regarding Saturday's victory, Longden said:

"Things came up real good for me. There was a pretty good jam on the far turn and I had nowhere to go between horses, so I took my best shot and went around. I had to get into him pretty good at the end, because he started to pull up when he got to the front, and he was getting tired fast. I'm glad we didn't have to go no further, though."

Longden's other victories in this race were last year with St. Vincent, in '55 with St. Vincent again, and in '54 with Thirteen of Diamonds.

* * * *

FAVORED EKABA set the early pace, along with Infantry and Born Rich. Promised Land was running ninth and Tall Chief 10th. After the first mile, Solid Son moved into the lead, with Ekaba and Infantry on his heels.

Entering the stretch, Tall Chief assumed command, with Solid Son hanging on gamely in second spot and Promised Land a charging third. Solid Son dropped back and the one-two horses battled right down to the wire.

Ekaba's poor race was a mystery even to his rider, Willie Shoemaker.

"The way Ekaba was running today, I knew we weren't going to get any of it when we made the first turn in the infield. He just wasn't running his race," sighed Willie.

* * * *

Ycaza had this to say: "I had a good position all the way, and at the three-eighths pole, I went to go to the inside and the hole closed on me and I had to take Promised Land off stride. If it hadn't been for that, I think I'd won it all."

Commented Ray York on Solid Son: "This horse has had three hard races in a row right now, and I'd say that after the things broke for me—that's what beat him. I got through on the inside on Ekaba turning into the backstretch and from there on I had things my own way—we just got outrun."

Said George Taniguchi on Hi Pardner: "I took the same path that Tall Chief did, but he got there first. I think my 31-1 shot ran a big race."

THE CO-FEATURED $10,000 Thomas Thoroughbred Farm stake at a mile and one-sixteenth was captured by Rex Ellsworth's five-year-old star, Like Magic, in a stirring stretch duel with Caronat. Spotting Caronat an 11-pound weight advantage—122 to 111 — Willie Shoemaker whipped Like Magic frantically down the long stretch to catch the front-running Caronat right at the wire.

Like Magic paid $4.80, going off as an equal 3-2 favorite with Caronat.

Many longshot bettors placed a sentimental $2 wager on Last Row in this race, for 22 years ago to the day—Washington's Birthday—Last Row's daddy captured the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. Top Row came from nowhere in 1936 to nose out Time Supply and Rosemont in the Big 'Cap. The favored Discovery was seventh. Last Row was dead last Saturday.

Two jockey rulings were issued by the Board of Stewards Saturday. Both affected Jockey Henry Moreno. Hank was fined $50 for reporting late in the jockey's room Saturday, then was socked another $50 for hitting his horse, Dine Out, over the head with his whip during Friday's eighth race.

Johnny Longden urges Tall Chief II (4) across finish line first Saturday to beat out Promised Land (3) and Solid Son (rear, rail) in $50,000 Washington Brithday Handicap on the turf course at Santa Anita. POCATELLO, Idaho (U.P.)—Idaho State College's NCAA tournament bound Bengals used only five men Saturday night in scoring a 71-68 overtime victory over Seattle University.

The victory came despite another brilliant scoring, rebounding and ball handling performance by Chieftain Center Elgin Baylor who poured in 32 points.

The two stars will meet speedy opposition from two track record holders, Let's Match and Blue Rajah. The co-featured La Sierra Purse, a mile and 70 yards test, has drawn 11 starters.

Strong Bar won his second straight race Saturday at Caliente by galloping to a four-length victory in the featured Washington Birthday purse.

Mike's X, the favorite, finished second while Walt Hackett was third. Strong Bar was ridden by jockey Arthur Anderson of Long Beach and paid $7.40.

Oligarchy Nods 'Liege in Widener

MIAMI (U.P.) — Lightweight Oligarchy made the most of a 17-pound weight advantage Saturday to beat Kentucky Derby champion Iron Liege in the $130,000 Widener Handicap before a season-record crowd of 31,507.

Oligarchy, a strapping chestnut colt ably handled by Sammy Boulmetis, beat Iron Liege by a head. Willie Hartack got every ounce of power out of Iron Liege, a four-year-old colt which seemed to come again in a long stretch duel but fell short under high weight of 125 pounds.

Hoop Band, ridden by Hedley Woodhouse, beat Iron Liege's running mate from the Calumet Farms, Pintor Lea, by a neck for third money.

Iron Liege was the 4-5 favorite of the big crowd which lost a total of $99,487 bet on him to win.

Oligarchy, the third choice, paid $20.90, $6.70 and $4.50 for a two-dollar bet across the board. Iron Liege returned $2.70 and $2.30, while Hoop Band, 23-1 win choice, paid $6.60 to show.

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane picked up $92,800 for her Brookmeade Stable for Oligarchy's victory. The four-year-old son of Alibhai ran the mile and one-quarter in the sparkling time of 2:01 2/5, only 2/5 of a second off the track record.

Kansas State Five Routs Missouri 82-61

COLUMBIA (U.P.)— Kansas State's overpowering Wildcats emphasized their No. 1 national ranking Saturday by defeating the Missouri Tigers 82-61 in a Big Eight Conference basketball game that all but assured them of a spot in the NCAA tournament.

It was Kansas State's eighth conference victory against no losses and, coupled with defending champion Kansas' 43-41 defeat by Nebraska at Lincoln Saturday night, put the Wildcats two and one-half games ahead of Kansas in the Big Eight race.

Bob Kelley Says---

Did you notice the Telemeter Co. withdrew its request for a Pay-TV franchise, which had been granted by the Los Angeles City Council? Anti-Pay signatures had placed a referendum on the June 3 ballot.

Obviously, the Telemeter people figured they had no choice in the world when the voters strolled into the booths to be asked: "Do you favor the City Council ordinance granting franchises for pay television?" (Or words to that effect.)

It's almost a cinch the other Pay-TV outfit, Skiatron, will likewise withdraw from the ballot. Thus, it would appear free television is here to stay for the time being, and possibly some years to come.

Though I'm pulling for the Bruins, looks like Cal just about has the Coast Conference basketball race locked up. All they have to do is beat UCLA in the Bear gym, next weekend, and that's all she wrote.

Incidentally, the Trojans looked like an extremely ragged team Friday night. Apparently they fell apart when Jim Pugh was lost because of injuries...

DISC JOCKEY Dick Whittinghill, whose horse Mizzy Swaps has finished 14th, 10th and 13th in her three races, is planning to take her to Turf Paradise in Phoenix, Arizona. Since the Arizona group put over a betting coup at Santa Anita Friday, Whit figures he'll put over a "Sunset and Vine" coup of his own in their backyard...

Manuel Ycaza, the "Panamaniac," returns to Florida this week to ride Jewel's Reward. After his winning ride on the Kentucky Derby candidate at Hialeah last week, Ycaza said: "It real thrill to ride heem"...

I'll never second-guess Southern California ring officials again after watching the decision from New York Friday night. Alex Miteff took about nine out of 10 rounds from Nino Valdes, who did nothing but stagger around the ring and hold.

Yet one judge gave it to Valdes. And the decisive split decision ballot was cast only 5-4-1 in favor of Miteff...

OTHER NIGHT on the air, I remarked I'd love to tell the story of the referee (and sole judge) who laid 4-1, or $300 to $75, on the fight he was working. Though I know this to be a true story, further details are impossible to give because of certain laws in our country.

After the program, Aragon called up excitedly to ask: "Was it one of my fights?" That Arthur, I think the boxing hearings and the Goldstein trial have given him a guilt complex...

If the Dodgers are in contention closing day of the season, Saturday, Sept. 27, you might see some sort of a two-day record for crowds in the Coliseum. Because the Rams open the NFL season the next day against the Cleveland Browns. Could draw 85 or 90 thousand...

There may be a logical answer why response for San Francisco Giant season tickets has not been as frantic as for Dodger ducats. Up in the Bay Area, basketball is a big sport, and fans won't turn their minds fully to baseball till they find out how Cal and USF finish up.

Here in Southern California, basketball isn't that big a thing, hence the turn to baseball much earlier in the year...

PREDICTION: Keep an eye on Dodger pitcher Stan Williams as possible rookie of the year. The Cubs' John Holland told me last fall he couldn't understand how Williams managed to stay out of the majors so long.

EX-DIAMOND STAR

Barna in Knife Fight

CHARLESTON (AP) — Herbert (Babe) Barna, former major league baseball player, was stabbed Saturday in an altercation in a club he operates here.

Barna suffered a 14-inch penknife wound across the abdomen and cuts on both legs. A hospital said his condition was satisfactory.

Barna spent 16 seasons in professional baseball as an outfielder. He played with the New York Giants and Boston Red Sox. His last season in baseball was 1952 with the Charleston Senators.

VETERAN OPINION OF BLAIR FIELD: GOOD STADIUM

Out to get a preview of the new Blair Field, 11-year-old Hugh Prichard (left) and Chuck Lineberger, 13, scouted the 3,500-seat stadium with the seasoned eye of sandlot veterans and found it to their liking after a midfield conference. First game will be played at the Recreation Park stadium March 7.

Relay Carnival Saturday

Collegiate track action gets under way this week with three of the nation's powerhouses featured.

Saturday morning at 10, the fourth annual SC-UCLA Relay Carnival at Westwood is scheduled, and power-packed Occidental hosts the Camp Pendleton Marines in the afternoon.

Oxy's Chuck Coker will unveil such stars as Rudy Alston, Ty Hadley, Todd White, Pat Logan and Bob Rye.

SC coach Jess Mortenson has a wealth of material, good enough, claim observers, to win the national title.

The Trojans have proven veterans in seven-foot high jumper Charlie Dumas, Olympic team member Max Truex in the distance events, Tom Anderson, school record-holder, in the half-mile, and hurdler Bob Lawson.

The Trojans figure to come up with a record-breaking two-mile quartet with Anderson, Murray Cockburn, Bob Shankland and Lanny Quigley.

But the Bruins of Ducky Drake won't be lacking for potent point-getters either. Slated to see action for the hosts are tried and true Stan King, John Seaman, Bob Holland, Ken Riding, George Roubanis, Ken Thompson and Marv Luster. The Bruins will pick up Rafer Johnson and Walt Torrance when the basketball season ends.

Fleitz Gains Tennis Finals

PALM SPRINGS (UP)—Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleitz of Long Beach Saturday defeated Miss Jackie Tegland, Los Angeles, 7-5, 6-2, in semi-finals of womens singles competition in the 7th annual Palm Desert Invitational Tennis Tournament at the Shadow Mountain Club.

Mrs. Fleitz, who is staging a comeback after retiring for a year to raise her family, won her quarter-final round match by default from Mrs. Warren Wilson.

Sally Moore, Bakersfield, defeated Dodo Cheney, Santa Monica, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, in another women singles match. The winners meet in the finals today.

Whitney Reed, San Francisco, who Friday beat John Fleitz of Long Beach, defeated Mike Franks, Los Angeles, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, and Alex Olmedo, Los Angeles, downed Mike Green, Miami, 6-1, 6-2, in mens semi-finals.

In mens doubles, Green-Olmedo defeated Noel Brown and Robert Delgado, both of Los Angeles, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Blair Field Premiere March 7

By JERRY HALL

From home plate to the furthest stretch of the outfield at the new Blair Field is 166 chubby strides by personal count and along the route is one of the finest baseball diamonds in the country.

There's still some manicuring to be done, but the sleek steel and concrete stadium is about ready for heavy duty on the local baseball front.

First game on the slate is March 7. Those in charge of the grass are a bit skeptical, but the rest of the workmen are right on schedule. A few more panes of glass and some sweeping up will put things in order. And the people in the grass department assure they will not stand in the way of the inaugural.

* * * *

BLAIR FIELD, on the site of the splintery old Recreation Park grandstand across the street from Wilson High School, is in a manner of speaking a carbon copy of the Milwaukee County Stadium where half of the World Series was played last autumn.

"It's major league all the way, as far as the playing area is concerned," said Tom Marchese of the Long Beach City Engineering Dept. as he pored over the blueprints. "The Braves' stadium was the last major league field built (1953), so we tore a page of specifications out of a book and built our park around them," says Marchese.

"I think Blair Field has one of the finest playing surfaces in the nation," Marchese says. "The preparation (grading, etc.) for the playing area was first rate in every detail." The streamlined grandstand seats 3,500.

The field is large by any standard. While the Milwaukee park has a 315-foot foul line, it's 347 feet down both baselines at Blair Field and 400 straightaway to center. A 10-foot concrete block wall surrounds the park. A 10-foot gravel strip which soon will be widened to 20 feet warns outfielders when chasing fly balls.

* * * *

THERE WAS a provision in the design for lighting, but no funds in the cash drawer. And according to Marchese, there is no prospect of lighting.

The field will be a busy one, with Long Beach State College, the semi-pro Rockets and several Junior American Legion teams using it as home base in addition to Poly.

Blair Field drew high praise from Dodger officials recently and—with its eucalyptus backdrop—has been poetically described as a gorgeous baseball plant.

And, after all, it has the only major league outfield in Southern California.

Midwinter Sail Concludes Today

By BOB RUSKAUFF

The rainmaster constantly threatened but failed to unload a downpour as an all-time record of 398 yachts, in 38 sail and two power boat fleets, launched the 29th National Midwinter Regatta Saturday.

Despite light airs that dwindled away and had boats of the larger classes off Los Angeles YC finishing by searchlight, there was plenty of close action.

Power yachts, in their lone regatta performance, a 25-mile predicted log race from Long Beach to Newport, had Lee Sumpter's Alicia winning the Bobrick Memorial award in Class A and Ray Anderson's Kay Bob, the Harry Brittain novice trophy.

In large sailing action, George Sturgis' yawl, Jada, nipped Dick Steel with Odyssey in Ocean Race Rule I fleet. A top battle amongst one-design classes featured the win, over 14 Star boats, by world champ Lowell North, with North Star II of San Diego.

Chairman Bob Hoffman said the 90 dinghies in eight classes which sailed two of their five races (three today will wind it up) on Alamitos Bay, was an all-time entry record for the sporty small boat course.

The small boats, dinghies and several of the one-design fleets will conclude the winter sail classic today. Handicap ocean-goers will carry their three-race series through Monday.

CINCY WINS, ROBERTSON SCORES 36

CINCINNATI (UP) — The University of Cincinnati cagers downed the University of Tulsa, 86-71, here Saturday night for its 20th basketball victory of the season behind the 36-point scoring of star Oscar Robertson.

Robertson maintained his 33.6 a game scoring average and thus broke the college's individual season scoring record of 712 points set by Jack Twyman in the 1954-55 season. The lanky forward now has 742 points with four more games to play.

The win was the Bearcats' 12th straight and 11th in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Jim Hanna Happy to Be 'Home'

are well coached. That Woolpert does miracles."

The best players?

"Johnny Green of Michigan State. He jumps like a kangeroo. Frank Howard of Ohio State. He's weak defensively but great on offense. Doug Smart of Washington is good but he has the advantage of having his team work around him."

One of the major problems facing a prep athlete is his prospective choice between attending a junior college or playing freshman ball in a four-year college. Hanna staunchly favors the latter.

"It's much easier to make the varsity after playing with the frosh. Although you don't play as many games as you would in jaycee ball, you are constantly scrimmaging the varsity and learning its style. You also get a good schooling in fundamentals, things like the 1-on-1 (man to man) defense and play patterns. You're coached all the time."

* * * *

WHAT WOULD BE your advice to the aspiring young basketball player?

"I don't know if I'm the one who should give advice, but I would say to practice, practice and practice.

While Hanna's first love is basketball, he also intends to play baseball and football at SC. He'll join the baseball team as a pitcher-outfielder after basketball season and become a teammate of his close friend Ron Fairly, the Trojans' star centerfielder from Long Beach.

As for football, there appears to be a tug-of-war for his services in the making between basketball coach Forrest Twogood and football mentor Don Clark.

* * * *

"CLARK WANTS me out, but Twogie has been against it. I'd play either end or slot-back."

Hanna showed his seriousness towards the grid sport by commenting that he would like to give pro football a whirl if he succeeded in college and was drafted by an NFL club. Either that or pro basketball.

Jim now resides in Anaheim with his bride of 11 months, the former Andrea Todd, whom he dated at Poly.

"I'd like to return to Long Beach to teach when I'm finished playing," he gazed into the distant future. "You know, I'd sure love to coach at Poly."

Patty, Savitt in Indoor Net Finals

NEW YORK (UP)—Dick Savitt of South Orange, N. J., and Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Paris, both former Wimbledon champions, reached the final of the National Indoor Tennis championships Saturday with straight set triumphs.

Savitt, third-ranking U. S. player, upset defending champion Kurt Nielsen of Denmark, 7-5, 6-4, 6-4. Patty had an easy time beating Julius Heldman, a weekend player from New York, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. Heldman had upset Barry MacKay, young Davis Cup star from Dayton, Ohio, in the quarter-finals Friday night.

* * * *

THIS WAS ONE triumph Savitt really wanted. In last year's semi-finals he was whipped by Nielsen, who went on to down Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., for the title.

Savitt will take his second indoor crown if he beats Patty today. He won on the boards in 1952.

For Patty, this will be his first time in the indoor final. He is unranked in this country because he did not compete in enough tournaments here last year.

This final might be termed the "old-timer special." Both Savitt and Patty have been topflight tennis contenders for many years. Savitt is 29, Patty 34. Their duel today is a tossup although Savitt has an edge on his superior power off the ground. Patty won over Heldman because of his superior net game. Heldman produced some fancy southpaw shots from the backcourt, but he is weak at the net. That sealed his fate.

Savitt, who divides his time between the oil business and tennis, had too much speed off the ground for Nielsen. Savitt's backhand cross-court shots were particularly effective. They enabled him to break service in the 11th game of the first set and again in the ninth game of the second set. The burly Savitt cracked Nielsen in the third game of the third set to insure his victory.

GARDNAR MULLOY, 44-year-old Davis Cupper from Miami, moved into the final of seniors singles. Earlier in the day, Mulloy and his partner, Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, were eliminated in the semi-finals of seniors doubles.

Jefferson Mendel and Edward Tarangioli, both of Yonkers, N. Y., and doubles partners for 25 years, defeated Mulloy and Meyner, 7-5, 6-3.

In seniors singles, Mulloy will meet Dr. Reginald Weir of New York, the defending champion, in the final. Mulloy, playing in the seniors for the first time, polished off Harry Hoffman of Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-2. Dr. Weir beat Bill Lurie of Brooklyn, 6-2, 6-3.

Rams to Tackle Browns in Home League Opener

The Cleveland Browns, 1957 Eastern Conference champions and perennial powerhouse of their division, will be the Rams' 1958 opening game foe, General Manager Pete Rozelle announced Saturday.

In addition to the Browns, favorites to repeat as champions in the East, Los Angeles also will play home games against their traditional Western Conference opponents—Detroit, the Chicago Bears, San Francisco, Baltimore and Green Bay. The home schedule will open Sept. 28, and will close Dec. 14.

Spearheading Coach Paul Brown's aggregation will be the bruising fullback Jim Brown, who last year was named both rookie-of-the-year and player-of-the-year in the NFL.

The Rams' complete league home schedule follows:

September 28, Cleveland.
October 26, Detroit.
November 2, Chicago Bears.
November 9, San Francisco.
December 7, Baltimore.
December 14, Green Bay.

Gasporra Registers TKO Over Rodriguez

Eddie Gasporra, 129, Huntington Park; Calif., remained undefeated Saturday night by scoring a technical knockout over Silvino (Baby) Rodriguez 129, Juarez, Mexico, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round main event in Hollywood Legion Stadium.

Referee Dynamite Jackson awarded the victory to Gasporra after Rodriguez suffered a bad cut over the right eye and was unable to continue after 2:57, of the fifth. Up to that point, the Mexican scrapper had held a slight edge.

Long Beach Junior Tennis Tournament Set for April

The second annual Long Beach Junior Tennis Tournament will be held April 12-13 and 19-20 on the Lakewood Tennis Club and Long Beach City College courts, tournament director John Thanes announced Saturday.

Sponsored jointly by The Independent, Press - Telegram, Long Beach Tennis Patron's Assn. and Long Beach Recreation Dept., the event is expected to attract all of Southern California's outstanding young players.

"Last year's event was a great success," said Thanes, "but we hope to make this one even better. We have our committees organized and are distributing entry blanks."

All juniors are eligible to compete. Entry blanks may be obtained at area senior and junior high schools, tennis shops, and the Southern California Tennis Assn. Deadline for entering is April 3.

Divisions of play will be age 18 and under, 15 and under, 13 and under, and 11 and under for boys and girls, singles and doubles with the exception of no doubles in 11 and under. A player can compete in three events.

Committee chairmen are Walter Sheek and Clyde Walker, assistant tournament directors; Don Menke and Col. Harry Smith, referees; Dr. Richard Matlock, housing, and Bonnie Harter, refreshments. Ted Mathews is president of the Patron's Assn. and Larry Collins Jr. honorary tournament chairman.

"We'd like to encourage any youngster who plays to enter," said Thanes. "This tournament should be a real spur to junior tennis in the area."

RAIN POSTPONES HOUSTON TOURNEY

HOUSTON (UP) — Pounding rain forced postponment of Saturday's third round of play in the $30,000 Houston Invitational Golf Tournament.

Pete Mazur, 42-year-old professional from Buffalo, N. Y., led the field with a 36-hole total of 139. Third-round pairings will be played today, weather permitting. The final round will be moved back to Monday.

STATE PLAYS LAST 2 GAMES

Long Beach State College closes out its 1957-58 basketball season this weekend with two games in San Diego. Coach Bill Patterson's 49ers battle CCAA foe San Diego State Friday night and then face the San Diego Marine Corps Recruit Depot Saturday night.

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

Fishing for bass, crappie, bluegill and catfish will be booming within three weeks as the first of the fresh-water resorts open. It promises to be an interesting season.

Starting the list will be Railroad Canyon Reservoir, opening next Saturday. Following that, Irvine Lake (Orange County) and Lower Otay (San Diego County) will begin the season on March 19.

We already have reviewed the possibilities at Irvine, which are made doubly attractive with heavy trout plantings twice weekly.

Lower Otay, even though closed since 1955, is not what one might consider an "unknown quantity." It always has been one of the finest catfish lakes in the West, and its crappie and bass provide plenty of excitement.

Fifty rental rowboats will be available at Lower Otay and fishing days will be Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Private boats are permitted with motors limited to 7½ horsepower. There are picnic and camping areas. Shoreline anglers will have access to 215 acres of fishable water. Floats will be anchored in suitable locations for the bluegill anglers.

* * * *

OTHER SAN DIEGO County reservoirs opening this year will be El Capitan, April 2; Sutherland, April 16, and Barrett, April 30. Fishing days will be the same as those at Lower Otay.

El Capitan should produce some wonderful crappie and bluegill fishing. Plans are being made to provide a healthy plant of bass later in the spring. Picnic area is limited.

Sutherland, first opened to the public in 1955, should be a top bass producer at the opening. Two picnic areas are situated in the vicinity of the lake.

Barrett, off the state highway between Dulzura and Potrero, should be good for bass and crappie. A small picnic area is available.

San Vicente's opening date has not been set. Morena and Upper Otay Lakes will be closed this year and the San Diego Water Co. expects to keep Hodges Lake closed unless a heavy runoff raises the lake level sufficiently for good fishing. Hodges has been closed for several years.

Henshaw Lake, now open the year 'round, is not controlled by San Diego and will be operated as usual by private concession. Latest reports indicate that the level there is raising rapidly.

This column will carry further information on all these lakes as it becomes available next month.

OCEAN FISHING came almost to a standstill last week as inclement weather took over the helms of the fishing boats and kept them inside the harbor. However, Pierpoint sent its fleet out Friday, and despite dirty water, results were amazing.

The half-day boat loaded with barracuda at the Horseshoe Kelp and one all-day boat, running down the coast toward Dana Point, had more than 300 barries, plus plenty of bonito and a small number of yellowtail and white sea bass.

Barracuda are running in Santa Monica Bay and northward around Paradise Cove, all of which indicates a terrific early season for the scooters.

A Schenley Sportsmen's Club record was broken twice recently as the winter derby contestants continued bottom fishing. Paul Firth, Los Angeles, caught a 42-3 halibut to shade Hoyt Holdridge's 41-1, caught in 1957. Then Pearl Lee, of Inglewood, took a 48-8 halibut while fishing aboard the Islander at the Horseshoe Kelp. It was the largest flattie recorded for several years.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — The Wilmington Sportsman's Club will install the following officers at its annual meeting Saturday night: Leonard Ward, president; Paul Liakos, vice president; Dick Roscher, recording secretary; Ray Mayberry, financial secretary; Jack Simpson, treasurer; Kenny Hansen, sergeant-at-arms; Jack Upton, John Ferrara and Orv Wright, directors. Meeting will be held at the American Legion Hall, 1260 Broad Ave., Wilmington.

Going to Crowley Lake for the trout opening May 3? If so, the Los Angeles Recreation and Park Dept. says that the 63 rental motor and rowboats will go up for reservation at 8 a. m. March 17 in Room 755, Los Angeles City Hall. Written applications for 80 season dock berths and 20 buoy moorings will be accepted on the same day. If you have a private boat and wish it inspected for certification at Crowley, you may take it to Cabrillo Beach Saturday, March 29.

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has extended the date for shooting coots in 17 California counties to April 30 because of crop depredations. Counties affected are Butte, Colusa, Fresno, Glenn, Kern, King, Madera, Merced, Sacramento, San Joaquin, Solano, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tulare, Yolo, Yuba and a part of Placer.

to lead the league five times in triples.

His home run total (381) is sixth on the all-time major league list although he has never won the home run championship. He holds the major league record for home runs in a doubleheader—five. He has led his club in homers the last 10 years.

He shares with Wagner and Babe Ruth the fact he has paced his league in extra-base hits seven times, and his total of 1,156 long hits is tops for the National League, bettered only by Ruth's 1356 and Gehrig's 1190.

He holds the NL record of 895 consecutive games and holds the record of leading his league in games played five times.

He leads all active players in games, at bat, runs, hits, total bases, doubles, triples and extra-base hits.

10,000 FANS EXPECTED

Gun for 150 MPH at LADS

Whether Long Beach-area fans prefer watching adult drivers gun for records, or pre-teen youngsters wheel quarter-midgets, may be demonstrated this afternoon in a "two-ring" circus of speed at the Lions Associated Drag Strip.

Finals of the two-day, unique Two-Way Record runs of over 300 drag contenders will be held, along with the first sanctioned 1958 youngsters' racing on the new, 1/20th mile oval. Both events will start at noon.

The quarter-midget course is in the midst of the spectator area, but fans still can watch only one thing at a time.

Before dusk, saome 10,000 fans are expected to see the action at the 223rd St. strip just E. of Alameda Ave.

Among youngsters in the meet is Linda Valona, 10, Norwalk miss who won the national quarter-midget title in 1956; the Inglewood twins, Gary and Gordon Jenssen, 14, and the youngest entry, Terry Windust, Buena Park, 6.

Highlighting the drag action will be efforts of 20 drivers to top the "mythical" 150-m.p.h., over the quarter mile route, from a standing start.

Buddy Sampson of Phoenix, national champion, and Mickey Brown, San Fernando, each have topped 147 m.p.h. and are rated real threats. Two others highly-regarded are Jack Chrisman of Compton, with Harry Duncan's new Chrysler job (rated 500 h.p.) and the persistent Escondido top-notcher, Cyr Hopper. The first to do it gets a $400 savings bond.

Jack Schnepf of Owens Creek, Ariz., tooled his stock roadster to a new world acceleration record of 124.82 m.p.h. during qualifying runs of the Two-Way Drag runs and quarter midget race meet at Lions Associated Drag Strip, W. Long Beach.

Cyr Hopper, Escondido, tooled his Chrysler-powered job to best gas-dragster qualifying times, with runs of 140.84 m.p.h. (north-south) and 144.23 (south-north) for a 142.535 m.p.h. average.

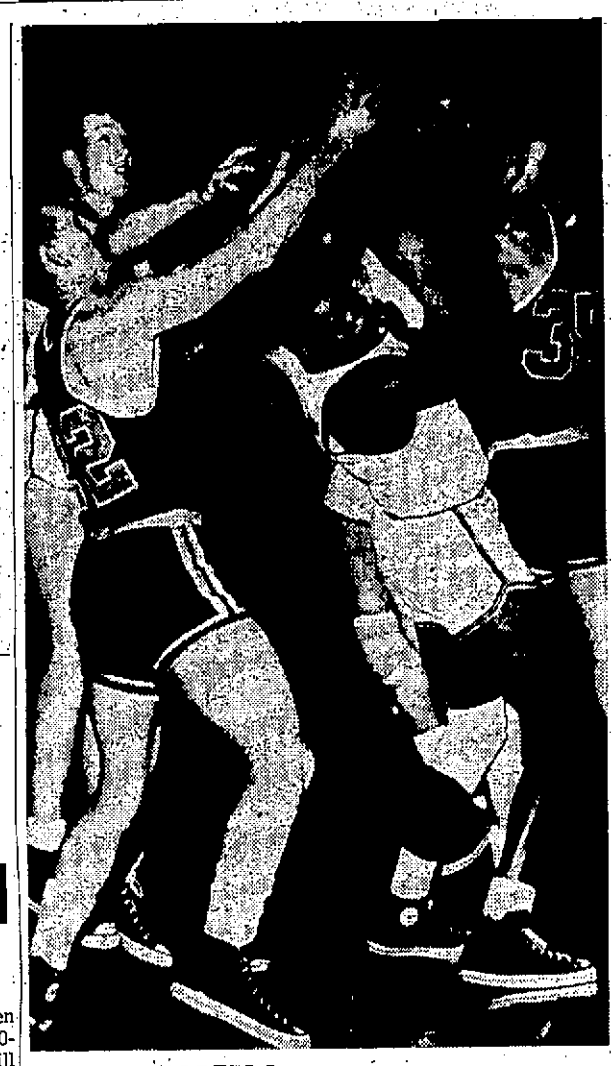

BOB BENEDETTI

Lockyer's Adds Star

Bob Benedetti, all-city Los Angeles cager from San Pedro High, will play for Lockyer's of Long Beach against Pasadena Mirror-Glaze in a Southern Pacific AAU game at Long Beach City College gym Tuesday night.

Benedetti, 6-4 center, is rated one of the best prospects to come from the Harbor area in many years.

Lockyer's will be in action again Friday, meeting Chapman College at the Lakewood High gym. Chapman, with a 17-4 record, has accepted a bid to play in the NCAA small college playoffs.

N.Y. COACH

Howell Inks Giant Pact

NEW YORK (UP)—Jim Lee Howell signed a new three-year contract as head coach of the National Football League's New York Giants Saturday and predicted "things will be mighty interesting" in the Eastern Division in 1958.

Howell, a former Arkansas state senator and Marine lieutenant, has coached the Giants the past four seasons. He replaced Steve Owen in 1954.

Howell is the only coach who has beaten Paul Brown's Cleveland Browns out of the Eastern Division title since 1950.

Bruins, Trojans Toppled

the intermission, 39-30, when Rafer Johnson hit with a 10-foot jump and Roland Underhill tossed in two free throws in the final 26 seconds.

The Bruins extended this last-second half with a spirited attack that found them slashing the Beaver lead to one point at 42-41 on two goals each by Walt Torrence and Jim Halsten, followed by Ben Rogers' jump five minutes into the concluding session.

But Gambee then dropped in a spectacular 20-foot "clutch" shot seconds later and Harmon followed with a driving lay-in . . . and the Beavers were well on their way to a comfortable lead once again. Six minutes after they had seen their lead shrink to one point, they had built their advantage back up to 12 points. They finally gained their 16-point winning margin in the last minute and a half.

Despite the fact the Beavers lost two of their regulars—Ken Nanson and Anderson—on fouls with over six minutes left to play, they had such complete control of the game by that time that they were never in serious trouble.

While Gambee was the key man in the win, he must share much of the credit for the Beavers' superb game with Harmon, who returned to action this weekend after it appeared he was lost for the season three weeks ago when he suffered a shoulder dislocation against Washington. Harmon, the Beaver "quarterback," turned in a tremendous floor game and also contributed 13 points to the cause.

* * * *

COACH JOHN WOODEN, who was disappointed in failing to notch his 200th victory and 100th conference win in 10 years at UCLA, had high praise for the Beavers, declaring "they played considerably better than in our first game when they beat us, 68-61, at Corvallis."

The Beavers' veteran mentor, Slats Gill, said "it was one of the most gratifying wins in my 30 years at Oregon State!"

In the first game, the Trojans blew an eight-point lead in the final eight minutes of play in bowing to a determined and aggressive Stanford crew for their fourth consecutive loss.

The defeat dropped them below the .500 mark in PCC action for the first time this season. SC is now 6-7 while Stanford's win lifted the Indians to a 4-9 record.

* * * *

AS SC COACH Forest Twogood frantically attempted to find a combination to cope with the quick, speedy Indians, the Trojans blew hot and cold during the wild and woolly battle.

Youths Smash Two U.S. Swim Records

ALAMEDA (UP) — Fifteen-year-old Sylvia Ruuska of Berkeley, broke the American swim record for the 200-yard individual medley Saturday after learning that she had smashed the world's 1500 meter mark Friday.

Fourteen-year-old Chris Von Saltza of Santa Clara, also set a U. S. record in Saturday's Alameda Naval Air Station Invitational meet when she churned the 200-yard backstroke in 2:28.6. The former standard was 2:32.4.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (UP)—A Boston and a Pawtucket man were sought Saturday night as key links in a seven-city racing wire service operation.

All My Troubles Behind---Newk

son for concern in this department. Even with all his miseries last year, Newk walked only 33 batters in 199 innings. In '56, when he had his bad year, he issued but 46 free tickets in 219 innings.

As a hitter, however, Newk is anxious for a crack at that leftfield screen. He banged seven homers in 1955 to set a NL record for pitchers in one season.

* * * *

"BEING A GOOD hitter helps the pitcher," Newk, who is frequently used as a pinch batter, says. "Even if you're pitching well, you'd be surprised how many times a manager will take you out if he knows you can't hit. When you hit it helps you stay in the game longer."

Regarding the Dodgers' catching problem, Newcombe feels that Rube Walker will be able to do the job in Roy Campanella's absence.

"Walker has as much experience as Campy. He's a 10-year veteran in this league. The only thing is his (Walker's) hitting. But you can't hit when you don't play. Besides, Walker will have a different outlook this year. He's been told the job is his until someone can take it away from him. That'll mean a lot."

* * * *

WALKER GOT into only 60 games last year, many times as a pinch-hitter. His average was a puny .181. But defensively, there aren't many better receivers in baseball.

Newcombe, who will be 32 in June, is married and the father of two boys and a girl, Gregory, 3; Evit, 2, and Robin, five months.

Evit was named after Dodger vice president Buzzie Bavasi's wife. And her middle name is Yolanda, which is also the first name of Bavasi's sister.

U. S. CHAMPION

Joe Alston of South Pasadena, national badminton singles champion, warms up for Thomas Cup matches against Canada, Friday and Saturday nights at Long Beach City College.

CANADIAN THOMAS CUP TEAM NAMED

Canada's team for the Thomas Cup (Badminton) Tie with the United States, to be played at Long Beach City College gym Friday and Saturday nights, was announced Saturday.

Leading the invaders is colorful David McTaggart, whose court antics and spectacular play wowed fans during the 1955 National Open tournament in Long Beach.

Other members of the Canadian team will be Bill Purcell, Don Smythe and Bev Wescott of Toronto, Jim Carnwath of Ontario and Bert Fergue of Vancouver.

Hulet P. Smith, president of the Pasadena Badminton Club, will serve as referee for the matches.

Par-ticulars

by JERRY WYNN

"Shooting your age" is quite a feat, but going two strokes lower must be a very rare accomplishment. Thus a big cheer today for Homer Martin, 81 years old, who shot a 79 at Lakewood Monday.

The round included bogies on the par-five 14th and 18th, would-be birdie holes for the young-bloods, and a superlative birdie on the tough par-three 17th.

Accompanying Martin on his memorable tour were Con Cady, Jim Hendricks and Myron McCormack.

Who says life begins at only 40?

LONG BEACH City College golf team prospects boomed Saturday with the announcement that Pinky Stevenson will be eligible to compete. Stevenson, the 1956 National Junior champion, attended Houston U. part of last semester and there was a question of his eligibility at LBCC.

Along with former Wilson High teammate Verne Burnett and 1957 Viking star Ron Ankrom, Pinky should give City College a powerful 1-2-3 combination. Burnett has been playing exceptionally well and captured the No. 1 spot on the team. Other members are Bill Wills, Harold Harris, Ed Hoeven and Ed Kearns.

The squad is being coached by Buck Andreasen, a country fair swinger himself, until Charlie Church returns from the basketball wars.

* * * *

MEANWHILE, prospects are far from bright at Long Beach State College, where athletic director and coach Jack Montgomery will only predict, tongue-in-cheek, that his team "will show up and fight."

Returning lettermen are Lowell Reynolds, Dick Hight, Marce Saucedo and Dale Welin. They will be joined by transfers Don Rowan from SC and Bob Sachse from LBCC. Ron Winterburn will report after basketball season.

Two mighty fine swingers attended school last semester, but one—Bob Terry—transferred to San Jose State—and the other—Keith Lopp—is still there but ineligible. Keith played at SC last year and must wait out a year.

Montgomery sighs when he watches Lopp practice with the team. "It's too bad. He'd be far and away our best player."

WHAT'S HAPPENED to Billy Casper and Gene Littler since Palm Springs when the popular pair of Southern California stars left their home state apparently in shape to conquer other worlds?

Casper was the best pro golfer during January while Littler showed unmistakable signs of snapping a long slump with his fine play and second place finish in the Thunderbird Invitational.

The news vacuum finally sprang a leak this week. Playing in an exhibition at the new Coronado Island course (far from the Texas tour) Monday, Casper shot a 66. Playing in the Houston Open, Littler was five strokes off the pace after 36 holes with rounds of 73-71—144.

Presumably they both missed several tournaments in between Palm Springs and Houston. It's hard to believe that they could have been plain out of the money so often.

STILL ON THE subject of Littler, it's also hard to believe that his name was not among the list of 104 (I received in the mail Saturday) who have been invited to compete in the classic Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga., April 3-6.

The Masters qualifies its entries by 12 different categories and it appears that Gene didn't make the grade in any.

Here's the three-time straight champion of the Tournament of Champions, a mighty rugged test of golf, and he gets shunted by the Masters. Oh well, he'll always be welcome in Las Vegas!

ALTHOUGH THE vote was 5-4, the Long Beach City Council was actually unanimous against injuring the Recreation Park nine-hole course when it took action on the Colorado Lagoon proposal at a public hearing Tuesday.

The four councilmen who voted against the measure did so in hope that some of the points in the over-all plan to improve the area could be salvaged without scrapping it in its entirety.

None were in favor of the intrusion into the golf course.

HOLE-IN-ONE honors to Connie Freeze and Raleigh W. Schreck.

Mrs. Freeze, distinguished member of the City Golf Commission and Recreation Park Women's Club, smacked a 4-wood into the 130-yard fifth at Recreation during a club tourney.

Schreck of 132 Orange Ave. also conquered the uphill fifth to lead to a great four-under par 32 front nine and an even par round of 72. In addition to the ace, Schreck birdied the eighth and eagled the ninth. Playing partners were Roy Vellacott, Lawrence Allen and Norm Purcer.

(P.S. Want to make an ace? Join Vellacott's next foursome. This was the second straight week that Roy had played with an acer!)

H. H. Clark fired an 83-17—66 to capture low net honors Saturday in the Virginia Country Club's sweepstakes play.

Low Net—H. H. Clark, 83-17—66; Glen Scott, 77-10—67; R. A. Reid, 79-10—69; John Connolly, 77-8—69; Dan Darnell, 85-16—69; R. G. Whisenant, 86-16—70; Larry Collins Jr., 100-29—71; G. Meade, 87-16—71; Jerry Cassaday, 77-6—71.

It Happened Last Night
By Earl Wilson

BUSY, BUSY

NEW YORK—"This is like 1946 . . . backstage at the Roxy," Peter Lind Hayes, the quintuple-threat man, said.

"I don't remember that," I confessed.

"You don't!" Peter was sitting at a table with his overcoat on at the House of Chan. "We were playing the Roxy and doubling into the Copa when you came to interview us. Desi Arnaz was the bandleader at the Copa then . . ."

We both laughed hollowly, and wagged our heads, at how rich Desi's got in 12 years and how rich we haven't got.

But Peter Hayes and Mary Healy have done pretty good at that—they're in TV, radio, night clubs and records—and now I was talking to them about their fifth threat . . . crashing the Broadway stage in Norman Krasna's comedy, "Who Was That Lady I Saw You With?"

ABBE

Except that Mary couldn't make it.

"I'm afraid I have to go for a fitting. And on my dinner hour!" she said.

* * * *

PETER HAD TO GO for a fitting, too, at his tailor's. And he was still sitting in his overcoat, having a scotch-break, to save time. Beside him sat the great actor, Ray Walston, the devil in "Damn Yankees," a confederate in the new show.

"This is a hell of a gamble for us," Peter remarked. "We cancelled—or postponed—five weeks in Las Vegas.

"Guess we're just stage-struck," he admitted. "All this jazz started a couple of years ago. Krasna said he wanted us for a show. I thought it was just conversation.

"We'd read 22 scripts we turnded down. When this one arrived, I fell out of bed laughing at it."

Pete said he's hanging out with Walston now and buddying up to him with an ulterior motive.

"I'm protecting myself," he explained. "This guy was the devil in 'Damn Yankees' and I claim he is in this, too. I'm romancing him so he won't run away with the show."

* * * *

"DON'T PRINT THAT!": A world-famed actress wasn't allowed to take part in a small benefit show in her home town because the director didn't think she was right for the role. . . . A top-ranking—and fiery-tempered—singer stopped her cafe act to bawl out the conductor: "Either do it my way or get off the stage!"

ABBE LANE, who plays a stripper in "Oh Captain!" says "I spend more time dressing to go to the theater than I do to go on stage" . . . United Artists is trying to popularize a dance called "The Swivel" . . . Rogers and Hammerstein want Tsuruko Kobayashi Feinberg, for their "Flower Drum Song."

Kim Stanley Turns the Tables on Hollywood

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—Stage star Kim Stanley is finally turning the tables on movieland—with satiric gusto.

For several seasons Miss Stanley has been one of Broadway's outstanding protrayers of emotional fireworks. But the roles that won her prizes always went to somebody else when the plays became films.

Now for her own screen debut, Kim is tossing her high-tension versatility into a portrait of a small-town jade who gets the glamour buildup into a cinema queen of romance.

The script was written by Paddy Chayefsky of "Marty" fame. Entitled "The Goddess," it is scheduled for release next month. Advance reports are the performance may well propel Kim high among next year's Oscar contenders.

MISS STANLEY'S own comment:

"I wanted the part so badly that I even took a screen test, the first that I ever agreed to."

The test, she says, was bad—"but I got the part anyway."

An actress of rare candor (who once called New York critics fatheads), Kim says "I marvel now at the good moments I do have on the screen,

KIM STANLEY
In Movies—At Last

but it would take several films for me to develop peak efficiency."

The movie debut is blonde Kim's first brush with film in any form. In addition to her stage work, she has racked up a number of notable television credits, but the TV performances have always been live. By coincidence, she won her first major praise on the same network playhouse that gave Chayefsky his big break.

The fact that others have done her stage plums on film (Marilyn Monroe in "Bus Stop" and Susan Strasberg in "Picnic") apparently doesn't bother the lady from Tularosa, N. M.

She explains:

"I deliberately resisted movie roles before, and this year I turned down several Broadway plays.

"The roles were either repetitious or they were no challenge."

ALWAYS ON THE LOOKOUT for change, one of the enticements of "The Goddess" was that the role requires her to play ages from 15 to 32, the latter being approximately Kim's own unprecisely admitted vintage.

"I do it with mirrors," she blithely remarks.

As a critic of critics, Miss Stanley feels that movieland has one advantage over Broadway.

"The movie critics don't have the same life-and-death power of deciding a show's fate," she says. "People should have a chance to make up their own minds."

Medical Waits Hit

MOSCOW (AP)—The newspaper Medical Worker complains too many ailing Soviet citizens are being cold-shouldered by directors of the excellently equipped state polyclinics. It asked tartly why some patients had to wait in line several hours at medical stations at Novosibirsk, Kaunas and Grozny.

EVERY UNIT FRONTS OCEAN
This drawing of the planned Laguna Royale Apartments shows how each has a beachfront view. Plans call for occupancy of the luxury apartments in the summer of 1959. Cost of the structure will be $3,500,000.

Plan Luxury Own-Your-Owns for South Laguna Beach Area

Construction was started this week on a sample apartment for the Laguna Royal—luxury ocean front "Own Your Own Apartment," at 31400 Pacific Coast Hwy., South Laguna Beach, a residential section, three blocks from the business district. Wm. D. Greschner Co., of Santa Ana, who will build the ocean front apartments, plan occupancy for the summer of 1959. Total construction cost will be $3,500,000.

Among the many features of this luxury apartment, which will be sold as deeded apartment homes with co-op maintenance, are that all apartments face the ocean with all living rooms and bedrooms facing the ocean. There will be nine stories of fire-proof, sound-proof, and earthquake-proof construction. The lower floor and swimming pool will be 50 feet above the ocean, with the top floor 135 feet above the ocean. A glass front elevator will take guests from the top floor to the pool level. An escalator takes guests from the pool level to their own private beach where each family will have their own Cabana. Entrance is at street level with car storage in an underground garage.

* * * *

THERE WILL BE 72 UNITS, including five penthouses with their own roof gardens.

The Wm. D. Greschner Co. real estate division will handle sales and a temporary sales office has been established at 2419 Coast Blvd., South Laguna Beach, in charge of Louis E. Gabel. Prices will range from $28,962 to $71,850 for 1-bedroom and 1 bath, 2 bedrooms and 2 baths, to 3 bedrooms and 3 baths. Pent homes range from $61,443 to $74,850. Co-operative maintenance cost will range from $86 to $182 per month.

Mortgage Money Is Easing, Says FHA

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON (UP)—The head of the Federal Housing Administration says that the January increase in applications for FHA insurance on home mortgages is good news for home buyers.

Commissioner Norman P. Mason told the United Press that the upturn means it is becoming easier to get a home mortgage loan. In contrast to the extreme tightness in the money market a few months ago, he added, "money is now looking for mortgages."

Reports from builders to his office, Mason said, indicate that the softening in the market has also made lenders more willing to write longer term mortgages and to require smaller down payments.

He said in the last two months builders have been paying smaller discounts on money they borrow, still another sign the market is easing.

* * * *

MASON DECLINED to say when the interest rate home buyers pay on mortgages might also come down. Such a decline has been predicted by economists since the Federal Reserve Board reversed its tight money policy in November. But the experts have pointed out that mortgage rates are "sticky" and will be the last interest rates to come down.

Still another sympton of easier borrowing was the recent announcement by the Federal National Mortage Assn. that it is increasing its buying price on mortgages it buys from initial lenders in the "secondary" market.

In a report to President Eisenhower, Mason disclosed that January applications for FHA insurance numbered 47,600, nearly 65 per cent more than in January 1957.

* * * *

ADJUSTED FOR NORMAL seasonal variation, January applications covering new homes topped the December total by 14 per cent. For existing homes, the gain was more than 25 per cent.

Applications for insurance of mortgages on large-scale rental and cooperative housing projects covered a total of 5,300 dwelling units, compared with 3,100 in December and 4,200 a year ago.

Mason said that nearly all the applications were for houses in the moderate price range—below $15,000 for single-family houses.

In another report, Mason disclosed that "delinquencies on insured mortgages are at an all-time low." He said that "only four out of every 1,000 FHA home buyers are even in technical default, which means being 30 days overdue on their mortgage payment."

Birthday of Escrow Firm

First Escrow and Title Co., 330 East 4th St., celebrated its 10th birthday last week.

The company was incorporated Feb. 16, 1948, at which time there was only one employe. In the past 10 years they outgrow their original office and in 1955 purchased their own building and now have a staff of 10 of which Bernice M. Powers is the remaining original officer of the corporation, now being the president.

The company also has an office at 9828 East Flower St., Bellflower, to serve the customers in that area, in which there are three employees. The climax to their birthday week was a dinner party held in the Red Velvet Room at the Lafayette Hotel, Thursday night for employes and officers.

"It has been a pleasure to serve our city and render escrow service to our many patrons and friends," said Bernice Powers, "and we were pleased on having our old friends and customers dropping in to see us through our Birthday Week."

More Building but Value Less

Western light construction started 1958 on a slight upturn with small gains in dwelling unit construction and in number of total permits. Valuation of total light construction in January, however, was down from January of 1957. These observations are made from the Statistical Survey compiled by "Western Building," light construction journal of the West.

Total building permits are up 1.7%, valuation is down 4.4%. Dwelling units permits are up .6%, valuation is up .8%.

The survey's study of building permit figures from 342 areas for total permits and 297 areas for dwelling units shows the following comparisons for January 1958 and 1957 for identical areas:

Total permits of 40,296 in January 1958, compared to 39,636 a year ago, and a valuation of $288,432,908 compared to $301,818,261 a year ago; dwelling units totaling 14,790 compared to 14,692 a year ago, and valuation of $148,237,568 compared to $147,017,130 a year ago.

Transferred Back Here

To U.S. Steel Position Here

Transfer of Edward W. Metters, district representative of U. S. Steel's Oil Well Supply Division, from Castaic Junction, to Long Beach, was announced by D. S. Grubbs, California area manager.

Metters was employed by "Oilwell" in 1950 at Los Angeles and was transferred in 1951 to Long Beach. In 1952 he was transferred to Castaic Junction and was appointed store manager at this location in 1954. The following year he was appointed district representative at Castaic Junction.

A native of California, Metters served in the U. S. Army during World War II.

Shattuck to Speak

Charles B. Shattuck, past-president of both the state and national realty associations, will be the speaker at the Tuesday morning "Early Bird" breakfast of the Long Beach Board of Realtors, Larry Miller, president, announced. Shattuck was obtained by J. C. Hofman Sr., program chairman for the month.

Shattuck, a native of Los Angeles, has been in the real estate business since 1919, engaged in selling, leasing, financing, managing, developing and appraising investments. He is sole owner of the Shattuck Co., Realtors and appraisers.

To Build Big Hilton Motel

A Long Beach architectural firm has been commissioned to design a large, ultra-modern motor hotel in downtown San Antonio and a Long Beach man will be general supervisor of the construction.

Built by the Hilton Hotels Corp., it will be known as the Hilton Inn and will have 50 units, with total cost over $500,000.

Construction will be under the general supervision of J. E. Simkins of Long Beach who is building consultant for the Hilton Corp. and the local architectural firm of Killingsworth, Brady and Smith is designing the motel.

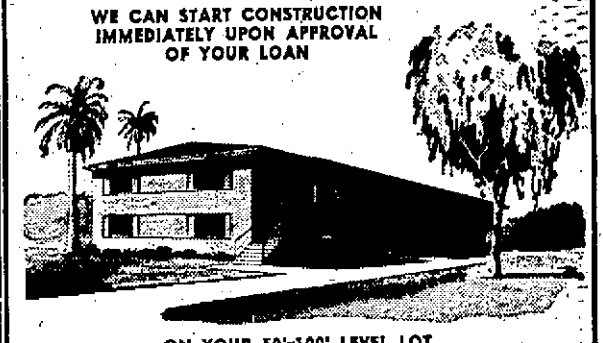

REALTY AWARD
Steele & Moss Enterprises, real estate organization, has developed a contest in their sales department. An award will be given each month to the member who totals the highest in dollar volume of sales, listings obtained and attendance at the Board of Realtors Breakfast Club; as well as weekly tours of office listings. The award for the first four-week contest was presented by Harold Steele, right, to Betty Wilkinson. Betty has been very active in civic work, serving in the P-T.A. for six years.

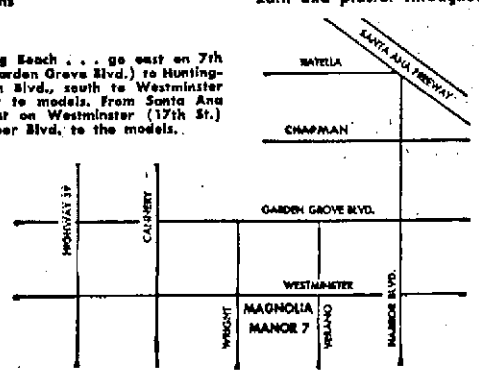

BRIDGE APPROACHES NOW IN PLACE
With the big new Ninth St. bridge spanning the Los Angeles River scheduled for completion early in 1959, the various approaches to the eight-lane span are rapidly taking form. Most of the steel for the approaches is in place, as may be seen here. When completed, the big span will speed traffic into the downtown area with lanes from the Long Beach Freeway entering the downtown area via Fourth St. and Sixth St. while traffic from the downtown onto the freeway will use Fifth St. and Seventh St. The $8,200,000 structure is designed so it crosses the river on a "skewed" pattern, starting on Ninth St. on the west side and ending much further down river on the east side. This is to speed traffic instead of having a sharp turn.

Grand opening of "The Californian" and "The Villager," furnished model residences at Park Village Homes, which last week attracted large crowds and heavy sales, will be continued today, it was reported by spokesmen for Pierce and Armour, builders and developers, and the McCarthy Co., sales agents for the new Anaheim community.

Officials said background sales and grand opening results among those visiting the homes at Crescent and La Reina St., just west of Magnolia Ave., Anaheim, daily from 10 a.m. to dusk, reflected a keen interest in the Park Village Homes' unique trade-in plan.

"Park Village Homes," an official said, "is attracting many families which have outgrown earlier dwellings. They want to trade in such properties, usually 2-bedroom, single-bath, one-car-garage homes, on one of our large 3 or 4-bedroom, 2-full-bath residences."

* * * *

Admiral Shifts Harris Hesketh

CHICAGO—Harris Hesketh, general manager of Admiral Distributing Corp., Denver division, will be transferred to Admiral's Chicago headquarters to become executive assistant to Carl E. Lantz, vice president in charge of sales, it was announced.

Lantz recently assumed the duties performed by W. C. Johnson, now on an extended leave of absence.

Hesketh joined Admiral Corporation's Los Angeles division in 1953 and became television and radio sales manager there the following year. He was transferred to Denver in 1955 to become general manager of Admiral's distributing branch in that city.

Not for Driving

DENVER (AP) — Gilbert R. Carrel, chief of the Colorado Highway Patrol, says it should be a punishable offense to drive only with parking lights during times of reduced visibility.

BOAT PORT INCLUDED

This model of one of the Marina Bay Homes has a boat port for storage of the family small boat. Located near the Marina this boat port home is one of the favorite models of the development.

Marina Bay Homes Sales Are Soaring

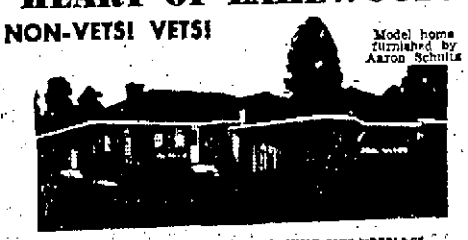

Jim Young, vice-president of Brighton-Bilt Homes, announced that sales have reached over $700,000 at this beach-area's newest development, Marina Bay.

The enthusiasm for the Seal Beach Development will be shared by all home buyers as they inspect its many features, salesmen declare. Located in the Long Beach and Los Altos areas it has easy access to the many exciting recreational areas that bound on the Southern California coastline.

The nearly $14,000,000 Yacht Basin, bathing beaches and the Long Beach Marina contribute to the extras that the Marina Bay Home buyer will find when he inspects these medium priced 3-bedroom homes. Proximity to the huge enployment area, walking distance to schools and a proposed shopping center were other factors noted by the real-estate editors.

Another point of interest was noted by Young when he stated that this will be the last of GI approved housing developments available in the Marina Bay Area. "Bonafide GI terms are available. Veterans may qualify for only $440 down payment plus costs and impounds with 30-year terms and only 4½ per cent interest, plus excellent non-veteran terms available." Marina Bay Homes may be reached by driving two miles south of Long Beach on Pacific Coast Hwy. and following signs to furnished model homes.

Dirty Filter on Furnace Blocks Heat

If your forced warm air furnace is working overtime, but your house is cold, you'd better check the filters in your heating unit.

Filters which screen dust and impurities from circulated air become clogged if not changed periodically, making it difficult for warm air to get through.

Heating engineers estimate that only 25 to 40 per cent of owners of forced warm air furnaces change filters at the recommended rate of twice during the heating season. Others may not change them for two or three years and many do not realize they have filters in the furnace until a repair man is called to determine why the house is cold when the unit seems to be giving its all.

For proper maintenance of the forced warm air furnace, the blower should be oiled before and after heating season and filters should be changed at least twice, in normal conditions.

In new housing tracts, before lawns are fully developed, there is an excessive amount of dust picked up through the intake usually beneath the house. Furnace men advise checking the filter after 3 months of use in such instances. The blower is impeded if there is a heavy concentration of dust and dirt particles and even pollen in the screen.

Gienapp Directs Electronic Process for Bank of America

A dozen years ago Melvin M. Gienapp, 3765 Weston Pl., Long Beach, was an Air Force officer in central China, controlling fighter aircraft by radar scope. Today he is a new assistant vice president in Bank of American heading the changeover from manual to electronic processing loan accounts.

His promotion from assistant cashier was announced by Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the board of directors. He is in charge of a staff of 120 people of the systems and equipment research department, Los Angeles, for the bank's Southern California division.

The new equipment is already handling electronically the accounting of real estate and Timeplan loans for more than 100 branches in the Southland.

"We're taking the routine work out of banking as fast as possible," said Gienapp, "reducing the great load of paper work, giving better service, and making interior bank jobs more interesting."

He has been with the bank since 1937. His first job was as a batch clerk at Long Beach Main Office. He has been an officer since he returned from his second tour of military duty in 1952. In 1955 he was a project leader in installation and conversion to computers at San Francisco data processing center, and has been in Los Angeles central office for the last 15 months.

LEASES ARE SIGNED

Orange County Plaza Center Will Have Two Supermarkets

The layout for Orange County Plaza at Brookhurst and Chapman Aves., Garden Grove, has been revised to include two supermarkets, Thriftimark and Safeway, which makes Orange County Plaza the only shopping center in the county with two supermarkets. The approval of all tenants of the new layout now allows the schedule of construction to begin in 120 days.

The decision of Safeway Stores to give up their location across the street and join the Orange County Plaza necessitated a new layout for the center. The new section will include 35 acres, with 40 stores and parking space for 3000 cars. Plans are being drawn by Jacobson, Coppedge & Huxley of Los Angeles, architects, and will total 275,000 square feet of building area. The total investment overall of tenants and landlords is approximately $5 million. The first section of the center, totaling 10 acres, has been in operation for more than a year.

* * * *

DONALD SHANEDLING, who is known as "America's No. 1 shopping center promoter," is president of the center. Henry Shanedling Sons Corp. recently purchased one-half interest in the center, and joins Bill W. Tietz and Harry S. Rinker, president and secretary-treasurer of Tietz Construction Co., in the development.

Shanedling is former president and chairman of the board of American Shopping Centers, Minneapolis, a nation-wide chain of shopping centers. He recently moved to Beverly Hills to become active head of new Orange County Plaza Center.

Tenants of the new section include J. C. Penney, 65,000 sq. ft.; Safeway, 22,500 sq. ft.; W. T. Grant, 28,000 sq. ft.; Woolworth, 14,000 sq. ft.; Thrifty Drug, 18,000 sq. ft.; Hartfield's, 10,000 sq. ft.; Bank of America, 9,000 sq. ft.; Rankins Dept. Store, 28,000 sq. ft.

BUILT BY CUNNINGHAM
Stratford Villa, the 23rd community developed by Cunningham Co., in this area, is opening and offering homes such as this, priced at $13,100. These homes are in Anaheim.

Cunningham Opens New Stratford Unit

Opening of Stratford Villa, 3 and 4-bedroom, two-bath homes at Walnut and Ball Rd. in Anaheim will mark the opening of the 23rd community developed by Cunningham Co. in Southern California since 1947.

The quality building evident in previous Cunningham Co. homes will again be available to prospective homeowners, a spokesman noted, with the moderate price of the superior homes expected to be a strong sales factor.

According to Frank Hart, sales manager of Walker & Lee, Inc., sales agents, the homes are available for $690 down plus small closing costs. The three-bedroom, two-bath homes are priced at $12,550, while the larger dwellings, with four bedrooms and two baths, are priced at $13,100.

AMONG THE FEATURES of the homes are rich, natural finish birch cabinets with raised panels, garbage disposals, spacious dinette areas in kitchens and genuine self-edged Formica work tops to give beauty and durability to kitchen counters.

Circular floor plans allow privacy throughout the home and prevent the use of the living room as thoroughfare, it was noted. Thermostatically controlled forced air heating, view windows in living rooms overlooking patio areas, American Standard fixtures, Provincial architecture and stall showers in baths adjacent to master bedrooms are more features.

Genuine lath and plaster, extra ample closets and cabinets throughout, oversize two-car garages spacious enough for work-shop and hobby devotees, dust-free slab doors and concrete drives and walks are more construction features of the homes which have sidewalks and street lights already installed.

Well located near new churches and schools, shopping centers and major transportation, Stratford Villa is also close to Disneyland, beaches, resorts and golf courses. From Long Beach, visitors drive out Carson (Lincoln) to Manchester, right on Manchester to Walnut and continue to models.

Two Join Staff of J. R. Bernhardt

Thompson, a resident here since 1940 and past president of the Mounted Police, will specialize in homes and income property. Smith will specialize in motels and trailer parks.

STATE INSURANCE RULES TOLD

Here's How System Works to Aid Jobless

Failure to understand the provisions of the California Unemployment Insurance Code causes most of the beefs regarding claims for unemployment insurance payments.

That's on the authority of George Toll, manager of the Long Beach office of the California Department of Employment, who adds:

"Claimants rarely complain about the waiting in line. Average waiting time: 30 minutes.

"Most of the trouble arises from a lack of understanding of the law," he said. "We have to follow the rules established for us."

* * * *

SO IF YOU'RE unemployed and want to draw insurance, here's the picture:

Employers pay all the cost of unemployment insurance through a payroll tax.

Payments to the jobless are not made on the basis of need. The program adheres to insurance principles.

Payments range from $10 to $40 a week. They can be paid up to a maximum of 26 weeks.

A claim for unemployment insurance is not valid if the worker's total "base period" wages were less than $600.

The base period for claims filed in February, March and April is a 12-month period beginning Oct. 1, 1956, and ending Sept. 30, 1957.

Earnings during the base period determine whether the applicant may qualify for unemployment insurance, and if so, the amount.

* * * *

FIRST PAYMENT to eligible workers usually is made within two to three weeks. The first week after the claim is filed is called the "waiting period" and benefits are not payable for this period.

If the claimant meets all eligibility requirements he usually can be paid for one week on his first regular report day after the second week has passed.

Claimants must report each week to receive their payment unless they have returned to work. Persons reporting to file continued claims are assigned a set day and hour for appearing each week in order to spread the work load of the office. The day is decided by the last four digits of the claimant's social security account number. The time of day is determined by the last two digits.

The claimant may be excused from reporting at the appointed hour and day whenever the appointment time interferes with the hour for reporting to a union for dispatch or when it interferes with a job-interview appo[illegible]

* * * *

A CLAIMANT MAY EARN up to $3.99 without deduction from his weekly benefit amount. However, he must report any earnings, no matter how small.

Eligibility requirements include unemployment, availability for work, willingness to take a suitable job if it is offered. The applicant must "be doing everything he can to find work."

Eligibility to receive benefits is examined closely whenever the worker:

1. Quit his job without good cause.
2. Was discharged from his last job because of misconduct connected with his work.
3. Left his work to be married—or because of other family or domestic reasons—unless he is the sole or major support of his family.
4. Left his work because of a trade dispute or strike.
5. Refuses to take suitable work.
6. Fails to apply for a job when referred by the Department of Employment.
7. Fails to do his best to find a job.
8. Makes a false statement or withholds information to obtain benefits.

* * * *

WHAT ABOUT the "voluntary quit"?

The individual is disqualified for unemployment benefits if he left his most recent work voluntarily without good cause.

The period of disqualification in such cases is five weeks. It is figured on the date of registration with the department. So claimants should register immediately; otherwise they will have to wait another five weeks before drawing benefits.

Quitting a job in anticipation of a general layoff probably will result in disqualification.

Leaving a job for health reasons ordinarily will not disqualify an applicant if he can show he was advised by a physician that the work was hurting him and that there was no other job for him with that employer which would not be harmful.

An employe who quits his job to protect his record ("quit or be fired") is considered to have been discharged. His eligibility for insurance would depend on whether he was forced out of employment for "misconduct."

* * * *

THE PERIOD of disqualification because of misconduct is the same as that for a voluntary quit: five weeks. The code defines misconduct as a deliberate violation or disregard of the standard of conduct which an employer has the right to expect from his employes or carelessness or negligence so great or so often that it would be reasonable to imply that it was either intentional or in complete disregard of the employer's interest.

Misconduct can include repeated tardiness, failure to observe safety regulations, unexcused absences, gross carelessness in the performance of duties, refusal to sign a loyalty oath, and arguing with customers, supervisors and fellow employes.

QUITTING A JOB to go to work for one's self is not considered a compelling reason for voluntarily leaving employment. A worker who does so and then re-enters the labor market would be subject to a disqualification for five weeks.

The employment office may possibly disqualify a claimant who refuses to take a job in a related field after unsuccessful attempts have been made to place him in a particular skill.

The applicant for unemployment insurance benefits first goes to the information window of the nearest local office of the Department of Employment. There he is handed a set of forms to fill out and an appointment time.

A pamphlet outlining details of the unemployment insurance program may be obtained by writing the Department of Employment, 1313 Pine Ave.

Watch in Tire Still Running

MONON, Ind. (AP) — Garage mechanic Mike Stiller found a wrist watch inside an automobile tire he was repairing and showed it to Bernie McCombs, a competitor.

McCombs identified the timepiece as his and said he lost it while repairing the same tire several weeks before. The self-winding watch, still running, had traveled some 700 miles inside the tire.

Benefit League Spotlights California Designers

"NICE WORK and we've got it!" declare members of Children's Benefit League as they decorate a money tree to serve as focal point in decor at their annual benefit style show Thursday in Lafayette Hotel Grand Ballroom. Decorators are (from left) Mmes. Irving D. Koppel, Noble D. Mounts, P. I. Wilsey Jr., and Bernard L. Pelton. Reservations for the noon luncheon and style show are open to the public and may be made with Benefit League members.

Children's Benefit League will turn "Fashion Spotlights of 1958" on California Designers Thusday noon in Grand Ballroom of Lafayette Hotel when it presents its annual style pageant as a benefit for Children's Clinic at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Festivities will begin with luncheon, served at tables transforming the ballroom into a "tropical paradise" through pineapples, leis, shells and coral. Focal point will be a money tree, adorned with dollar bills.

A fast paced commentary by Ethel Joutras, executive director of the Little Couture, will accompany fashions from leading California designers. Seen will be fabulous lace treatments by Peggy Hunt, the patio fashions of Pat Premo, Marjorie Montgomery's "little cottons," swimwear by Rose Marie Reid, beautifully tailored suits from Georgia Bullock and Harrods of California, couture coats that are the trademark of Travilla, and fashions by Marguerite Dexter, Marjorie Michael and other designers. All of the designers showing are available at Long Beach stores.

And the youngsters are going to be pretty upset at being left at home when they hear that "Mom" gets to enjoy Dick Simmons—Television's Sergeant Preston of the Yukon—in his role as master of ceremonies.

Activities don't stop there, either. The day's topper will be awarding of a fabulous all expense week-long trip by air to Bermuda, a portable electric dishwasher, portable sewing machine and numerous other gifts.

RESERVATIONS ARE OPEN to the public and may be made by contacting Mrs. Robert Nichols, 4200 Blackthorne Ave., or Mrs. Laurence Chaffee, 4533 Blackthorne Ave.

Trumpet Sound Heralds Fair

By ILKA CHASE

Heigh-ho come to the fair! The trumpets are sounding for the Brussels World's Fair which, nearly 10 years in preparation, opens April 17 and runs through October 19. This is Brussel's ninth time as host to the world since the first great fair was held in London's Crystal Palace in 1851. Judging from all one hears and sees it's a great opportunity for mental and visual indigestion as well as fun.

I don't mean that the buildings and displays are ugly—there are some startling and soaring new forms, but there are a lot of them from all over the world vying with each other for originality. The slap-happy tourist is likely to be cross as well as bug-eyed.

* * * *

JUDGING from the photographs, the Japanese and Portuguese buildings look to be two of the best with the French Pavilion the most radical: a glass house based on a crystal form counter, balanced by a huge piercing arrow of steel. Ours is nice I think, round. A sort of giant glass and wire cylinder, very airy in feeling. The Russians' is rectagular and their whole exhibit is costing them fifty-million bucks. We're to run to about 15 million.

The fair will cover nearly 500 acres—take your loafers, kids — and about 48 nations will be represented, including a land unknown to me, Ruanda Urundi. I think it's near the Belgian Congo but don't set out on my say-so without a map.

There's a theme, too. Just as the trylon and perisphere were the theme of the New York World's Fair so Brussels will have the Atomium. Seat belts fastened? The Atomium is a weirdie. A giant structure of nine huge metal balls joined by—tubes representing the nine atoms of an elementary crystal of iron, magnified 160 billion times.

* * * *

NO, I DON'T understand it either but that's how the description reads. Anyhow, each ball or sphere is going to be 59 feet in diameter and they are really huge rooms housing nuclear goodies. I take it this means we will see the peaceful use of physics and atoms and rays. Maybe how to broil a steak in a minute and a half, how to stay dry under the rain or possibly how to conjure up a good show on television, mystic and unusual things. The upper balls reached by elevators and escalators inside the metal tubes or passageways are for the bird's-eye view of the fair and the city spreading far below.

* * * *

WHAT DOES sound fun, I think, is the re-creation of Brussels of 1900 with shops and theaters and restaurants of the era as well as a glimpse of the Brussels of 2000.

There are to be two exhibits. Those who arrive on the opening day and up to July 21st will see Fifty Years of Modern Art, Twentieth Century masterpieces from all nations.

From August 8 through October 19, the exhibition will be Man and Art, a panorama of 4000 years. Supposedly the Russians are bringing some of the pictures from the great Hermitage Collection which have so long been barred from view.

JUST WHAT we're sending is still under discussion. I've heard talk it might be Time Remembered with Helen Hayes, but that is, after all, a translation from the French. We would do better, I think, to send an authentic native product and this year there are several good ones: "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," "Look Homeward Angel," the rollicking, "Who Was That Lady I Saw You With," the critics' baby, "The Music Man,' 'Sunrise at Campobello" and the distinguished and very American musical, "West Side Story."

You can book reservations in hotel, motel, pension or private houses. There is also to be a trailer camp for—and here reason reels—17,000 people and their cars.

Tell you what: This might be just the year to stay home. Not however, that people will. Americans are still a sturdy race and who wants to miss the biggest show on earth?

Mrs. Clock Entertains for Son's Fiancee

A gracious afternoon tea was given Saturday by Mrs. Henry Clock, 4242 Pine Ave., to honor her future daughter-in-law, Miss Gayle Andrews, who will wed the Clocks' son, Ens. Phil Clock, on April 5.

Asked to assist at the fashionable affair were the bridegroom-elect's grandmother, Mrs. Ralph Clock, as well as Mmes. Eldredge Combs, Lauren Conley, Maurice Hubbell, Manley Natland, Calvert Strong, Emmet Sullivan, Robert Whyte and Mrs. James Plumlee of Sierra Madre, the hostess' sister. Guests were greeted at the door by the Misses Pamela Crouse, Barbara Conley and Cynthia Combs.

For her floral decor Mrs. Clock used exquisite arrangements of yellow tulips and sprayed bouvardia in the entrance hall and living room. In the dining room the refreshment table was covered by a lovely green lace tablecloth in a shade as pale as seamist and centered by an all-white arrangement of tulips, hyacinths and gardenias.

Standing with the lovely honoree as she was introduced to a host of family friends of her fiance's parents was her mother, Mrs. Francis L. Andrews.

The Wild Waves Say

By IOLA MASTERSON

WHEN THE FOG is so thick seagulls walk because it's such a lovely day that's foggy, man, foggy! Well, the seagulls were not only walking — they were literally floating in the stuff last Sunday morning, if you'll recall. That was the date, set long in advance, for the first cruise —the grand maiden voyage—of the newly formed Long Beach Marina Yacht Club!

"Man! That's FOG

Did that dismay the yachtsmen? Or the yachtsmen's wives? NO! It did not. But it scared the heck out of their boats. That's why, after groping their way through cotton batting from home to docks, they "cruised" all day without ever leaving their slips! But fun, fun! Every captain and his first mate held open boat aboard their craft and, instead of cruising the inner harbor as planned, they pleased the inner man by eating their way through ships' stores at every stop. Commodore Ed Beebe and wife, Joan, said "welcome aboard" as did Vice Commodore "Mossie" Kent and wife, Marjory, Rae and Stan Bean (he's secretary), Virginia and Jim Wilson, Ray and LaNelle Fosholdt, Ruth and Paul Horst, Eleanor and Art Howard (Art is club treasurer), Folnita and "Rod" Rodriguez, Elizabeth and Morris Barr, and Lucille and Conrad Lueko.

Incidentally, Conrad was "port captain" for the day. In other words, general chairman in charge of travel. And, in this case, that's the under statement of the week.

THE SONG OF the vagabond is a siren's call these days beckoning to Marie and John Ferguson and their youngsters, Carol and Bill. 'Ere long they'll board a plane for New York then by the Cunard's Line, S. S. Saxonia bob across the Atlantic to Le Havre where they'll pick up a car and motor-mosey all over Europe on a three months' junket. They'll save the best till last, visiting John's uncle in Scotland, where John lived as a child. Out of town friends will take advantage of their absence to "vacation" in their house while they're gone.

WEARING THAT noble expression, "The Face of a Taxpayer," we descended on the City Council session last Tuesday afternoon to watch the goings-on. Even although we were there to object with the ardor of an avenging angel to some of City Park Director Don Obert's plans to change the Colorado Lagoon area (thus shrinking the nine hole golf course and re-routing 6th St.) still and all we had hoped to get a word in edgewise in sincere compliment to Don for attempting to do something about beautifying it. Lots of his ideas are darn good ones even although the bulk of the audience were there to ask for modifications.

Among those whose civic concern and healthy interest prompted them to be there were Campbell (Sandy) Lucas, Jim Pino, Col. "Davy" Crockett, Dr. George Verbryck, Betty Dansby, Norman Masterson, Henry Dunn, Bill Harris, good looking former National Publinx golf champion Ted Richards, "Charli" Swanburg and Maxine Rafferty.

It was quite a day to see other well known faces we usually associate with social as well as civic "get up and go." Another group, there on Boys' Club and Day Nursery business with our city fathers, was composed, in part, of Ethel Case, Helen Fielding, Sally Nesmith, Fred Hershorn, Ruth and Maurice Hubbell, Joe Kennick, Mary Simpson, Mildred Draper, Helen Newcomb and Frances and Henry Clock.

WEDNESDAY, the day the weatherman was a louse. What, twixt the wind and the rain, Nellie and Herbert Mayson said, "farewell, old friend," to a venerable acacia which picked itself up by the roots and laid itself right down flat in the yard. Across town Ruth Moore heard a grinding crash and then called Harrison to tell him their big, new TV antenna had just taken a nose dive trying to get in out of the wind.

ALSO ON THE day the rains came put Effort and Duty in caps for Dr. Jack Taylar, Sam Vickers and Gene Kirkpatrick who ignored storm warnings and flooded street corners to slosh across the city for a meeting with Margo Conley, Phylis Ogilby, Eleanor Brown and Betty Wertz at the Children's Dental Health Center to lend their wisdom to a conference on the dental health program for little folks.

CONNOISSEUR of that vintage of automobile known as classic is Dr. Henry Ward. Love of his life (next to Elizabeth, we hasten to add!) is his '41 Chrysler Fleetwood Berlin —last of the American limousines built. No room for the royal coach in the Ward's busy car barn, so it's parked in the garage of kindly neighbor, Mrs. Lena Roy. On the pretense that a little daily walk is "good medicine," the doc strikes out each morning with purposeful stride—and always "happens" to walk right past Mrs. Roy's. That close, might as well check on the Berlin. No exception Wednesday when the skies were at their wettest. That kind of constitutional takes the constitution of a dedicated man, The Berlin? Dry and cozy!

SANDLARKS had a "pat ourselves on the back" party—cocktails, dinner and dancing—at the University Club last Saturday night, finally getting around to celebrating the success of their marvNOELess Christmas Fantasy. What an opportunity to legalize a few back whacks! Chairmanning were Mary Ellen and Robert Peek and Maria and Chuck Stevens.

President Juanita Lake had a good excuse for non-attendance at the slaperoojamboree. She's on the high seas! Left a couple of weeks ago aboard a lazy freighter bound for South America where she'll stop off in Rio to visit with former Long Beachers, Vera and Don West. Juanita will fly home, we understand, after an absence of about six weeks.

MOST exciting phone call that ever jangled a bell at Dorothy and Larry Updike's home was the one received Thursday morning when son-in-law, Bernard Cahier, called from New York to say he had just flown in from Paris AND that Joan was about to follow him to the US of A on a polar route flight for a totally unexpected trip home, her first since 1955!

Guess Who!

Bernard, an international journalist for several publications in various countries, was on his way to cover Cuba's grand prix before arriving here about Wednesday. Joan, depending on the ease with which she can make a plane reservation, is expected—tomorrow? Tuesday? Wednesday? Anyhow, they'll both be here a scant two weeks before heading back for their home in France. Are there any dikes up high enough to curb the Updike's high tide of joy?

A SINGLE STAR shone in Harold Maggart's eyes Monday night. The Lone Star! While Lillian listened, Harold and his old friend from Texas, George W. OFF ON A memory making trip went Flo Brooks last Sunday, flying first to Washington, D.C., to visit old friends, Doris and Jette Lee Luellen, on a stateside visit from State Dep't duties in Europe and both, by the way, en route to Rangoon for new career duty there.

As exciting as seeing the Luellens was, the real zing of Flo's trip is being in Atlanta, Ga.—she's there right now—by special invitation of the American Bar Assn. to address wives of delegates at the winter session of the nation's attorneys. Flo will make two major talks; one today and another tomorrow, both as a prelude to possible formation of a national lawyers wives' organization. The honor is well deserved by our Mrs. Brooks because she was the founder and charter president of the Long Beach Lawyers' Wives Club, first such group in the country (begun in 1939). She also was a "tower of strength" when the state group formed in California and served as its president in 1956-57!

THERE SAT Joan Hoskins Wednesday surrounded by the poignant chaos of extra chairs, bridge tables, dishes and food enough for 36 women who were telephoned at the last minute not to come to Dames Club's guest brunch to take place in her home, 211 Termino Ave., that wild and uncooperative day. Keeping the lonely vigil with her and all the food they brought were committee cooks Tam Wall, Carolyn Blakeman, Millie Berry and Camilla La Gregs. Another committee member, Belle Snyder, stayed home in "sweet" dismay, her kitchen full of homemade cakes (she baked 'em all herself) to satisfy the entire crowd that didn't go.

Military Air Pervades Nuptials

Mrs. William F. McCauley

More than 300 persons gathered Feb. 15 in St. Bartholomew's Catholic Church for the military wedding uniting Miss Mary Ann Reiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford M. Reiman, 6500 Bayshore Wk., and Lt. (j.g.) William F. McCauley, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCauley of Omaha, Neb.

Following the ceremony read by the Rev. Percy Bell, the couple left the church under an arch of crossed swords. Now honeymooning in Mexico City, they will return this week to the United States to make their home in Coronado where the bridegroom is stationed with the Navy.

Complementing the blond beauty of the bride was her gown of pure silk peau de soie embroidered with lace and a portrait neckline outlined in pearls. The bouffant skirt featured a bustle back which extended to a graceful chapel train. An embroidered lace cap held the soft folds of her fingertip length veil of silk illusion. In her bouquet were white orchids and stephanotis.

IN DRAMATIC contrast to the bride's gown and the white Navy uniforms of the groomsmen were the American Beauty peau de soie gowns of the bridal attendants, Miss Lyndal Holme, maid of honor; and Misses Marianne Ricks, Sue Merritt, Mary Lou LeMaster and Mary Ellen McCauley, sister of the bridegroom, bridesmaids. All carried white carnations placed in heart-shaped frames covered with red tulle.

Michele Reiman, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bridegroom asked Robert E. Hahn to be his best man. Ushers were Lt. Robert Price, Lt. Patrick Flynn, Lt. (j.g.) Paul Jessen and Lt. (j.g.) Frank Warren.

ALLEN CENTER Officers Club was the setting for the reception and luncheon. The bride's mother received in a lace dress of navy blue with electric blue accessories, and the bridegroom's mother greeted guests in mocha beige silk peau de soie.

Mrs. Lyman Krekel had charge of the guest book.

The new Mrs. McCauley was graduated from St. Anthony's High School and from the University of Colorado where she was a Pi Beta Phi. She was a member of the Newman Club and Ski Club on the Colorado campus.

The bridegroom was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Film Tour of Spain Planned at Ebell Club

Spain, a country with a violent personality, a rich flavor and a proud history, will come alive on film for Ebell of Long Beach when Clifford J. Kamen shows his color film Monday afternoon in Ebell auditorium. The powerful story of the nation as it exists today will bring out the great culture of Spain as well as its spectacular scenery, its people and commerce.

From the time he was 13 and received his first movie camera, Kamen has carefully filmed documentations of his journeys.

He studied at UC, Berkeley, and was graduated from Northwestern University. He also studied art at the Chicago Art Institute and the Academy of Fine Arts, with the result that carefully drawn and highly descriptive animated maps add to the enjoyment and understanding of his subjects.

His travels have carried him to 41 foreign countries.

Kamen will be introduced by Mrs. Arthur A. Knoll, program chairman, after a business meeting conducted by Mrs. Arthur F. Bonzer.

Luncheon will be served by members of Group B, Mrs. Grant Maddy, chairman.

Golden Days for WMC

Fifty years ago a meeting of importance in the music life of Long Beach took place —gained in momentum and vitality and finally crystalized into Woman's Music Club.

The Charter Day luncheon Wednesday noon in the Cavalier Room of the Lafayette Hotel will officially celebrate this Golden Anniversary. Mrs. I. B. House will pronounce the invocation.

After-luncheon program will include Mrs. Ethel Willard Putnam, charter member and past president, in a brief review of the purposes and intents of the five founding members. Rachel Morton will present Marrianna Brinkerhoff, contralto soloist, and Betty Kelsey, accompanist.

The meeting is for members only and reservations must be in by Monday noon with Mrs. William H. Sanson, 5510 El Jardin.

Cancel Civic Program Monday

The free community program sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department in Municipal Auditorium has been cancelled for Monday evening. The Marian Rankin Dance Review originally scheduled has been rescheduled to appear on Monday evening, March 3.

Prominent Pair Now at Home

Now at home from a leisurely honeymoon sojourn in Honolulu are prominent newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. David B. Slayton. The bride is the former Mrs. Richard Dilday and the bridegroom, a long time business associate of her late husband, is general business manager for the Dilday family.

The couple exchanged wedding vows in a quiet ceremony at Atlantic Ave. Methodist Church on Dec. 27 with only family members in attendance. They sailed shortly thereafter aboard the Matsonia for Hawaii.

The Slaytons just recently flew home from the islands and are now at home at 648 Terry Lynn Place.

Which is why cute "Toy" is the center of post nuptial parties now. There wasn't time enough for all the pre-bridal courtesies. Her new mother-in-law, Margaret Clinton, is having a tea in her honor next Saturday at the home of good friend Etta Meyer, 45 Geneva Wk. Assisting will be Cecile Appleton, Edith Ashbrook, Bernice Sweningsen, Digur Weber, Betty Wentworth and Etta.

Standing with the sparkling bride will be her mother, Beth Blixt, helping explain "Toy's" plans to leave early in April to join her bridegroom overseas. Another party in the bride's future is the one Edith Ashbrook and Bernie Sweningsen have planned for Saturday, March 8; a crystal shower at the University Club.

Lights! Action! A Lavish Premiere!

An exciting kleiglighted, star-studded night is in store for citizens of Long Beach on Tuesday, March 11, when Long Beach Assistance League brings to this city its first full scale, major studio premiere of one of the year's top motion pictures.

Produced by Twentieth Century Fox and slated to be one of its most highly publicized pictures this year, details have just been released. The picture will be, "The Long, Hot Summer," (a story on the film is featured in this week's Life Magazine) featuring Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward (academy award nominee for best actress of 1957 for her role in "Three Faces of Eve"), Anthony Franciosa and starring Orson Welles. The premiere will be held at the Fox West Coast Theater on E. Ocean Blvd. Rarely are such major films premiered outside of Hollywood or New York.

PROCEEDS from the gala affair will go into the Long Beach Girls' Club building fund for the clubhouse which is now under construction at 2640 Santa Fe Ave. The league and its junior auxiliary, Rick Rackers, have been working toward the girls' clubhouse for 13 years and now near fulfillment of their hopes with its opening later this year.

The dramatic and unusual fund raising project is being readied under the direction of Mrs. Dan D. Dunlap, ways and means chairman. Working with her are Mrs. Fred E. Tucker Jr. and Mrs. Marvin Davis, co-chairmen of ticket sales. Mrs. Tucker is in charge of advance ticket sales to groups or individuals and Mrs. Davis is in charge of the special box office at the West Coast which will open Tuesday for the convenience of the general public. Tickets will be sold from 12 noon to 9 p.m. each day. A special telephone is being installed to handle inquiries concerning ticket prices and reservations.

A PATRONS' committee, headed by Mrs. Rufus Davis and Mrs. Burton Chace, is composed of Mmes. Logan Goodknight, Morris Holmquist and James W. Wood. Posters heralding the event have been prepared by talented Mrs. William A. Smith Jr. Mrs. Norris Nesmith is in charge of publicity. Nationwide press, television and newsreel coverage is anticipated through studio and local releases.

Mrs. Kenneth Wing, league president, and Mrs. Ethel Stevenson, Rick Racker president, are working closely with another committee functioning to make the night of March 11 one of the most memorable of the year as a social event as well as from the show business standpoint.

Many gay pre-premiere dinner and cocktail parties are being planned with several already scheduled in private homes, at Virginia Country Club and Victor Hugo Restaurant.

ANOTHER "FIRST" for Long Beach Assistance League will be sponsorship on March 11 at Fox West Coast Theater of this city's initial major motion picture premiere, a film on which studio officials reportedly are basing hopes for '58 academy award honors. Highlight 'Safety' on Pair of Programs

By ANNE GILCHRIST

Patriotically inspired red, white and blue floral centerpieces graced dinner tables at Victor Hugo's Monday night when Executives' Secretaries paid tribute at their February dinner meeting to America's heroic presidents, Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

Major event of the evening was the presentation by President Margaret Stimson of the group's scholarship awards to Judith Soto and Nancy King to assist them continue their studies at Long Beach City College. Miss Soto, now a fourth semester student; plans to complete her education at Long Beach State College and to enter the teaching profession as an instructor in business curriculum. Miss King, who also plans to attend LBSC, hopes to become an executive secretary.

In order to stimulate enthusiasm for Executives' Secretaries national convention, to take place in Seattle in May, a documentary film on that city was shown. In addition, Dorothy Miller of the public relations staff of Long Beach Police Dept. presented a talk and showed an educational film entitled, "Pedestrian," demonstrating the dangers, do's and don'ts of pedestrian traffic on city streets and highways. The program was arranged by Mary Kay Kelly, chairman.

Altrusa Club

Dr. Charles H. Fabish, first vice president of the Long Beach Safety Council, was guest speaker at the February dinner meeting of Altrusa Club at the Lafayette Hotel. The three big "E's" of safety, he said, are enforcement, engineering and education.

Dr. Fabish described how each is handled. Enforcement agencies are responsible for the first; engineering betterment comes through improved public facilities; and education is handled in schools, churches, industries and homes. He also said that newspapers play an important part in safety by publicizing accident rates and safety measures. Other assistance has come from service clubs, many having made it their business to place placards and other illustrated devices at intersections to warn the public in graphic manner.

Fabish was introduced by Carmel Tyo, Altrusa projects chairman. The program was completed by the appearance of baritone Bernard Tyo who was accompanied by pianist Irene Trepanier. Table decorations were provided by Geraldine Neilson and Mildred Landes.

Quota Club

Braving Wednesday's inclement weather, members of Quota Club journeyed to Los Angeles for the annual district birthday dinner and to honor Wanda Frey Joiner, founder of International Quota. Plans to attend were completed at the last business meeting at the Lafayette Hotel at which time plans were also put underway for a membership drive. The entire club was divided into two teams to complete the drive to be headed by Rita Phipps and Genevieve Parker as captains.

Ives BPW

Members of Margaret Ives Business and Professional Women's Club met at the Lafayette Hotel Monday evening for their February dinner meeting conducted by President Maxine Hill. Dr. Laurel A. Weibel was guest speaker as well as commentator for a film, "The Other City," provided by the American Cancer Society and shown by Mrs. Doris Swenson.

To Sew Tuesday

Sewing group of Long Beach Emblem Club No. 106 will meet Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Homer Evans, 1732 Locust Ave. Frances Evans will be co-hostess.

Cactus Club Entertains

Long Beach Cactus Club was host to South Bay Cactus Club, Orange County Cactus Club and Los Angeles City Cactus Club when members met Feb. 16 in the home of Mrs. Francis Heald, 3252 Studebaker Rd.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Grove Teany of Costa Mesa showed colored slides of their rock gardens with blooming cacti and rare succulents as he spoke on soil mixtures, vitamin feeding and planting methods.

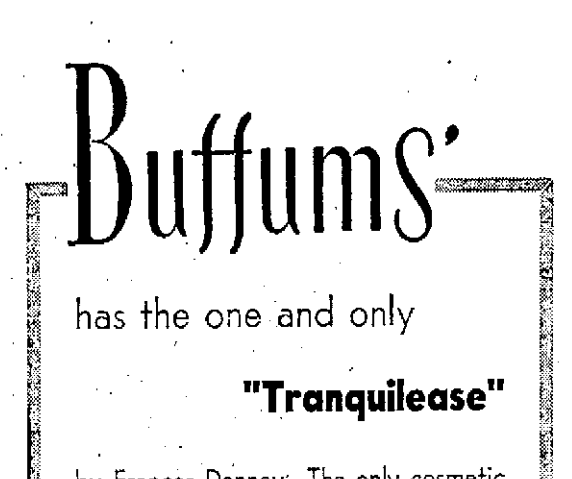

At the business session, president Jack Klenke announced that the club will visit Johnson's Cactus and Water Gardens in Paramount on April 20 and that Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wright, 231 Obispo Ave., will be hosts for the March 16 meeting of the group.

Sister Kenny Auxiliary Affair to Aid Children

Sister Kenny Auxiliary will have a benefit bridge and canasta luncheon party Tuesday at Elks Lodge, 19 Cedar Ave, with proceeds of this event to be allocated to the Long Beach Exceptional Children's Foundation.

The auxiliary, which has always raised funds to fight polio, is now in the process of reorganization due to the effectiveness of the Salk vaccine in checking polio epidemics and because it has realized its current objectives in assisting the Kenny Memorial Hospital. Therefore the school for retarded children at 4519 Stearns St. was selected as recipient of the group's philanthropic assistance at this time.

Mrs. Abraham Green is general chairman of Tuesday's party with Mrs. Roger Condit serving as her co-chairman. Others assisting will be Mmes. Walter D. Brown, Lester Cooper, Thomas Carr, E. H. Bennett, Joseph Keehen, William Kinney, Clifford Johnson, James Harper, A. E. Weiner, Gertrude Winslow and Travis Pate. Mrs. Fred R. Schwarz, auxiliary president, and Mrs. Philip M. Thompson, founder and charter president, will assist in receiving guests.

Following luncheon a brief meeting will take place to poll ideas on the future policies of the organization and allocation of funds derived from benefits scheduled for the remainder of the fiscal year. All members are urged to be present.

Ladies of Elks

Ladies of Elks will convene Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. in the Elks Club for luncheon, followed by bridge and canasta. Mrs. Mildred Schroeder is luncheon hostess.

MOLLY MAYFIELD

Lad Needs Doctor's Help

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have acne very badly. It covers my face and the back of my neck. I'm always embarrassed, and it's very difficult for me to get a date from any of the girls in my high school class.

So I've started going to another part of town where I can get dates. These kids don't have as much money as the kids I go to school with, and neither do their families.

But they're nice to me, and I feel perfectly at home with them. I can have dates over there. I feel important, and that means a lot to me.

My mother (since my father died three years ago) is very much against this. She says that I ought to stay with "our own kind." She insists that my going over there will lead to nothing except trouble. It is true that a couple of my new friends have been in scrapes, but only minor ones.

Do you see anything terrible about what I am doing, Molly? JOHNNY

DEAR JOHNNY:

No, there's actually nothing wrong. But basically your mother is right. It's not natural for a young man arbitrarily to leave the friends he knows and deliberately look for others. Friendships should grow out of normal circumstances.

But let's talk about your acne condition. By all means, ask your mother to take you to the best skin specialist you can find. I am sure that he can give you relief from the acne condition, and that really is the seat of your problem, isn't it? Don't waste a minute in doing this.

Acne is, of course, only one of the steps of growing up. But try to remember that it usually vanishes at 20 or so under normal circumstances and you'll have a whole life ahead of you without it.

M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I am confronted with a serious problem. I have a 13-year-old son who wishes to get a tattoo of a dagger on his arm. Do you think he is old enough to get it by himself or do you think either my husband or I should take him to get it?

MRS. R. P.

DEAR MRS. R. P.:

Frankly, I don't think he should get it at all, and as parents you should positively forbid it. After all, he's only 13 and he will have to live with that tattoo a long time.

However, if YOU don't mind, then I think your husband ought to go with him (if he's not tattoo-minded, too).

Days of Forty-Niners

LONG BEACH STATE COLLEGE EVENTS

by PLACER MINER

Variety is the theme of this week's tale of happenings at Long Beach State.

First, a bit about scholarship. We heard, via our usual reliable grapevine, that a State coed had received 15 units of A and ½ unit of B for last semester's work. On checking up we learned this was true, and furthermore, over a four-year stretch, this girl had a cumulative grade point average of 3.8 on a 4.0 scale—an achievement which does not happen every day. During the course of her schooling this girl has received only one C, in a physical education course; her ½ unit of B last semester was in phys ed also. Otherwise, her marks were all A's and B's with the accent on the A's.

The talented Forty-Niner, who takes an extremely active part in student body affairs when she is not hitting the books, is Georgette Gunderson, a senior.

Congratulations on your fine marks, Georgette, but a word to the wise seems in order: better quit goofing in those phys ed courses, or you'll find yourself on probation.

NEXT, A BIT OF TRIVIA: We got a kick out of hearing another coed relate how embarrassed her mother was when the daughter discovered she (the mother) had been reading Peyton Place on the sly. This seems to be an example of child psychology with a reverse twist. . . . And still talking about girls (as Ol' Placer Miner mixes business with pleasure)—we never cease to be amused at the pertinacity with which LBSC coeds pursue a man. They go steady, they become pinned, they become engaged—and there is quite a degree of difference in each status. Last week, however, we came across a girl who didn't fit any category we had yet heard of: this one is "kinda engaged." . . . And one last space filler: seen in the cafeteria last Wednesday noon was a Forty-Niner dining on raw coconut and a bouquet of parsley. He banged the coconut against the wall to split it, drank the juice, and shared the meat with his buddies. What remained of the parsley at the end of the meal was placed in a bowl of water and doubtless served as a centerpiece for the next day's meal.

AND FINALLY, a little bit on group activities. Next Thursday noon the College Religious Council presents another in its "This I Believe" series wherein members of the LBSC faculty speak on their personal beliefs and philosophies. Thursday's speaker will be Dr. Henry Zentner with the subject, "A Sociologist Looks at Religion." The place: Classroom 139; the time: 12 noon; the date: Feb. 27.

A few hours later at 3 p. m. in lecture hall 100 nearby, the LBSC Association of Childhood Education Jr., presents Mrs. Irene Schoepfle, consultant in music education, Orange County Schools.

Mrs. Schoepfle will bring children with her to take part in a demonstration which also will involve the audience.

Marlene Young, ACE Jr. prexy, extends a cordial invitation to all students to attend the Thursday meeting. She says it should be of special interest to music majors, student teachers, and prospective teachers of music in elementary schools.

FRIDAY NIGHT Sigma Chi Nu, nurses' group at State, holds its monthly meeting at 8:30 p. m. in the Soroptimist House.

Feature of the evening's program will be an address by Dr. Jack Lieberman, M. D., resident physician at Harbor General Hospital and an expert on cardiac research.

Dr. Lieberman will speak on "Cystic Fibrosis," and he will have a film to illustrate his lecture.

Mrs. Prisca Nelson, Sigma Chi Nu program and social chairman, invites all members and nurses, both on and off campus, to attend.

A short business meeting for SCN members is set for 7:30 prior to the main business of the evening, and refreshments will be served.

Demo Women Slate Meeting

North Long Beach Democratic Women's Study Club will hear Darrell Neighbors discuss the problem of subsidence when they meet Wednesday at 10 a. m. in Houghton Park Clubhouse.

The executive board will host a coffee hour at 9:30 a. m. and invites all members to bring a guest to the meeting. Mrs. Nelson Torpey will preside.

Writers Club to Hear Poet

Frona Lane, president of the California Federation of Chaparral Poets, will speak before Long Beach Writers Club at its all day monthly meeting to be conducted Thursday at Morgan Hall, 835 Locust Ave. Mrs. Don Billings will preside and Mrs. Helen Vind Ervin will present the speaker.

Miss Lane, a teacher of poetry and English in the Los Angeles schools, is the author of several books of poetry and has written for many national magazines and various newspapers. A former pupil of Josephine Dillon she has also been a script writer, drama coach, and radio artist.

Readings during the prose session will be given by Mmes. Alma Elliott, Helen Gillum and Lorena Fleissig. The poetry session will be conducted by Miss Olive Breed.

James Brittain

Lauris Jones

'Kiss Me Kate' Adds Two in Directing Posts

James Brittain, a new name to Long Beach dramatic circles, and Lauris Jones, a familiar name to Long Beach, have assumed directorial responsibilities which will result in April in a scintillating production of Cole Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate." The Singers Workshop show will be given April 11-12, 18-19 at Long Beach City College auditorium.

Brittain succeeds Dr. Gerald Daniel, LBCC faculty member who was forced to resign director's duties due to a heavy schedule of educational commitments.

Jones, conductor of the Long Beach Symphony orchestra, will direct the music for the production.

* * * *

OPINION AROUND the MGM lot in Culver City is that Brittain is one of the most outstanding young men now being groomed to become a director and producer. A resident of Manhattan Beach, he has an impressive list of credits that belie his 33 years. His theatrical work in Santa Monica and the South Bay area have earned him superlatives of Los Angeles newspaper critics.

His musical career began at Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham, Ala., where he was associated with the college theater, the Birmingham Conservatory of Music and the Starlight Opera Assn. Coming to California more than 10 years ago, he studied motion picture art direction at Art Center and the California School of Art, and found time to be one of the founders of the South Bay Light Opera Assn. For the past five years he has been an assistant producer at MGM.

Jones has already received musical recognition in Long Beach, having come here several years ago to conduct the Long Beach Symphony. Recently he led the orchestra in two youth concerts here sponsored by the Junior League.

He came to Long Beach from a post as assistant conductor of the Pasadena Symphony Assn. He has studied under Eugene Ormandy, George Szell and Richard Lert.

Youth Band

Boy and girl musicians between the ages of 9 and 18 are beng invited to join the Orange County Youth Band which has been organized by Vesey Walker, bandmaster of the Disneyland Band. Rehearsals take place each Monday at 7 p.m. in the Boy Scout-Optimist Clubhouse, 113 W. Chartres, Anaheim.

Art Music Little Theater

Major & Minor Notes

By RACHEL MORTON

There are three outstanding choral conductors in our country today: Fred Waring, Robert Shaw and Roger Wagner and I consider Roger Wagner the greatest of them all. He was the only one from America invited to participate in the Coronation festivities in England a few years ago when Queen Elizabeth was crowned.

Last December I heard his smaller group of 28 singers give a magnificent concert in the Philharmonic Auditorium in Los Angeles and recently I heard his choir of 100 voices sing in a performance of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven with electrifying effect. But I never met Roger Wagner until he came to Long Beach a few weeks ago to give a preview talk on a Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra program.

The vitality of the man, his sincerity, his broad knowledge of music, and his fascinating personality intrigued me. So I was very flattered when he invited me to have lunch with him at the Brown Derby in Hollywood to discuss things musical. Later we went to his home.

Roger Wagner and his charming wife have been married 18 years and are the parents of three children; a boy 13, a girl 17 and another daughter 12. They are all gifted musically, but so far not too seriously. They live in a charming house in Hollywood, and under the fine Steinway grand piano lay the pet of the household, a dog named Rusty.

* * * *

ROGER WAGNER is a human dynamo. He had had four hours sleep in two days. At the end of the week he was leaving for a cross-country tour with his smaller group of singers. They will give 50 concerts in 60 days. They travel in a private bus and give concerts every night. And just for good measure, Mr. Wagner was flying to Dallas, Texas, to conduct 1200 voices in a mammoth concert, before starting on the tour!

This man is burning up with a great zeal and love for music. "I want to make Americans music-conscious. Culture is a way of life and we in America do not have that way of life. Our way of life is business, money, automobiles, luxuries. We do not hunger for the cultural things of the spirit," Mr. Wagner said. And he knows whereof he speaks.

* * * *

BORN IN France, of a French mother and a father whose family came from Alsace-Lorraine, he came to California as a young boy. But at the age of 17 he went back to France and finished his education at the Sorbonne, meanwhile studying organ with the great French organist, Marcel Dupre.

His ambition was to become a great organist and I think if you would hear him any Sunday at the console of the organ of St. Joseph's or St. Paul's Churches in Los Angeles, you would know he had achieved that ambition.

His father was an organist and Roger sang as a boy soprano. So it all added up when he returned to this country and took over the training of a boys' choir while organist at St. Joseph's Church. So well did he train them that he was asked to present 250 boys on the steps of City Hall in Los Angeles in a program of church music. From this success came his appointment as head of the Los Angeles Bureau of Music, a post he kept for seven years.

* * * *

BUT HE needed wider fields of achievement so he formed "The Roger Wagner Chorale" which has become world famous. He plays on this body of singers as though it were an instrument and no symphony orchestra has more nuance, color or variety of mood. It is really breathtaking to hear them sing.

He spoke affectionately of one of our own Long Beach singers, Marilyn Horne, who started singing with him when she was only 12 years old. Her beautiful voice has carried her to Germany where Mr. Wagner saw her last October.

Roger Wagner demands perfection — and gets it! Often the singers make recordings until 4 o'clock in the morning—going over and over the music until the results are satisfactory. There are 15 recordings already in circulation and seven more are being made.

Mr. Wagner has the honor of being one of the guest conductors of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra next year. If he sometimes seems a severe task master, his warm heart rewards lovingly all the effort made. Because his ideals are so high, the fruits of his labor are grandiose.

Fernandel in Friday Film

"The Sheep Has Five Legs," starring famed French comedian Fernandel, is the ninth of the series of Friday Evening Films to be shown Friday at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Two presentations will be made, starting at 7:40 and 9 p.m. respectively.

The story is a delightful tour-de-force concerning the life of an old French vintner and his quintuplet sons. Fernandel, who assumes a half a dozen roles, is supported by French actors Delmont Defunes, Polette Dubost, Rene Genin and many others.

Tickets, issued on a first-come, first-served basis, are available now at the Museum. There is no charge for admission.

Opera at Home

Complete operas and recitals by opera singers bring hours of musical enjoyment on records. The Long Beach Public Library suggests that these new lps be borrowed from the Main Library for home listening: "Kirsten Flagstad in a Bach and Handel Recital"; "Renata Tebaldi in a Recital of Songs and Arias"; "Tito Gobbi at La Scala"; "Zinka Milanov in Songs of the Ukraine," and Von Karajan conducting one of the best opera recordings of 1957, "Der Rosenkavalier" by Richard Strauss.

The Theatre Yearly Award Dinner Slated

Second annual awards dinner of The Theater, will take place Wednesday, March 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cavalier Room of the Lafayette Hotel.

Climax of the evening will take place with announcement of awards to those unsung "backstagers" who have outstandingly conducted their time and efforts to the little theater group. Recognition will also be paid to outstanding actors and actresses. Voting will take place during the dinner.

Co-chairmen of the dinner function are Mrs. Harry Finer, 2518 Ostrom Ave., and Mrs. Clifford Medaugh, 743 Ohio Ave. Reservations should be made by March 3. Anyone interested in theater is invited to attend.

Play Opens

"The Cowbird in the $200 Suit," a new play by Russell Burton, opened last week at the Stage Society Theater, 9014 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles.

South Gate Concert

South Gate Concert Orchestra will be heard today at 4 o'clock at South Gate Municipal Auditorium, 4900 Southern Ave. Arthur Babich will be guest conductor and Carla Wittel will be solo pianist.

Something for the Boys

Style Has Arrived in Factory at Last

By TED KREC

The idea for this column was handed to me one night last week when Ol' Ted was asked to commentate a fashion show out at St. Cornelius Church, 3330 Bellflower Blvd.

The show was being staged by Penney's Downtown, 5th St. and Pine Ave., and the first person I saw when I entered the hall was my old friend, portly Jack Greenen, fashion coordinator for Penney's.

"Jack!" I cried, "How nice to see you again!"

"Hello, loudmouth," he growled, "what are YOU doing here?"

"I'm commentating the show tonight," I replied meekly.

"Now I've heard everything—a fat ex-hog caller from New Jersey doing commentary on a fashion show," he grumbled, and for a terrible moment I thought he was going to pack up and go home. However, the show must go on, so Jack stuck with it.

"You know what's the matter with your column?" he said. "All you ever write about is the white-collar man. How about the factory worker — his styles have changed, too. We sell a lot of work clothes at Penney's and you can't tell them from California campus casuals any more."

• • • •

AND HE'S right. There are several reasons for this. First, the vast majority of manufacturing and assembly-line jobs in American factories today are clean jobs, for engineers discovered long ago that a clean plant with good air and lighting is a more efficient one. Second, many grimy jobs have been taken over by machines manipulated from a clean control room or panel. Third, World War II brought many women into the factories, working side by side with the men. Naturally, the boys are going to be neater to please "Rosie, the riveter."

Last but by no means least, men are becoming more aware of dressing right for whatever they're doing. Not always in the best taste, but at least a bit more appropriately.

Add to all this the fact that American workers are the best paid in the world, and you'll see why fashion is moving in on the assembly line.

Work clothes today are a far cry from the selection available when I was a lad on the assembly line. Yes, indeed, Ol' Ted knows what the inside of a factory looks like.

• • • •

ONE PLACE I worked had a terrible time with crane operators. These fellows sat on a metal seat and they had to keep putting new men on the job because the older employes' pants would get so slick, stiff and shiny that the men would keep falling off the seat!

Work clothes today are a combination of the good looks and comfort of sportswear and the rugged fabrics and construction of work garb. Many of the shirts are Ivy style; the trousers are of colorful denim, twill or corduroy. Coats are of whipcord and similar materials.

And you see a lot of men with neckties in factories today; that is, on jobs where it's safe to wear neckties. All in all, the apparel of the workmen has brightened to keep pace with brighter plants.

Julian C. Davis

Chef of the Week

Hoosier No Meat, Potato Man; Fixes Tchakhokbelli

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor.

He's not the athletic type, preferring the role of spectator to participant. Chef of the Week Julian C. Davis prefers old things. He has spent days browsing and exploring nooks and crannies of the old west and mother lode country. Mainly, however, he's manager of the claims and insurance department at Bethlehem Pacific Coast Steel Corp., having joined that company in 1941.

A Hoosier, he was born in Indianapolis. Contrary to precedent, though, he's not a joiner. He attended DePauw University at Greencastle, Ind., pledging Beta Theta Pi.

Before coming to the west coast at the urging of his uncle, Senator Davis of Washington, he had seen much of the country. After extolling the virtues of Florida real estate for a time, he joined the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad as, of all things, the cook.

* * * *

ABOUT THE time he had finally decided that the northwest left him kinda-cold," a fraternity brother sold him on coming to Southern California. He did—he warmed-up—and stayed.

Probably one of the most interesting phases of Davis' career took place in San Francisco when he set-up county procedures for concessionaires at the Golden Gate International Worlds Fair. Not only did he make friends from all parts of the world, he was given mementos from their countries.

Immediate past president of the University Club, he has served on its board of directors five out of the club's nine years. He also holds memberships in the California Self Insurers Assn., and the Casualty Claims Assn. of California. The Beta Theta Pi Alumni addresses him as "Mr. President."

* * * *

VERY EASY going, nice to be around, pleasant, and a wonderful friend . . . to quote his friends . . . he not only dotes on his own little grandson, but on the neighborhood young'uns, as well. From his workshop he has turned out some "quite presentable" productions, and he's equally adept at wood finishing and furniture repair.

Each weekend he goes completely domestic. Loves to do the washing; but he can't iron and simply won't be taught. As for his recipe, he can pronounce it and prepare it, as well. Which is more than this writer can do!

CHICKEN TCHAKHOKBELLI

2 2-lb. chickens (halve each chicken)
½ cup butter
1 onion sliced
⅓ cup Sherry wine
½ cup tomato juice
1 cup water
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper

Melt butter and fry chicken until light brown. Remove chicken to a baking pan. Fry onion in remaining butter until limp and golden — then pour over chicken. Add remaining ingredients. Bake uncovered in hot oven (400 degrees) for one hour . . . turn at end of first half hour. The juice makes delicious gravy. Good with brown or wild rice.

Oswald Jacoby

Junior Player Brings in Slam

EDDIE TAYLOR of Los Angeles, the supposed junior member of the Mathe-Taylor combination that won the open pairs this year, is quite able to hold up his half of the partnership.

In today's hand he took advantage of the information given by a vulnerable overall to wrap up a nice slam contract.

Against a club or heart opening Eddie would have had to go down but no one can criticize West's lead of the diamond nine. Dummy played the jack, East - the queen and Ed won with the king. Two trump leads left him in dummy and he led the deuce of diamonds and finessed the eight. That finesse was marked, of course.

The jack of hearts was discarded on the ace of diamonds and the last diamond ruffed in dummy.

Now Ed played the king of hearts from dummy and East was in and dead. He had to lead from his king of clubs or give Ed a ruff and discard.

All credit must go to Ed for his fine play but I must give East a black mark. East might well have pulled himself together and doubled the slam bid.

In that spot the double would definitely ask his partner not to open a diamond and preferably to lead a club (the suit bid by dummy). With either a club or heart lead Ed would have had no play for his contract.

OUR COVER

The attractive cover girl is Gwen Hess who goes modern with "pink beige" hair (that's beige with a pinkish cast). Moreover, she is wearing the latest rage in hairdos —the chemise—with "rag doll" bangs. Gwen, her pinkish hair and her smart hairdo all will be prominent when the Long Beach Hairdressers Guild presents its big annual show for hairdressers and cosmotologists of the western states today and Monday in the Lafayette Hotel. As for Gwen: she won national skating honors in 1953, 1954 and 1955, and last year was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School. Now 18, she models and attends beauty college. And why not?

NEXT WEEK

Soundly thrashed in the Davis Cup finals for several years running, America is pinning her hopes for recovery and retention of the cup on its youngsters. If two Long Beach teeners continue to improve as they have during the past year, it's entirely possible that one of them will one day be considered for the Junior Davis team and the other for the women's Wightman team. Tedd Thomey tells you about their talents next week in an engaging story titled "Long Beach's Two Tennis Tigers."

Dragster roars out for a run on the quarter-mile blacktop strip of Lions Associated. Quarter-midget auto races also will be run off there today.

Two-Ring Circus on Wheels

By Barney Newfield

IF YOU happen to be cruising your family "ominous-bus" around 223rd St. near Alameda Ave., between noon and dusk today and run into the LADS, you'll realize the title of this piece could be somewhat misleading.

LADS of the Lions has naught whatsoever to do with lion cubs.

This afternoon the LADS of the Lions presents, as climax of a two-day affair, an event which is the culmination of two years of planning and, really, two events in one:

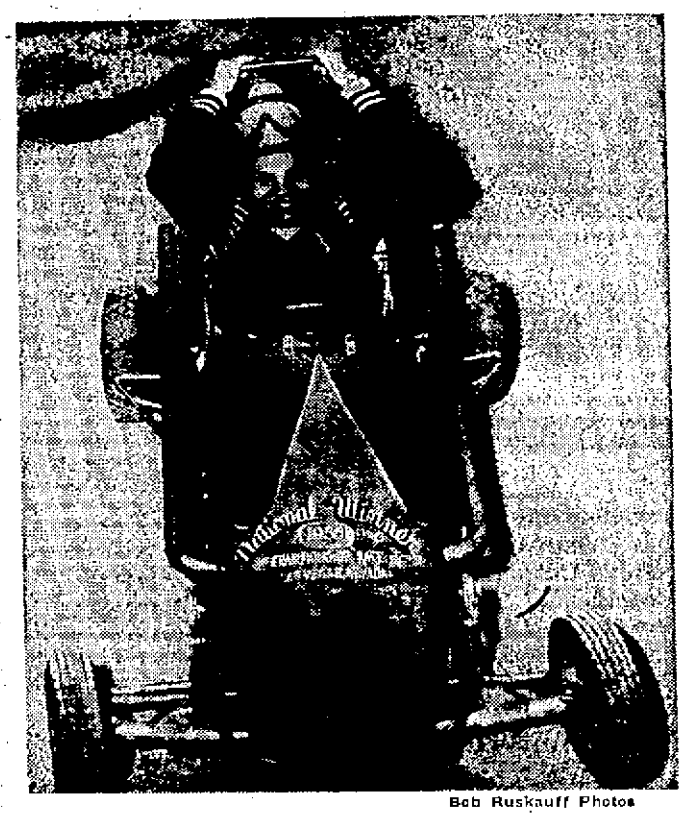

(1) Finals of the first annual Two-Way Record Runs Drag Meet and (2), on a brand-new 1/20th-mile oval, banked course, the first of the official 1958 Quarter-Midget National Circuit Championships with some 50 youngsters competing.

Regular two-ring circus, as it has been billed.

SO THEN, LADS is nothing less than Lions Associated Drag Strip. But it is more. In its own way, LADS is a continuing saga of community achievement.

About four years ago, when the "hot-rodders-for-hell" epidemic was creating headlines

100 Billion Stars

By Clarence Bernard Propes

"IF YOU WANT to get rich," said an amateur astronomer, "find a simple way to make a good telescope mirror. Load a warehouse and then wait for man to hit the moon. It will be Christmas every day."

Tom Cave, owner of an optical company at 4137 E. Anaheim St., is reconciled to an empty warehouse because, as a manufacturer of astronomical mirrors, he knows it is extremely unlikely that anyone is likely to find a fast way to polish mirrors to the 20-millionth of an inch he requires.

Mention of a Cave reflector and telescope to an amateur astronomer is like mentioning Mansfield's bust measurement to a feature editor. Eyes glaze and they speak in hushed tones. This respect extends to professional astronomers as well. The eminent star-gazer, Dr. Dinsmore Alter, head of Griffith Observatory on Mt. Wilson, is as enthusiastic as the rankest amateur.

"He probably makes the best amateur instrument in the country. I always recommend him," said Dr. Alter.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS and professional as well as amateur astronomers use Cave telescopes. Cave's work has gone to every continent except Europe and it isn't unlikely that he will soon have customers there since his prestige is growing.

An astronomical telescope is essentially a pipe with a concave mirror in its base. An eyepiece allows the observer to peer at the image in the mirror.

The mirror is the heart of the telescope. Its precise shape gathers and concentrates the light, and the smallest variation is likely to throw the image of a star a few million miles out of position.

THE PRELIMINARY grinding gives a finish that would delight a diamond cutter but it is too crude to the astronomer. The mirror then requires the final polishing—the most important and exacting step of the whole process.

"IT TAKES TALENT as well as a rare skill," said Cave. "I could probably make a production line of the preliminary grinding but not the final finishing.

Chief Optician Alika Herring, of South Gate, has the job of bringing the surface as close to perfection as possible.

Said Herring, "Sometimes I can do a mirror in an hour or it may take all day. There is no way to tell."

His tools are simple but the work is time-consuming and precise.

Cave, who lives at 3764 Charlemagne Ave., has had a lifelong interest in astronomy and astronomical telescopes. Five years ago he decided he could build a fine telescope for less than other makers were charging. He has succeeded in about halving the price and still make a respectable profit. Today he has a force of four technicians and orders waiting to be filled.

HE PRODUCES ABOUT 18 telescopes a month. They have 6 to 12-inch mirrors. Part of his work is refinishing do-it-yourself mirrors. They are from some of the world's 200,000 or 300,000 amateur astronomers. Many of them have made their own reflectors. According to Cave, about 2 per cent of these mirrors are excellent, while the others are of dubious value. He can speak with authority for he receives do-it-yourself reflectors from all over the world.

A man of infinite accuracy in speech as well as work, Cave cautiously admits that rockets and satellites might be influencing the astronomical telescope business. He prefers to think of astronomy as a slowly developing interest.

OTHER ASTRONOMERS DISAGREE. Said one: "Once a person starts taking thoughtful looks at the heavens, he's hooked."

He explained that there are at least 100 billion stars in our own galaxy which is a mere dust mote in space. So vast is this space that it is measured in light years or the distance light travels in one year at the rate of 186 thousand miles a second.

"Look up at a star," said the astronomer. "It is very likely you are looking at something that happened a few hundred or even thousand years ago. Star gazing is always new and it can make a philosopher out of anybody."

"I didn't get in this business to get rich," said Cave. "I'm doing exactly the work I want to do."

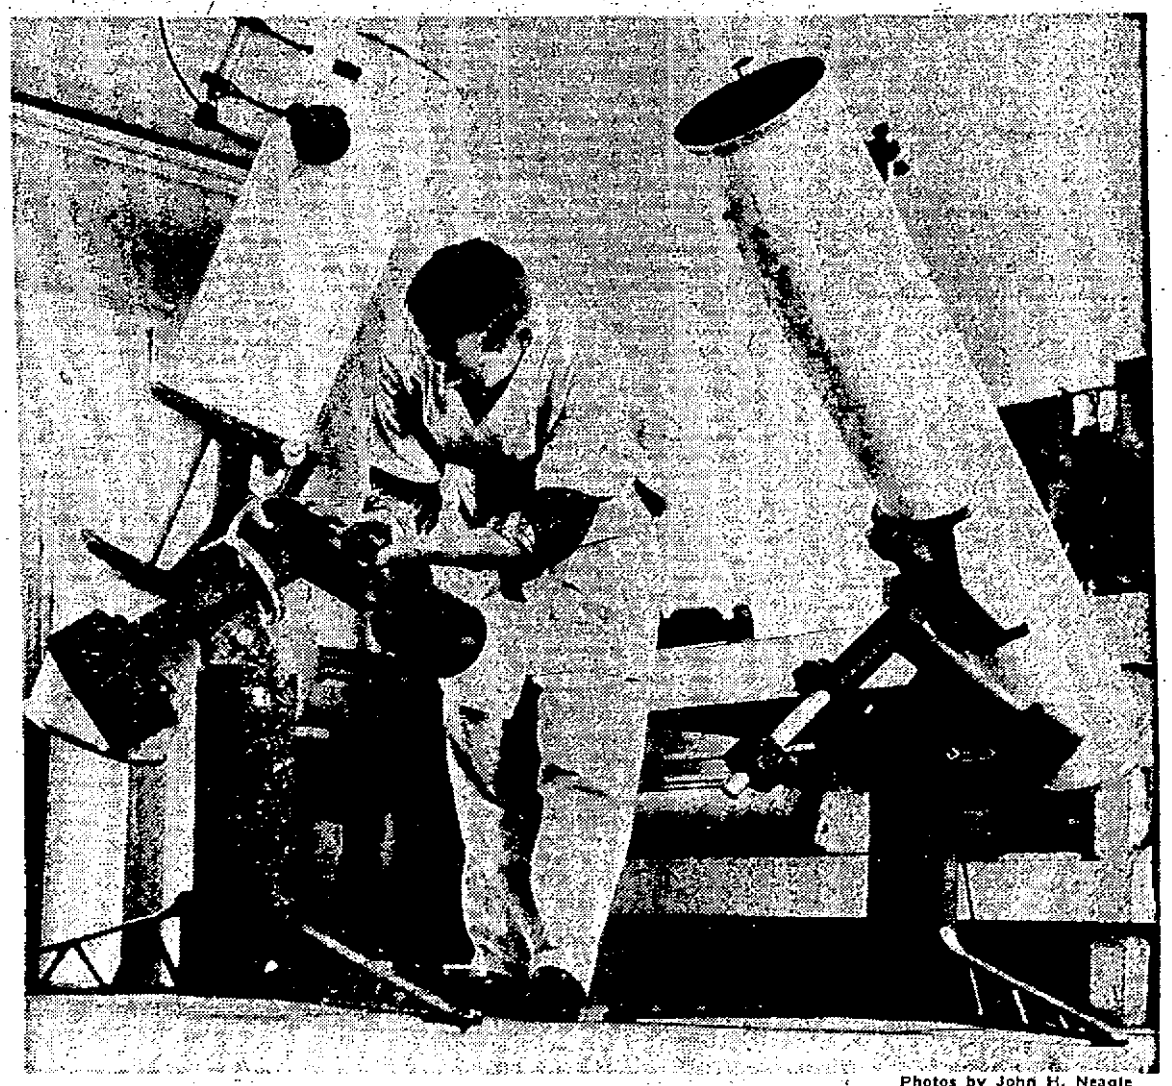

There is little more a man can ask for in the heavens or on this earth.

Tom Cave, owner of a Long Beach optical company, checks out a telescope mirror.

Alika Herring, astronomical precision optician, holds 12½-inch parabolic mirror.

Finished telescope requires careful assembling. Henry Sayres, an assembler in the Long Beach shop, goes over one of the Cave instruments, making final adjustments.

"Monkey see, monkey do," they say, and "Sugar," trained chimpanzee of Gene Holter menagerie, apes (no pun intended) director—cigar and all—on visit to movie lot.

Sired by a zebra and born of an Abyssinian donkey, this chap is called "zonkey."

Norco's Unique Menagerie

By Aubrey B. Haines

MOTORISTS who pass Western Ave. ranches near Norco take for granted the white board houses, rail fences, tractors, irrigation standpipes, and chickens in the barnyard. But when, approaching Second St., they come upon a pasture of ostriches, see a five-ton elephant swaying in front of the garden gate, llamas' and zebras' stamping about corrals, and four camels' grazing in the field, they stop for a long look. The unique ranch is winter headquarters of the Gene Holter Wild Animal Show.

From December to March the animals are taught new acts at Norco, located a few miles north of Corona in Riverside County, by Ray Chandler, foreman of the ranch, Holter, and several other trainers. The rest of the year they are on the road, playing to enthusiastic crowds at fairs, carnivals, schools, and shopping centers from coast to coast.

Norco citizens know about the ranch, but nonresident motorists are startled to meet Babe, the 73-year-old, 9,700-pound performing elephant, shuffling along the road in her daily workout. Of all the animals in the menagerie Chandler likes elephants best. "If they could talk, they'd be just like humans, understanding everything you say," he claims.

CHANDLER'S WIFE, Thelma, and two children, Charles, 17, and Janice, 3, are as easy with the animals as most families are with their household pets. Mrs. Chandler used to perform in the elephant act, lying in the sawdust while Babe would gently touch her face with her foot, about the circumference of a barrel. To prove that an elephant never forgets, when Mrs. Chandler comes near Babe nowadays, the huge animal reaches out an affectionate trunk. Walking up to Rock 'n' Roll, the baby year-old, 600-pound elephant, Mrs. Chandler observes that the animal wiggles like an enthusiastic puppy.

"An elephant's loyalty can outdo even a dog's," Ray asserts. "When we played a fair at Raleigh, N. C., I asked to be notified 10 minutes before fireworks were lighted. However, no notice came, and all of a sudden a number of Roman candles shot off in front of the grandstand. Frantic, Babe could not be controlled. Knocking me down in an effort to get away, she began to run but suddenly observed that she had hurt me. My hip was broken, and I couldn't get up. So she came back and stood over me to protect me. Though the fireworks still flared, she had found a greater loyalty than to protect herself."

CHANDLER FINDS that camels are the least likable of animals. "If an atom bomb wiped out everything on earth except camels, these animals wouldn't even miss people," he says.

Most challenging to train are ostriches. "Belligerent birds without too many brains," Ray says, "they're

Two cantankerous camels come down to the wire in a race that delighted the spectators.

Big Babe, the elephant, reenacts scene from movie, "The Greatest Show on Earth."

NEWEST HAIRDO?

It's the Chemise

By Vera Williams

CHEMISE . . . Chemise . . . and more Chemise is the word in the Grand Ballroom at Lafayette Hotel where today and Monday the Long Beach Hairdressers Guild (hairdressers for the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant) will be hosts to hairdressers and cosmetologists of the Western states.

The 15th annual Beauty and Trade Show, always one of the outstanding Spring beauty events of the nation, will focus attention on the new Chemise hair style.

What is the chemise hair style?

It is a modern and softer version of the "windblown" hair style of the 1920's, designed to be worn with the Chemise dress, which in turn is a modification of the "tube" dress of the 1920's.

The Chemise hair style has infinite variations—as many variations as there are faces and hairdressers. But it is marked by a gay, carefree quality. Hair is short, with lots of waves and fluffy, wispy bangs.

Hair styles shown on these pages will be favorites at the Beauty and Trade Show.

The public will be admitted to the show from 1 to 10 p. m. both days.

Chemise hairdos shown by (l. to r.) Pat Pursley, with "fire silver" hair—silver with red shades—worn in "High Fashion Chemise" formal style; Beverly Noh, white blonde "Page Chemise" style; and June Denman, beige blonde "Bouffant-Chemise."

Bobbie Becker (l.) shows "Modern Windblown" styling with wispy bangs. Gwen Hess has a "Chemise" style of hairdress with "rag doll" bangs.

June Denman smiles at herself in the mirror. She is a beige blonde, and her hair is a combination styling of "Bouffant' and "Chemise."

Rising star, Eiko Ando, poses with John Wayne during filming of "The Barbarian and the Geisha" in Japan.

HOLLYWOOD

She Had to Learn to Be Japanese!

By David Lancashire
Associated Press Writer

AT 19 EIKO ANDO was a Japanese burlesque queen.

At 23 she's playing opposite John Wayne in a movie directed by John Huston—and taking lessons in how to be Japanese. The picture is being made in Kyoto, Japan.

"I am not a very typical Japanese girl," she says.

She's 5 feet 7 inches tall, which is a head higher than most Japanese women. She has an un-Japanese 36-23-38 figure. And her voice is pitched an octave below that of the average Japanese girl.

Then there's the language. Born in Manchuria, she spoke English, Russian and Chinese until the family returned to Japan when she was 14.

"I'm taking lessons in everything," she admits.

In 20th Century-Fox's "The Barbarian and the Geisha," Eiko plays Okichi, legendary geisha sweetheart of Townsend Harris, America's pioneer diplomat to Japan in the 1850s.

FOR THE PART she must learn how to walk, sit, smile, play a samisen (Japanese guitar) and even how to pour a drink.

These are easy for a geisha trained from girlhood in the traditional intricacies of being a geisha. But it's difficult for a foreign-born Japanese like Eiko who studied concert singing and wound up as "Tokyo Venus" in Japan's largest burlesque house.

The demure, soft-eyed girl takes her new job seriously. "I go to bed by 9 or 10 every night and I get up about 6 every morning," she says in perfect English.

Last month the steady, painstaking work under lights proved so rugged her doctor ordered her off the set, with eyestrain, for days.

EIKO WAS CHOSEN from 184 girls by director Huston, who put Marilyn Monroe in pictures with "The Asphalt Jungle."

Huston sidesteps answering whether Eiko might become another Marilyn Monroe, saying "I am not a star maker." However, the veteran director adds ". . . Miss Monroe was actually more inexperienced. . . . Miss Ando has the character of a star . . . Miss Ando is doing her part and what we ask her to do just as well as Marilyn did hers."

Says Eiko: "I am very lucky to get the part. It is a big job, a big responsibility being with John Wayne. He is the biggest star perhaps in the whole world."

ON THE SET Huston directs her every motion with tireless patience. Eiko, clearing up misunderstandings through interpreters, responds over and over again without getting rattled.

"I don't get tired, or 'fed up' as you say. I am doing my job," she smiles.

But she says:

"I never thought about the movies. I wanted to be a singer, and I am too tall for Japanese movies."

Her dimensions stood her in good stead four years ago. They got her a job in the "Nichigeki Nude Follies," where the girls dance bare from the waist up. As "Tokyo Venus," Eiko wore spangles and specialized in still tableaux.

"I went there as a singer, and for awhile I did sing," she recalls. "But I was so young, and those managers, they were so smart, and soon I had no clothes on.

"I wanted to be independent," she goes on, wrapping her fur coat tighter around her, "and I didn't think very much when I signed the contract." It lasted 18 months.

EIKO QUIT the show in 1956 and studied voice in Europe until her mother became ill. She returned and continued studying until she was introduced to director Huston and producer Eugene Frenke last fall in Tokyo. She signed a three-year contract with Fox and is now on location here.

Would she take her clothes off for American movies if Hollywood demanded it?

"Only to a certain extent," she says, blushing, and for the first time answering through an interpreter.

THE JAPANESE GIRL, on whose performance much of the picture's impact is based, will go to Hollywood with the crew when the Cinemascope production is through filming. There she'll do the background narration which will carry over the Japanese dialogue and fill in the gaps for American audiences.

"But I don't know anything about my future," she says.

Eiko lives in Tokyo with her mother, in a western-styled home, and dresses and acts like a western woman.

"Wearing a kimono is new to me, too. I dressed in one when I was a little girl, but now I need someone to help me put it on," she admits. Fox costumers padded out the waist of the kimono where Eiko's willowy figure gave it a tapered, un-Japanese effect.

"I have no boy friends," she says, "but some men in Tokyo say they are. Don't you believe them."

LA REINA RULE

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

DEAR MISS RULE: We shall appreciate your analysis of the name HAWLEY.—E. P., Long Beach.

E.P.: The HAWLEY family secured their surname identification from a place in Kent, England, called "Haga-Ley" meaning "hedged pasture." The Hawley family are known to have lived in Dartmouth, Devonshire, in 1408 according to records. Their coat-of-arms, granted in 1577, has a silver cross on a green shield. Joseph Hawley of Derbyshire, England, migrated to Stratford, Conn., in the mid-1600's and is believed to be the first of the family in this country.

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like a brief genealogy of WADE and WAIGHT—J.W., E.D.W., Long Beach.

J.W., E.D.W.: WADE may be either Irish or English. Waight is a variation of the English spelling of Wade. The Irish clan-name MacUaid, meaning "descendants of Walter" (Walter denoted "ruler of the host"), was altered to McWade. The family originated in Monaghan, north of Dublin. In England the Wades are surnamed from either a location description "Waythe" meaning a river-crossing, or from the occupation "Weight" describing a watchman. John Atte (at the) Waythe lived in Yorkshire in 1379. One of the Wade coats-of-arms has two red gillyflowers on a gold diagonal stripe across a blue shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give information on OLSON and OLSEN.—D.C.O., Long Beach; R. O., Garden Grove.

D.O., R. O.: The Norwegian, Swedish and Danish surnames OLSON and Olsen are from "Olaf's son." Olaf was the primary Scandinavian spelling of Oliver meaning "peaceful one." Olaf was used in memory of the famous Saint Olaf, Viking king of Norway (A.D. 995-1030). The Danish Olsen family coat-of-arms has a tree stump in natural coloring on a silver shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the genealogy on WEBER. —Mrs. J.W., E.M., D.W., Long Beach; Mrs. C.D., Westminster.

The German word "weber" gave the family progenitor his distinguished occupational surname. WEBER meaning "the weaver" was first introduced to identify an honored artisan who wove woolen material on great looms in the Middle Ages. He was responsible for the beautiful brocaded fabrics worn by the nobility. The Weber coat-of-arms, granted in Prussia, has two diagonal black stripes running from upper right to lower left across a silver shield. In America the German spelling Weber has been changed by some families to Webber and also translated to Weaver. The most famous member of the family was Baron Karl Maria Von Weber (1786-1826), famous musical composer.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like your analysis of FARRISH and FARIS. Mrs. L.K., T.F., Long Beach.

Mrs. L.K., T.F.: FARRISH and FARIS have many sources in the British Isles. One is a spelling change of the Irish "Ferris," from the Celtic name Feoras. Feoras was the early Irish style of Peter meaning "the rock." Farrish and Faris are also nicknames shortened from the Saxon-English "Faramund" meaning "the traveler." Another origin for the surnames is the French "Ferrers" (place of the iron mines). One of the coats-of-arms for these families has pieces of red and gold fur covering a blue-bordered shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: May I have information on the name FLUTKA.—Mrs. C.E., Long Beach.

Mrs. C.E.: The German surname FLUTKA incorporates and illustrates your ancestor's responsible position, for "flutka" is formed from the occupational phrase "flut-graf" meaning "dike-steward" plus the Slavic suffix "ka" denoting a family of distinction. So far I have been unable to find a coat-of-arms for this lineage.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give the genealogy and coat-of-arms of HUNTER.—Mrs. Y., Long Beach; Mrs. A.H., Lakewood.

Y., A.H.: The medieval English term for a professional hunter of wild game was Huntere. This was the source of the surname Hunter. Adam Le Huntere is listed in the Close Rolls of King Henry III in 1268. The Hunter coat-of-arms has a red rampant lion on a shield gold.

Send your name to La Reina Rule, in care of Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6th and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., for the meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

Eight rooms, including four bedrooms, are designed into this Dutch-styled, colonial house, with shuttered windows, porch posts and window planters.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

Four-Level Split Goes Dutch

By John O. B. Wallace

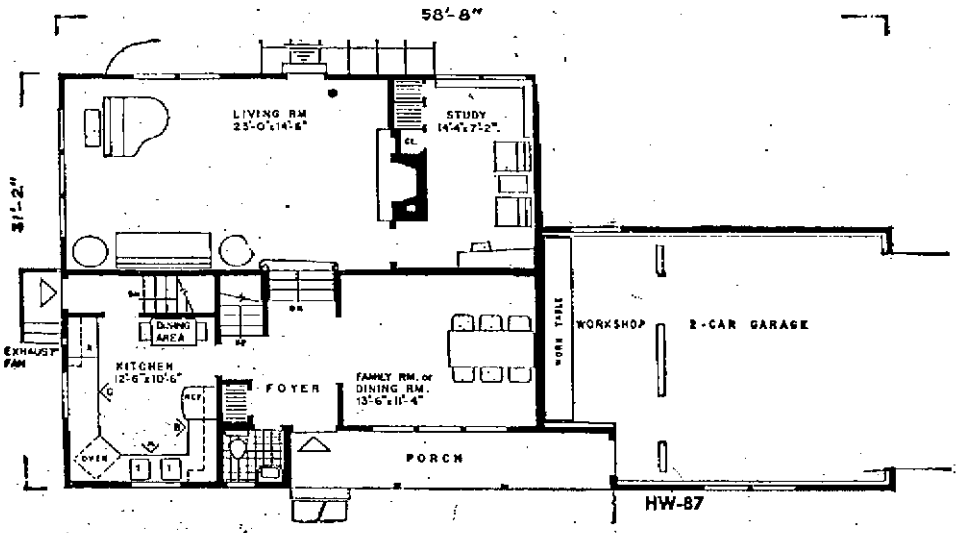

FOUR LEVELS—not just two—feature this unusual eight-room Dutch colonial. It is an example of what can be achieved through modern interpretation of the popular but slightly dated split-level design.

Arranged on four different levels, it has—in the words of the noted architect who created it—"all the dignity and charm of the two-story home and all the function of contemporary design."

It has been selected as another distinguished American design for the House of The Week series, and designated HW-87.

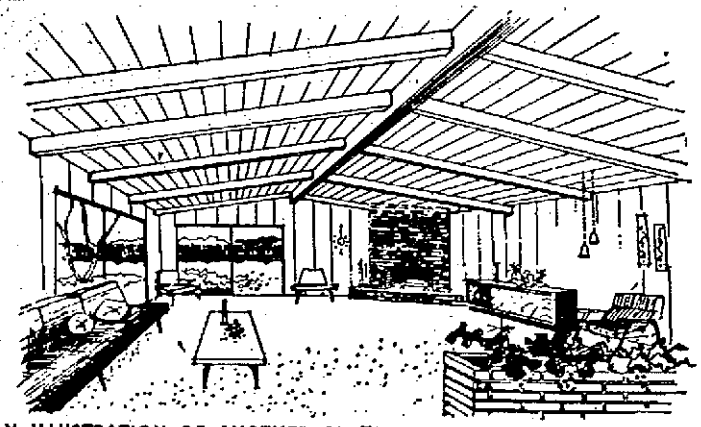

THERE IS NO better way to obtain a clear concept of the unique arrangements in this design than to take a quick look at each of the four different levels:

1. On the entrance level,

Four different levels are created in this unusual eight-room house, giving it two-story charm and the function of contemporary design.

This interior view shows the built-in cabinets in the master bedroom and special treatment of windows.

there are the kitchen with its separate dining area, the spacious foyer and the family room which optionally can become a formal dining room.

2. On the living room level, four steps below the entrance level, there are the huge, sunken living room (23 ft. by 14 ft. 6 inches) and the study with built-in shelving.

3. On the bedroom level over the living room, there are two bedrooms (14 ft. 6 inches by 14 ft., and 16 ft. by 8 ft. 2 inches) and a bath which opens into the bedroom hall.

4. On the bedroom level over the foyer and five steps higher than the other bedroom level, there are two more bedrooms—first, the guest bedroom, 11 ft. 4 inches by 8 ft. 2 inches, and the fourth bedroom, 12 ft. 8 inches by 11 ft. 4 inches, plus a second bath.

The upper levels provide 884 square feet and the lower levels 970 square feet of floor space.

Architect Samuel Paul, who executed this interesting and practical adaptation of the split-level design, has this to say of HW-87:

"The exterior exudes a spirit of hospitality and gracious living which is repeated in the interior. Shuttered windows and posts on the porch give this a touch of traditional charm, and modern practicality is added in the protective roofline leading from the entryway to the garage door.

"MANY SURPRISES are in store for the guests who come through the front Dutch door into the central hallway. The first sign of welcome is close at hand in the guest closet and powder room off the foyer. The next step might lead into the kitchen which has a three-fold functional value:

"1. It is large and permits freedom of movement.

"2. The excellent equipment adds to its efficiency.

"3. Its beauty makes it a pleasure to work in.

"If guests are escorted through the house, the first step would of course be the dramatic sunken living room, which is down five steps from the center hall. Impressive is the word for this room because a modern adaptation of the old colonial type stone fireplace recedes into one wall—and a second Dutch door leads down to an outdoor terrace. A door next to the fireplace leads into the private study."

The U-shaped kitchen is a stand-out feature. It has a double sink, counter-top range, dishwasher, built-in oven, double window exposure, and an abundance of wall cabinets. The cabinets are finished in natural woods and the counter tops are of heat-resistant plastic.

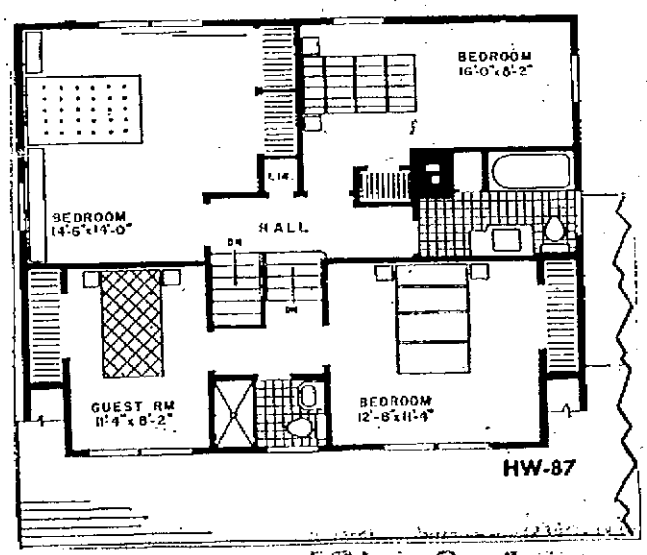

ONE CORNER of the kitchen is reserved for informal dining. Stairs to the basement are located just outside the kitchen proper and directly opposite a door which opens onto an outside service porch.

Other interior highlights include a hobby room, or workshop, within the garage area; there is direct access from the garage into the house by means of the covered front porch, and there is a lavatory just off the front entrance foyer.

There are extra-sized windows in the living room and the family-or-dining room. Windows throughout the house are double hung and there are planter boxes under the front windows at the extreme left and right.

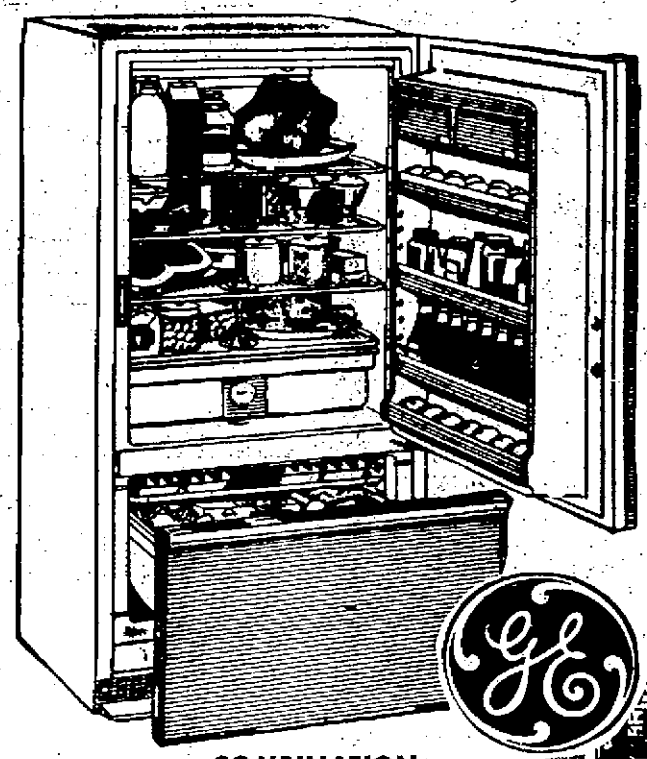

The exterior finish is of wood siding. Asphalt shingles are used on the roof. All walks are of flagstone. The covered front entrance porch and the rear terrace are of cement finish. A partial basement under the kitchen-family room area has sufficient space for storage and heating units. A 4 ft. 4 inch crawl space is under the living room-study area.

To obtain plans, address Building Editor, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6th & Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., enclose 35 cents and request House of the Week, Study Plan, Design HW 87.

Three bedrooms and a guest room are on the upper levels, which provide a total of 884 square feet.

A Rental Gets Its Face Lifted

Between kitchen and dining area is an open cupboard, which displays part of DeMaurer's antique dinnerware.

Upholstered hassocks and bolsters form sofa of Louis DeMaurer's apartment. Artist-decorator DeMaurer carved chest at right, did oils hanging on wall.

By Eileen Ball

ANYONE who thinks there is no individuality to be had in the typical rental need only consider Louis DeMaurer's attractive bachelor apartment at 1614 E. 1st St. to be convinced otherwise. Ingenuity in decor has transformed his simple quarters into a residence of unique and attractive distinction.

DeMaurer, a Long Beach artist and decorator, has allowed himself a free rein in the furnishing and decorating of his residence. A connoisseur of many periods and styles of furniture, he combines several in his own setting. A few antique French pieces are placed alongside more contemporary items, and the whole merges into a scheme of freshness and interest.

The apartment's living room, dining area and kitchen are essentially wide open to each other and the effect enhances the illusion of space.

NATURAL MUSLIN cafe curtains on heavy brass rings provide privacy and their style is congenial with the French and Italian provincial pieces that are among DeMaurer's furniture possessions.

Off-white plaster walls and an acoustic ceiling join the curtains in providing a neutral background for room accessories. A furniture grouping stands just inside the front door and before the window stands a French provincial table in polished cherrywood flanked by a pair of Italian antique provincial side chairs upholstered in blue-and-white toile fabric. This cotton print, patterned with Delft blue game birds and foliage, has been used in a way that the round upholstered backs of the chairs frame the blue-on-white pheasant prints.

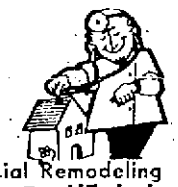

The living room rug was hand-hooked in Mexico. Its neutral off-white background is patterned with floral groups involving the same primary colors used throughout the apartment. Standing against the long inside living room wall is a sofa (actually two huge upholstered hassocks and bolsters in combination). The fabric used to cover these intricately button-tufted pieces is emerald green cotton figured with abstract charcoal and gold geometric motifs. All along the wall above hangs an assembly of DeMaurer's oils—abstract and impressionistic studies, many of which are familiar in Long Beach art circles. In several of them, a strong Van Gogh influence is felt.

Antique Italian chairs flank French provincial table of cherrywood in living room, just inside front door.

Dining area (left) has chandelier, marble console and antique candelabra. Bedroom has marble-papered dresser, sawed-off chairs done in pastels, gilt.

LIGHTING THIS art grouping is a tall lamp, the base of which is fashioned from a long-since depleted gallon bottle of cognac. A gold-and-cocoa striped shade makes a giddy topping for this base.

On the other side of the sofa stands a hand-carved chest of Spanish-colonial influence made by DeMaurer some years ago.

Across the room is a French provincial secretary—a diminutive fruitwood member with double brass-grilled doors. With this curved piece, DeMaurer teams a small antique mid-Victorian chair with spindle back and caned seat. Near the secretary hangs one of his more recent paintings — a composition of trees in tones of aqua, greens and olives.

Furnishing the corner of the room is a third bolster-and-hassock combination matching the sofa duo. Over this is displayed still another painting—a rooster in vital colors, its mood emulating the style of the French impressionistic school. Its deep, fruitwood frame compliments the French provincial furnishings.

THE DINING area, open to the living room, also relates to the kitchen over an open storage partition. A leather-topped French provincial game table expands to provide dining dimensions. The chairs are antique French imports with lettuce colored quilted antique satin seats.

An English crystal chandelier hangs over the table. Carrying along this theme of opulence is a long slender console of travertine marble supported by heavy gilt brackets that embellishes the back wall of the dining ell. This narrow "shelf" of marble is DeMaurer's answer to the need for a sideboard in a space that wouldn't accommodate a standard case piece of furniture. Here, the console bears a pair of French, antique, five-branch candelabra as well as providing a place for floral arrangements.

The open, built-in cabinet that divides the dining area from the kitchen shows off a portion of DeMaurer's antique Blue Willow dinnerware. Items ranging from an old blue-and-white china toaster to a pepper mill are included in the collection.

The kitchen features natural birch cabinets, green linoleum floor and lettuce green tile. Many of DeMaurer's "gourmet gadgets"—chafing dishes, copper cook pans and bottled herbs—add a continental appearance to the area.

The bedroom is decorated with a flair for fancy. The French provincial headboard is antique ivory, its spread is heavy cocoa shag and the cafe curtains are natural muslin. An off-white cotton rug is bordered in sage green carved in a Greek key motif. A double dresser decoupaged with green-and-white marble print paper is fanciful. So are the sawed-off, short-legged, oldfashioned farm-house kitchen chairs that stand on either side—their seats colorfully cushioned, their spindles brushed with pastel colors and gilt.

Nothing so ordinary as a dresser mirror would do: DeMaurer chooses, instead, to hang over the dresser a pair of long and narrow English, gilt-framed mirrors.

Shadetree Barber

By Tracy Reaves

WOMENFOLK since time began have been cutting their men down to size, but the day has come when it is done publicly and in a businesslike way — in the barbershops.

At this prospect, men may be pleased or beware, and these emotions might well be mixed in the minds of students on campus at California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo.

There, an enterprising young Barbara . . . er, barber . . . has set up a clipping service, or rather, a more or less barber shop.

Barbara Stiles, whose husband majors in engineering at Cal Poly, began trimming hair in order to cut expenses when her husband began his college education at Long Beach City College. Here she practiced her scissor shipping on husband Larry and their two children, Cathy, 5, and Billy, 3.

THAT EXPERIENCE has been put to work at the 20-foot campus trailer-house where the family of four now lives. The improvised barber shop has the beauty and feeling of the out-of-doors, for that's where it is. But to the married students living on limited budgets, the location isn't as important as being well groomed.

It was in this fresh air atmosphere on hair-cutting day that it became obvious Barbara was a barber, and unwary neighbors, some with long hair, short hair, curly locks or bald, began asking for — and got — a trimming. Not just to the ears, but all over the head. It has shocked a few to discover that their female barber only knows how to cut hair in a "butch"!

At any rate, Mrs. Stiles is a bargain to the heads of the families who are willing to take their chances.

TO PERSONS interested in this whack-it-yourself-racket, there are few techniques involved. With the essential clippers, comb and scissors handy, further improvisions might include a bowl, a level for the crew cut, and a tape measure for those longer styles.

It is well to keep in mind that hair grows approximately one-half inch per month, so in time mistakes will be well covered. Other than this, only minor expenditures might be necessary, such as a trip to the barber shop to repair damages.

In any case, Mrs. Stiles does not claim to be a professional, but just a helpful shadetree barber, and openly lets each customer know just where he sits. So it is at his own risk that each man gets his hair cut staring at this sign: Practice Makes Perfect. I'm Practicing.

When Barbara Stiles cut expenses by cutting hubby's hair, she started something—Cal Poly barber shop.

New Neighbor

I CAN'T understand why the house next door has changed hands so often. The original owner was an honest man whose ad read:

"UNUSUAL NEIGHBORHOOD: 3-BR., 2-Ba. home. Faucets leak. Grdn. loaded w/ weeds. Firepl. backs up. No Transp. School 18 Mls. Shop. 15 Mls. Must sacr. for health. Mo. payments and taxes make me sick!"

An advertising man bought the place and three months later sold it with:

"NEVER ANYTHING LIKE IT! Rustic rambling 3-BR. home w/panoramic view of hills overlooking placid waters of the blue Pacific. Designed for dreaming and built to magnify ea. glorious moment of living!"

This appealed to a car dealer who stuck it out for two weeks before trying his hand:

"THIS WILL SHOCK YOU! 3-BR. home w/lots of extras. Hardly been lived in. Must see to appreciate. Nothing dn., 360 Mos. to pay."

They tell me the new tenant is a big game hunter. So help me, if he makes my lions nervous, I'LL sell!—BERWYN A. IMBER.

Circus on Wheels

throughout the Southland, a group of Lions asked:

"Why not do something to allow this urge for speed to take place somewhere other than on city side streets and public highways—and have it done under strict supervision?

Thus the thought. The answer was a "good" drag strip. No one club of any service organization could assume the whole job. So Lions Associated was born, comprised of several harbor area Lions clubs.

NOR WAS IT EASY. Finally, for a big parcel of property between Willow St. and 223rd St., the Lions arranged a lease from the Harbor Dept.

On Oct. 15, 1955, after countless man hours of freely-given time and some $70,000 in outlay, the LADS presented its first drag meet.

What has happened since opening date? Some 270,000 persons have witnessed the weekly LADS drag races, burgeoned by occasional events of national importance, such as today's program offers.

Per actual miles logged, the safety record surpasses by 5-to-1 the ordinary highway driving record.

DEBUTING TODAY, Lions Associated have completed a brand-new Quarter-Midget track for the pre-teeners. Experts call it "a perfect track."

The 1958 Lions Associated president, Walter E. Hoffman, head of a long-established Long Beach electrical engineering company, comments:

Of the quarter-midget course: "The board of directors gave very careful consideration to the safety factor . . . their own supervisors are so strict that, during the entire operations of several years, they have never had an accident in which a youngster was hurt."

Of the drag strip: "We try to teach sportsmanship, tolerance and good citizenship to the boys. With the help and encouragement of the parents and the public, we Lions Club members feel we can do a great deal to avoid trouble on the highways and to make better drivers of our future citizens."

To understand what Hoffman means, steer out and see what goes on.

Suzy's Medal

TUCKED AWAY in my safe deposit box is a Silver Star, awarded for bravery over and above the call of duty. It isn't mine. It belonged to Suzy's husband and I don't even know his name.

I was building housing for servicemen in San Diego during the last war and was having trouble keeping my office help. They were the wives of enlisted men who followed their young husbands from camp to camp, clinging to them until they were finally sent overseas, then returning home to wait. They came and they went. I've had as many as four in a week's time. They were a valiant, smiling lot. I suspected that they cried much at night.

There was no use trying to remember their names, so I called them all Suzy. There was Suzy Redhead, tall Suzy Highpockets, Suzy Who Painted Her Toenails . . .

AND THERE WAS Suzy With Glasses. She was dumpy and bulged in the wrong places. And she was plain of face until she started talking about Irish, her husband. Then she took on a beauty beyond all understanding.

Irish had been a policeman somewhere in the middle west or perhaps in the East, before he enlisted in the Marines. He had finished one tour of duty in the Pacific. Intelligence work—running telephone wires. Now he was back in San Diego.

Suzy begged off one day. Irish was to be decorated. She brought his medal to the office for us to admire. But she didn't want to let us know how he earned it. Finally she said. "I'll tell you if you won't laugh at him. He was stringing wires on one of those big islands. The fighting was pretty fierce, but Irish just went about his business, stringing wires. He was up a tall tree when a message came through: 'Come on back, you damned fool, you're three miles behind enemy lines.' And for that they gave him the Silver Star."

THE TELEPHONE RANG. Suzy answered it and turned white as paper. She said to me, "My Irish is leaving for combat duty and I'm leaving, too." She grabbed up her coat and left without even finishing the letter in the typewriter.

It was not until the next day that I found the medal in Suzy's desk. I carried it in my pocket for weeks, then transferred it to a safer place.

The war was over. One day I met Suzy Who Painted Her Toenails and we stopped to talk. She had run into Suzy Highpockets who had word about Suzy With Glasses. Irish had turned up missing in action. Just that, no names, places, nothing else.

* * * *

So if any of you ever run into Suzy With Glasses tell her I'm keeping her medal for her. How will you know her? She is older now and dumpy and plain, but you will know her! Her face will light up with a beauty not of this world when she tells you of her Irish, who was decorated for stringing telephone wires three miles behind the enemy lines!—OWEN RHODES.

Tuna Tulips are an idea to lift Lenten meals out of the doldrums and still fit the menu to the demands of the season. Tuna mixture fills biscuit cups.

Tuna Tulips Give a Lenten 'Lift'

By Mildred K. Flanary
Independent, Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

VARYING Lenten foods can be a real tribute to your culinary skill and imagination. At no other time of year is stress as great for mealtime variety, within limits of custom.

And there is no one food more adaptable, more tasty and tempting for this season than tuna. It's "at home" in casseroles, in or atop sandwiches, in salad or as canapes.

For instance, perky and tempting Tuna Tulips are a new and distinctive luncheon dish. A Tuna Tulip is a biscuit basket in tulip shape with a tuna filling inside the petals. The addition of mayonnaise bestows a salad flavor, while salted peanuts dot the hot tuna mixture with a nutty tang.

Cut pieces of biscuit dough into 6-inch squares, using a pastry wheel for ruffled tulips. Ease squares into greased custard cups, spoon in the filling, and fold corners back over top. If you wish, seal the petal edges by pinching dough together.

Prepare filling in advance to avoid hostess-rush. Then, just before the guests arrive, mix the dough and form tulips. Serve with colorful fruit salad and your favorite relishes.

Following are the recipes for Tuna Tulips, a Dagwood Tuna Salad, Tuna Rolls-Ups and for Gourmet's Hot Tuna Canapes. Keep them handy!

Tuna Tulips

Make rolled biscuit dough (Mix 2 cups biscuit mix with ⅔ cup milk). Filling:

- 1 cup drained tuna broken up one 7-oz. can)
- 1 cup diced celery
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup chopped salted peanuts
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 tsp. grated onion

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Roll biscuit dough and cut into six 6" squares. Place squares into greased custard cups. Spoon tuna filling into dough-lined cups. Fold corners of dough over top; pinch together. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from cups. Serve hot. Serves 6.

Tuna Roll-Ups

- 2 cups packaged biscuit mix
- 1 can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked
- 2 tablespoons drained sweet pickle relish
- 2 teaspoons grated onion
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper

Prepare biscuit mix according to package directions; roll or pat into 9-inch square on lightly floured board or pastry cloth. Combine remaining ingredients; spread over biscuit dough. Roll up, jelly-roll fashion; seal edges. Cut into 8 slices. Put slices, cut-side-up, on greased baking sheet. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes, or until baked and browned. Serve with Quick Chili Sauce:

Cook 1 onion, chopped, and ½ green pepper, chopped, in 2 tablespoons shortening 5 minutes. Add 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce and 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Simmer 10 minutes, or until vegetables are just tender. Makes 8 roll-ups.

Dagwood Tuna Salad
(Makes 6 salads)

- 1 7-ounce can solid-pack tuna
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup chopped stuffed green olives
- ¼ cup chopped pecans

Fishstick Cheese Dreams

- 1 package Fishsticks
- ½ pound pimento cheese (process)
- 3 tablespoons milk
- ¼ teaspoons paprika

Grate cheese into saucepan. Add milk and stir over low heat until cheese sauce is smooth. Add paprika. Dip each frozen fishstick into cheese mixture. Place immediately on silver-foil lined pan and set in oven, 425° F. (If desired, place pan in freezer until ready to heat.) Heat 15 to 20 minutes, until cheese is bubbly and fishsticks are hot. Serve immediately.

SERVE WITH: Fruit Juice, Lyonnaise Potatoes, Escalloped Tomatoes, Bran Muffins, Tartar Sauce, Romaine, Angel Food Cake.

SAIL INTO LENT WITH BROILED HALIBUT STEAKS

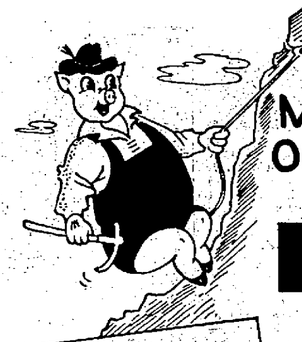

The big secret of broiling fish is so simple, yet so easy to overlook. Never, never overcook. To eliminate the cleanup problem when broiling, line your broiler pan with handy aluminum foil. For four servings allow 1 to 1½ lbs. of halibut fillets. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place pan under heat, baste several times with melted butter. Fish is done when it is easily flaked with a fork but still moist. Fish is just fish until you add a sauce, then it becomes a gourmet's dish.

FISH SAUCE LOUIS

- 1 CUP MAYONNAISE
- ½ CUP FRENCH DRESSING
- ⅛ CUP CATSUP OR CHILI SAUCE
- 1 TEASPOON HORSERADISH
- 1 TEASPOON WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE
- SALT & PEPPER (coarsely ground)

MIX TOGETHER ALL INGREDIENTS AND CHILL UNTIL SERVING TIME.

just plain ornery and will chase any thing in the pasture that moves. Their toes are sharp as razors. The big birds have been clocked at up to 60 miles an hour. If they're angry at something—and they usually are—they kick forward their big feet. A sharp toe can rip an animal like a cleaver."

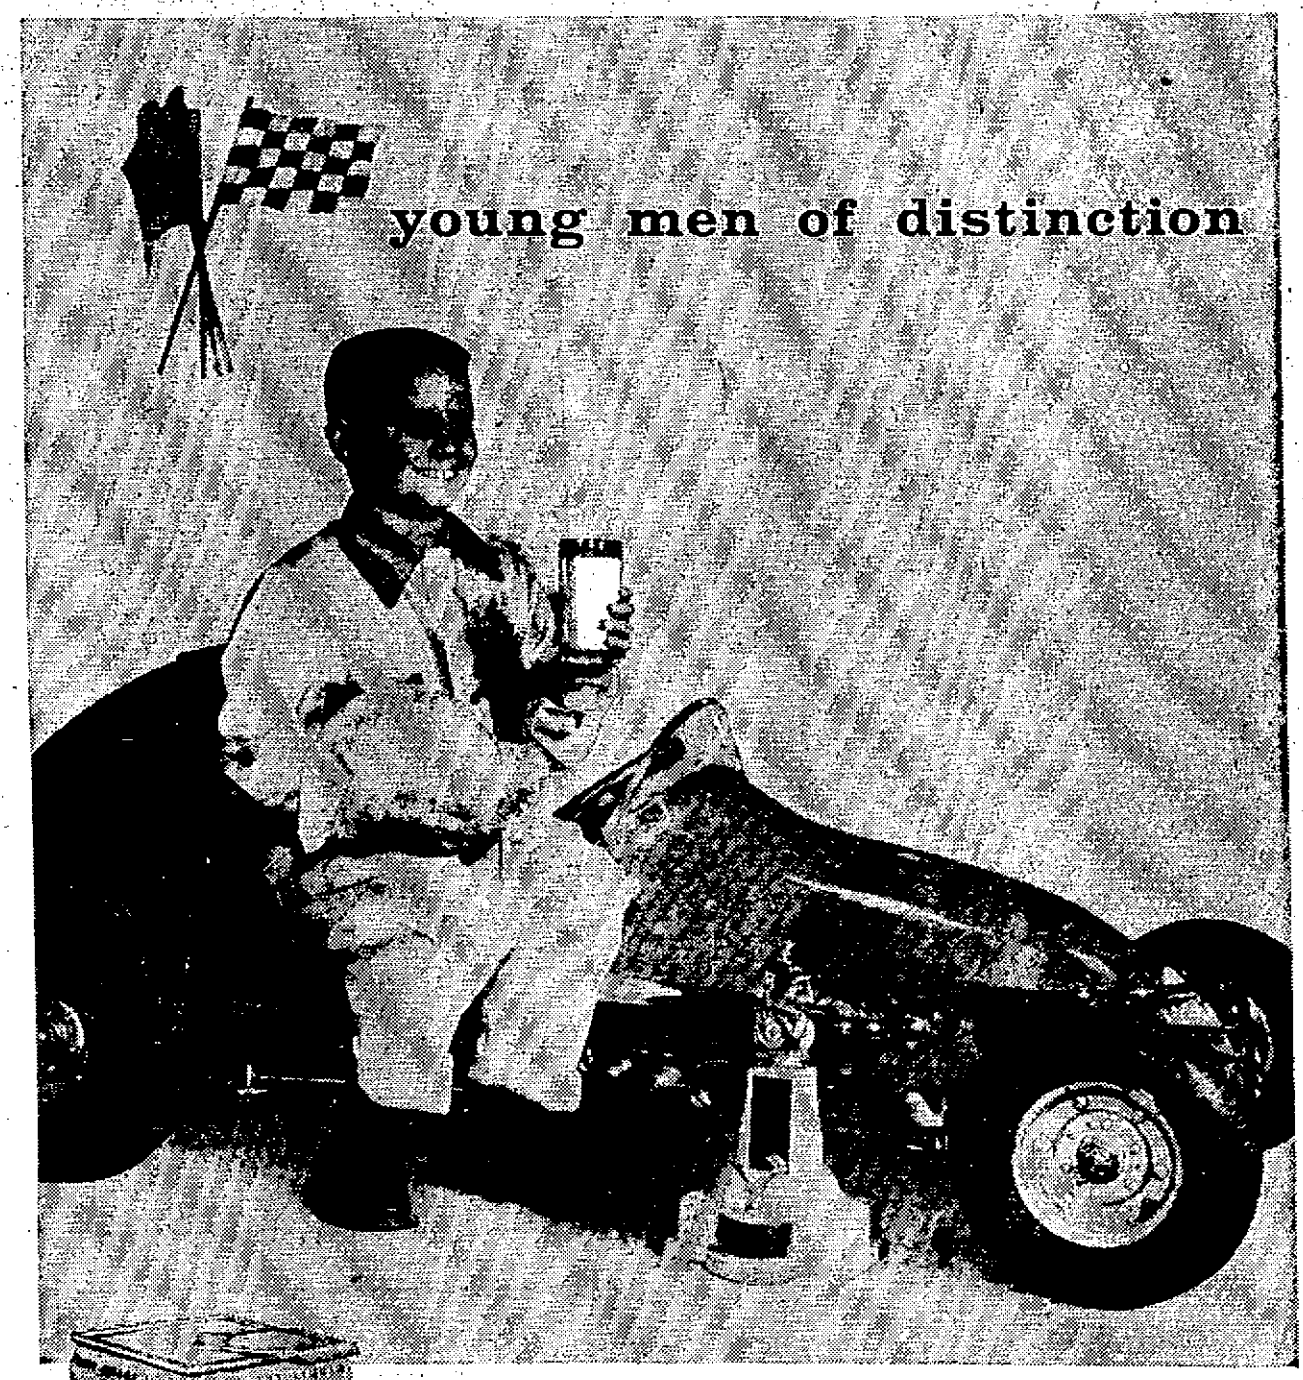

Chandler trains ostriches for sulky races, a sports event now known all over America. Another specialty of the wild animal show is a racing camel act. At present Holter is working the zebras into a "liberty" act—a finale in which all the animals rear up while grouped together.

BESIDES ELEPHANTS, camels, llamas, zebras, and ostriches the Holter ranch boasts miniature Zebu cattle, a "zonkey"—half donkey and half zebra — kangaroos, five white shepherd dogs, ponies, mules, a $5,000 stallion named "Silver" which leads Pasadena Tournament of Roses parades, and a strange animal called "the thing."

A year ago, in Colorado, Holter saw this mysterious animal running wild. Told that he could have it if he could catch it, he chased it into a snowdrift, which made capture easy. "Though it looks as if it's part goat, cow, buffalo, and horse, it's only 34 inches high and weighs 135 pounds," Ray says. "It's bad tempered, runs as fast as an antelope, and sticks its tail—which is like that of a horse—straight up in the air while running."

The idea of a wild animal show developed over the years. At an early age Gene Holter bought, sold, and broke horses for a living. When only 14 he bought carloads of horses from Montana on his own. About this time he started making a name for himself at rodeos. Eventually he bought a ranch in California to keep the animals he owned, which numbered about 50. Today the Holter ranch contains more than 100 different animals and birds, almost all of movie fame.

In 1949 while Gene lay in a hospital bed with a broken leg, the idea of racing ostriches occurred to him. Having read a jungle comedy book showing natives riding ostriches, Gene felt that racing ostriches ought to be possible and should be sensational. A year later he owned ostriches that proved expensive to feed, almost impossible to train, and so unlikely to become racers that no fair manager wanted to risk them. But by 1953, Gov. Weatherby won a race with one of Gene's birds at the Kentucky State Fair.

Kent Browning, junior juggernaut of the dirt track, likes to relax after a gruelling quarter-midget race... or anytime... with a tall, cool glass of refreshing Mountain View Milk.

Kent says: "When the checkered flag falls after the race, there's nothing like rich, creamy Mountain View Milk. It tastes so good — and it's so good for you. Fella's and girls, if you haven't tried Mountain View Milk, you don't know how good milk can be."

And Mom... Mountain View Milk is just chuck-full of vitamins and calcium for extra strong body building. You can get it at your store, or have it home delivered in single service cartons. There's no more inconvenience from empty bottles.

BOAT TALK

Love That Marina!

By Bob Ruskauff

ALTHOUGH this story concerns the Long Beach Marina, Basin I, and what a wonderful year it has been since the opening last February, the gleanings came about at the big Boat Show (which closes today at the Great Western Exhibits Building — so, if you haven't, do!).

We bumped into the director of the Long Beach Marine Department and his charming wife, Vera, and asked Lawrence W. McDowell:

"How's it going and how do the tenants like it at the Marina?"

"You have asked a question," said Larry, "which I can answer completely in the affirmative." To wit:

The 335-slip holders most obviously love that Marina!

NOT SO LONG AGO, the Marina had a waiting list of around 800 boats. Now it's more than 1,200. Plans for added basins are progressing, but it will be a spell before they can be inhabited. And, then, the waiting list will carry right along, the way this boating now goes.

Yes, they love that Marina. So well that many owners have spent their summer vacations aboard ships there. So well that many don't even bother cruising to far places. They take a few hours outside or in the bay, then, to quote Advocate McDowell, "come back in to have fun in a clean, pleasant anchorage."

"Why not?" Larry asked. "All the facilities and comforts of a first-class yacht club are right here."

TRUE, EVEN though there will soon be more, add to wit:

1. The new administration building is virtually complete and will be ready for occupancy in March.

2. The Marine Fire Station will be occupied and in operation by mid-March.

3. Four more comfort stations, two with showers for the boat people, will soon be available.

4. Ready within two months will be a marine supply and commissary-snack bar (apart from the restaurant, Captain's Inn, in operation for some time).

THE BASIN has some large and well known yachts in it — such, in sail, as the 77-foot Queen Mab (sleek and beautiful as a filly, yet over 50 years of age, this ever-youthful dowager) and William L. Stewart's noted 67-foot yawl, Chubasco; such, in power cruisers, as Johnny Miller's 72-foot cruiser, Aggie J., or the Willis-Albright-owned 83-foot converted air-sea rescue boat, Thundercloud (now on a lengthy Mexican cruise).

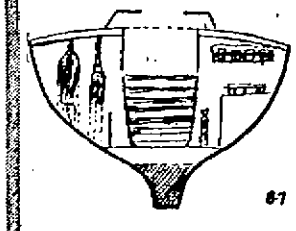

Yet 135 yachts in the basin are under 25 feet in length.

BOAT HOOKS: High lights of the boating scene today will be both ashore and afloat. Ashore, it's the finale of the nation's third largest boat show, going throughout the afternoon until 10 p. m. Afloat and on three courses, will be climaxing action of the 29th annual Midwinter Regatta.

Most classes will get their awards tonight at the three conducting yacht clubs — Alamitos Bay (dinghy fleets), Cabrillo Beach (small boats) and Los Angeles (larger boats).

WET GEAR

A wet gear locker is best placed near the foot of the companionway so the crew can stow gear before the below decks get wet, too. Below the locker place a pan or box or some other waterproof arrangement so that drippings drain directly into the bilge. The gear may be fully dried outdoors later.

The Biggest Store

"AND THE PRICE IS RIGHT" by Margaret Case Harriman (World, $4): In the 168 selling departments at R. H. Macy's in New York, and its 32 branches, customers bought $398,261,000 worth of half a million items in 1956. Biggest department store in the world and the best known—Macy's has 650,000 depositor account customers, many of whom live in distant lands; the others include the 150,000 people who daily pour through the New York store's 13 entrances.

Responsible for the store's origin was a seafaring Quaker, Rowland Hussey Macy who, in 1845, noting four failures as a merchant before coming to New York, wrote: "I have worked two years for nothing. Damn. Damn. damn. damn."

A few years later, following the Gold Rush to California, R. H. Macy, a brother and two partners acquired in what is now the Golden State, opened a "fancy dry goods" and provisions-for-miners store in Marysville under the name of Macy & Co. It went out of business just three months later, its owners having failed to take notice of the fact that the miners made up a floating population.

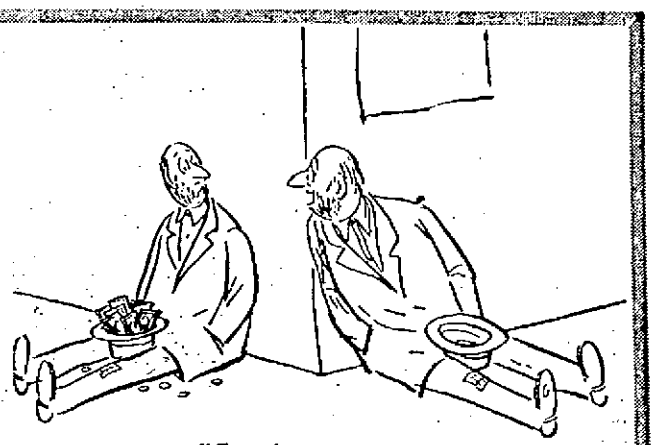

Back east, after a short hitch in Boston, Macy opened a store in New York. No one knows exactly how he got his capital, but it is recorded that his first year's sales totaled $90,000. Mrs. Case sets down an intimate and lightly written history of the store's growth, the strange requests received there by strange people, and sidelights of some of its more than 10,000 regular salespeople. Anyone who ever visited a department store will enjoy reading it.

"THE BRAND RIDER" by Ed La Vanway (Dodd, Mead, $2.75): As if rounding up enough longhorns to keep the Four-Arrow spread out of reach of mortgage holders were not enough, John Lane has two other problems, each a sinister one and a threat to his life. One is Louis Sharr, a deputy sheriff whom only Lane knows to be wanted elsewhere for murder, and who knows Lane knows. The other is Thors Sorensen, who claims title to his small range but who's actually a nester, raiding Four-Arrow herds. How Lane works things out with brains and bullets adds up to a driving western, powered with trigger action and suspense.

"COME DANCE WITH ME" by Ninette de Valois (World, $6): An Irish jig, for which she had exceptional talent when a small girl, carried Ninette de Valois to international fame in ballet. This is an autobiography of sorts, her experiences along the way and personal glimpses of famous friends—friends like William Butler Yeats and Robert Helpmann and Lennox Robinson. Founder of the Sadler's Wells School of Ballet, now the Royal Ballet School; and director of Sadler's Wells Ballet, now the Royal Ballet, since its foundation more than a quarter of a century ago, Dame Valois has much to say about the world of the theater and its people, and she says it with charm and extraordinary perception. Friends told her she should take a few months off to write these memoirs, but she chose to do it during a lecture tour of 12,000 miles in Europe, Africa, Canada and the United States, aboard almost every conceivable means of transportation from a French cargo boat to an observation car on an American streamliner. As a dancer, how does it feel to be old? Dame Valois quotes James Stephens: "It feels stiff like."

"A POOR MAN'S GUIDE TO EUROPE: 1958 Edition" by David Dodge (Random House, $3.50): It takes money to travel — even in Europe — but much less money if you team up with David Dodge and allow him to take you by the hand and lead you. Mr. Dodge is a penny pincher, a nickel miser, and he wouldn't spend a buck on a bet unless he knew he'd get double his money's worth. He knows Europe like the back of his hand and he knows, therefore, when and where to save a shekel without actually appearing to be a miser. He gives the lowdown on tipping through the various countries, how the traveler can gimmick the European money-changing racket, how to keep from loading up with souvenirs that are purely junk. He tips you off to the finest European

"Care for a merger?"

A parody on the stiff-necked boss, and the antics of the time-clock puncher, the clock watcher, the round-and-fully-packed secretary, the office vampire and the office boy make up "Care for a Merger?" (Dutton, $2.75), a hilarious collection of 120 cartoons by famous artists that have appeared in The Wall Street Journal, the mouthpiece of big business. And, as you can see, Charles Preston who made the selections could have done no better than to select the above cartoon for this funny book's jacket illustration.

Millions See His Arm on Television

Hal Nyby's arm plays part on Jack Webb's "Dragnet."

By Terry Vernon

Independent, Press-Telegram Television Columnist

MILLIONS have seen this man on TV, or at least his powerful arms and shoulders, but his audience wouldn't recognize him if they bumped into him on the street. And he's a product of Poly High School in Long Beach.

At the conclusion of every "Dragnet" story you see a powerful arm holding a sledge and hammering the show's Mark VII code on a metal plate.

On the other end of the hammer-arm is Harold Christian Nyby, construction foreman responsible for building most of the show's sets.

He gets quite a ribbing about his chore since it occurs only once in a while. However, when he is ready to put the VII stamp on film the make-up man greases Hal's hands with the deftness he'd use to apply Marilyn Monroe's eye shadow (but probably not with the same feeling of joy). The wardrobe man steps in and rolls up the shirtsleeves and the hairdresser, with a flourish, high lights the blond hair on his arm with a spray.

* * * *

NYBY IS AN amiable guy who has a handshake like a rampant power wrench. He's 6 foot 3 and weighs 220 pounds.

His brother, Christian, is a well known TV producer and also is formerly of Long Beach. They do not work together in show business, but they do have a mutual respect for their chosen professions.

During World War II, while serving in the Navy, Hal was the star of a rehabilitation film made by the government. Prior to that he had been a photographer 1st class and is one of the survivors of the sinking of the aircraft carrier USS Franklin.

He lives with his wife and three youngsters on a half-acre in Granada Hills and photography is his principal hobby.

His acting stint occurs about three times to each year. But to him it's a big thrill and to millions of viewers he stands as a very solid guy.

Book Reviews

cuisines. He makes it easy for you to plan your trip. To top it all off, his book's a delight to read, even if you're going nowhere.

"SAWDUST EMPIRE" by Howard M. Brier (Knopf, $5): Seattle appeared on the map when Henry Yesler built his sawmill. In 1851. Since, the cities of Washington and Oregon have grown around their sawmills. Even today, the 4 million people in that 165,000-square-mile area depend to a great extent on lumber for their economy though industry is becoming more and more diversified. Mr. Brier, associate professor of journalism at the University of Washington, writes fondly about these two richly endowed states and their cities and comes up with one of the most informative and easy-to-read books of its kind that it has been our pleasure to read. Those planning a summer vacation to the Pacific Northwest—the "Sawdust Empire"—will get much, much more out of their trip if they will first read this book.

Tuna Tulips

⅛ cup mayonnaise
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
6 medium-sized fresh tomatoes
Parsley sprigs

With a fork, break tuna into large chunks. In a bowl, combine tuna, celery, olives, pecans, mayonnaise, salt and pepper; mix lightly but thoroughly. Cut each tomato, crosswise, into 3 slices. Spread bottom and middle tomato slices with tuna mixture. For each salad, arrange bottom slice on crisp lettuce; place middle slices on this and top with stem and slice. Garnish with sprig of parsley. Chill before serving. Makes 6 salads.

MEXICO CITY

". . . if you would tell us what you like best in Mexico and what to avoid!"

I LIKE EATING under the portals at Oaxaca. The peanuts fried in garlic and hot peppers, and the mescal with lime and salt.

The musical plaza all lit with little golden lights at Vera Cruz. And dinner of fresh oysters and huachinanguito in butter at Prendes sidewalk restaurant across the street.

* * * *

I DON'T LIKE some of the new irritations of the luxury hotels in Mexico City: The new charge for phone calls that used to be free. The custom of changing your dollars at 12.40 pesos. Instead of 12.49 which they give you at the bank half block away.

I think Acapulco hotel prices are much too high, considering the Mexican labor costs. And in Mexico City, 48 cents for tequila that costs a dollar a bottle and 40 cents for orange juice, produced by dollar-a-day Mexican farmers, is bad publicity.

Two hotels I like best in all Mexico are: The old colonial de Cortes in Mexico City; the Virrey de Mendoza in Morelia. I like to eat at the street tables, just off the plaza in Morelia. The chicken broiled over charcoal stoves is famous.

* * * *

THE BEST restaurant in Mexico City is the Rivoli. Order the pate of the house, Chicken Chitzenitza wrapped in a banana leaf and spiced with a ground herb something like paprika. Ask the orchestra to play "Caminante del Mayab"—the guitarist has a wonderful voice.

* * * *

THREE MEXICAN restaurants in Mexico City: The old Prendes for little crayfish in garlic butter; the new Fonda del Refugio for chicken in Morelia plaza style; Loredo's Colonial for almost anything.

* * * *

FOR LUNCH: The Lincoln Hotel, one of the best restaurants in Mexico; Circulo del Sureste for Yucatecan food (and get the Yucatan beer which is hard to find in the capital); the new elegant and inexpensive grill in the Del Prado Hotel. Especially when you get hungry for salads.

* * * *

THE WONDERFUL taxi drivers are no longer wonderfully polite. I don't blame them—they haven't had a raise in ten years. But I don't like it. A little bit of Mexico has gone. They are hard to find.

Ride the one-peso taxis on the boulevards. The man waving one finger in the air and taking on anybody who wants to ride. One peso from Chapultepec to the main plaza. A bargain.

THE BEST SILVER is at India Bonita, next door to Wells Fargo. Expensive but the greatest designs. Best clothing at Peggy Pena's at the Mirador in Acapulco and at Vera's at the Bella Vista in Cuernavaca. The prettiest colonial town: San Miguel Allende, five hours north of Mexico City.

Still the best and most available country. I like it.

Pastime in Valley of the Sun

Barbara Koile, 17, ties her horse to a palo verde tree during a ride on the desert near Phoenix, capital of Arizona's Valley of the Sun, where it's Indian Summer all winter long.

Shades of Sarah Bernhardt!

BACK in the days of the rowdy West, Central City, Colo., had a reputation second to none. As the scene of one of the richest gold strikes ever made in the United States, it teemed with two-fisted prospectors intent on making a quick fortune, and ladies and gentlemen of somewhat shadowy repute determined to relieve them of it.

Today, Central City is a ghost town—a romantic relic of a romantic era. Teller House, a famous frontier hostelry, still stands. It was here that Antoine D'Arcy, lovesick, broke and thirsty, told his tale of woe for a drink. As he spoke, he drew the face of his beloved Madeline on the barroom floor, thereby gaining immortality of a sort.

MANY A FAMOUS name enjoyed the hospitality of Teller House. During President Grant's visit, the hotel paved its sidewalks with silver bricks, a modest enough gesture for a town known as the "richest square mile in the world." Mrs. Siddons, Edmund Booth and Sarah Bernhardt were among the noted players of the time who made the hotel their home during engagements at Central City's famous Opera House.

The Opera House is extremely well preserved and is now the scene for the Opera and Drama Festival held every year during July and August. This event reproduces the glamour and romance of the wild and rollicking bonanza days and features top names from the world of opera, stage and screen.

Black Hawk, named for an Indian chief, is another restored mining town five miles from Central City. The old Gilpin Hotel, the historic school and narrow board sidewalks are among the reminders of the boom days. A marker on the boundary line between the two towns is the spot where John H. Gregory made the strike that put Central City on the map. Since that initial yield worth $4, Gregory's diggings alone have produced more than 60 million dollars in gold.

CENTRAL CITY and Black Hawk are only 35 miles west of Denver, reached by Continental Air Lines DC-7Bs from several points in the U. S. If you're looking for a vacation with an Old West flavor, plus excellent facilities for fishing, hunting, hiking and riding, this district is made to order. You can also get into the spirit of the old days by prospecting for gold, or its modern equivalent, uranium.

Continental's round-trip fares to Denver via Gold Carpet Club Coach service are $86 from Los Angeles.

Hawaii in Bloom

Tourists to Hawaii are amazed to find more than 5,000 varieties of hibiscus. The red variety is the official flower of the Islands. Northwest Orient Airlines advises vacationists taking its Hawaii Air Vacations that the people there create new colors as a hobby, working over their plants much as the Dutch work on tulips. While the hibiscus blooms for just a day, picked flowers require no water or care to keep them in their original fresh beauty.

The Balance

By Lee Wakefield

Illustrated by Clyde Winslow

"GEORGE PERRY," I said when I finally had him on the telephone, "you are a dangerous idiot. Stop this experiment at once."

"Wilbur," said George, chuckling (he knows I detest my first name), "Don't get your blood pressure up. All we did was plant some ocean corvina in the Coachella Sea. At worst, they'll die out. If they live, which we expect, come out in a year or so and enjoy the fishing."

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," I said. "And you, in your abysmal ignorance, are tampering with nature's balance."

"Relax, Wilbur," said George. "Remember what I said about the fishing." He hung up on me. On ME!

In the face of such rude treatment, I should have washed my hands of the whole thing. For after all I, W. Charles Vanderk, am undoubtedly the foremost marine biologist in the world. But like many other brilliant men I enjoy the relaxation of sport fishing. So, between field trips to the Amazon, I went to the Coachella Sea. And for a few years George's experiment seemed successful. The corvina thrived, and several resorts sprang up along the shoreline. The best of these was the Western Iowa Lodge, where I stayed.

GEORGE WENT there also, and annoyed me by acting as if he were my equal. But I stopped that. I made sure that everybody knew exactly who and what I was. And to compensate for George's presence, the Lodge had Abel.

Abel was a malodorous ex-prospector who set himself up as a fishing guide. If one were careful about the wind, he was acceptable. He hardly ever spoke, and so proved an excellent companion. And he seemed to know the location of every corvina in the Coachella.

"Piranha?" asked Abel one day in response to my remarks.

I was amused at his ignorance. "Piranha are a river fish of South America," I explained. "They are sometimes called the Cannibal Fish, because of their large teeth and appetites and vicious nature. But read my next book. Then you'll know all about Piranha."

I missed the beginning of George's retribution by leaving on a field trip to the Lake of the Devil. This misnamed area is not really a lake, but a section of the steamy swamp that lies between the Amazon and the Orinoco, surrounded by fear and superstition. Closely connected to the sea, the waters are subject to extreme tides and in the dry season become quite saline. And the Devil that gave the area its name was only three inches long. It was a variety of Piranha which I named the Vanderk Piranha after me, its discoverer.

THE VANDERK PIRANHA was an exciting discovery. Noteworthy was the small size—never over three inches in length. Also they invariably chose as quarry the largest fish or game in the vicinity. I once saw them attack a crocodile. The reptile tried to escape by coming ashore, and was half out of the water when it succumbed. The Vanderk Piranha flopped onto the bank to strip their prey, and it took them two minutes and thirty-five seconds to reduce the crocodile to a skeleton. The Piranha looked ludicrous out of water, and I could see that the native belief that they actually came on land to hunt and attack animals was just a silly superstition.

The minute I returned to the Lodge I saw that George was in trouble. The corvina had started to grow. When introduced to the Coachella Sea, this species rarely exceeded eight pounds. Now the fishing contests at the various resorts were producing larger and larger prize fish. Ten pounds, fifteen, twenty-three; and when one angler came in with a 27-pound 9-ounce corvina, even George sensed that something was wrong.

Abel started spending all his time on the porch of his cabin, just looking at the sea. He refused to even go near the water. "Too big," he told me. How right he was, was proven in September. Two anglers hooked a fish that was too large to take in their boat, and they estimated its weight over a hundred pounds. In October a corvina attacked a skiff, overturning it and bruising one of the occupants.

THERE WAS A FUROR in the newspapers, and the state closed the Coachella to all fishing and boating. At this point, George came to me.

"Charles," said George, "we need your help. Our sport fishing scheme turned out to be a Pandora's Box."

A lesser man would have had his vanity flattered by such an admission. But in one as talented as I, vanity is out of place. "George," I said, "I'm glad you finally had the good sense to request my help. I know exactly what to do."

Abel had joined us, so I explained to both of them. "The Vanderk Piranha can acclimate itself to the temperatures and salinity of the Coachella Sea. As they always go after the largest quarry, a few of them in the Coachella will remove the

Bazaar of the 'Bizarre'

By the Shutterbug

EVERY ONCE in a while, this column sets up a photo bazaar to dispense the bizarre assortment of information or new items that have been accumulating in our bailiwick.

First is a seasonal note to winterize the darkroom wash-water tank. In winter time, the colder water coming out of our faucets requires a longer period of time to wash the hypo from our prints.

You can add Hypo Clearing Agent, a water soluble powder that gets rid of the hypo in a hurry.

SECONDLY, there's a new foldup flash unit with a clever gimmick that has just about reached dealers' shelves throughout the country. The reflector is on a swivel top so that it can be tilted to three bounce flash positions, with a click stop in each position.

The Heiland Tilt-A-Mite, as the new unit is called, accommodates either subminiature M-2 or standard bayonet base flash-lamps with the flick of a switch. It has a B-C circuit so the battery will be good for at least a year with normal use. A built-in test lamp checks the condition of the battery, flash-lamp and circuit. To keep the unit compact and pocket-sized, the reflector folds up into a pie-shaped segment.

THEN, THERE'S NEWS in the flash-bulb field, as a new metal ingredient proves much more powerful than the 30-year standard, shredded aluminum.

The new ingredient is zirconium, an atomic age metal with many uses. You'll be finding it soon in the M-25, a subminiature flashbulb which gives off just about as much light as the Press 25, four times its size.

Sylvania engineers also have perfected a blue flashbulb, the M-25B, color corrected for daylight color film.

LONG BEACH CAMERA Guild will have a travel program, illustrated with colored slides, at 7:45 p. m. Wednesday in Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Old photo maxim, "Get detail in shadow area," is carried out here with sense of humor. Such tricks always are fun and will liven up album, can even win a prize.

. . . That Feller, Old Yeller

By Eleanor Avery Price

STATISTICIANS have it that our dog population is gaining in purebred pooches with pedigree papers and downgrading in the number of mongrels, the reason being that a prosperous people want dogs as well as homes and cars to keep up with the Joneses.

Fanciers of mongrels, which includes just about every normal child in America, can take heart, however, for the inimitable Walt Disney is putting the mutt right back on its pedestal!

It all started many years ago when a little Texas boy was saved from a killer sow by a "ketch dog" adopted by his father over his mother's protestations—a big, gotched-eared, ill-bred mongrel first found bedded down in the family cornmeal barrel.

THE BOY GREW up to become the father of Fred Gipson who wrote a book called "Old Yeller," based principally on his father's telling of the loyalty and bravery of the "ketch dog," plus some phases of frontier life.

A year ago last January, Walt Disney began auditioning for a canine star for his production of the book. He was looking for a rough-cut, rangy dog, the type that could well have offered protection to his family from the dangers of the wilderness.

His choice? A yellow, gangly dog that was some time previously bailed out of a pound for $3 by Frank Weatherwax, Hollywood dog trainer and brother of Rudd Weatherwax, owner of Lassie.

FRANK WEATHERWAX named his pup Spike and drew heavily upon his valuable time training it. However, despite talent, the dog was turned down again and again by Hollywood producers who looked with dismay at its heavy build and tough appearance. That is, until Walt Disney looked him over and promptly gave him a meaty lead in his production of "Old Yeller."

Be that as it may, Spike's superb performance as Old Yeller and his winning personality will endear him, even to the most discriminating canine admirer, as a wonderful, lovable, mixed-breed dog. And this cannot but help the cause of the "disappearing" mutt.

Copyright Walt Disney Productions

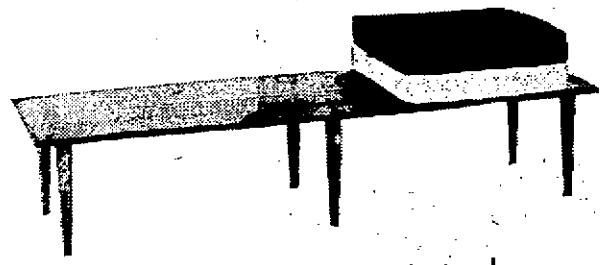

His real name is Spike, but thousands know him better as "Old Yeller," a Walt Disney movie star.

the new hot cereal that gives your family more protein than meat itself!

True! Ounce for ounce, not the finest sirloin you buy can give your family so much life-giving protein, of such high quality, as this remarkable new cereal.

The cereal "plus." More than just another cereal, this new combination of oats and wheat goes far beyond what you have expected and received from cereals in the past. Gives you more protein of high quality than any other cereal.

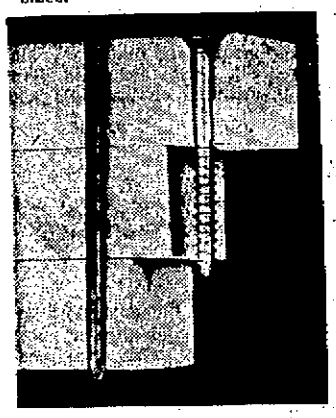

Betty Crocker says: "Here's a new flavor, creamy, yet nut-like. Such a delicious way to add important protein to the family's day. It means good growth for babies, and the pink of health in youngsters' cheeks. Protein will actually help you to keep the looks you like, and help your husband to stay well!"

HOW TO Join Wood to Get Maximum Strength

MITERED AND butt-joined corners can be strong if they have support. Patented fasteners (arrows), open and/or hidden dowels, or nails (on light stock) teamed with glue add strength. Metal fasteners are ideal for joints like these; they're made in many sizes.

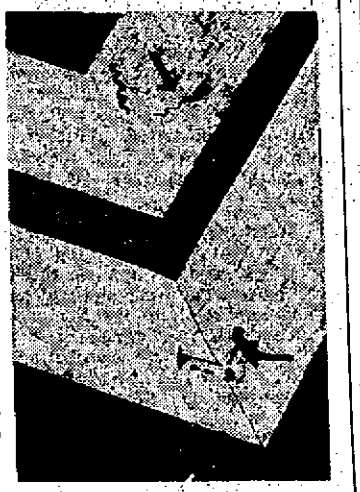

GLUE IS USUALLY the fastest, easiest and cheapest way to fasten two boards together. If job can use it, pick a joint that will give the largest glue area. A combination of glue and metal fastener—screws, nails, and so on—makes an exceptionally strong joint.

IN FACE GLUING and edge-to-edge joining, alternate the grain direction to help prevent warping.

THE SECRET to better wood joints is this: Take the time to make every joint fit perfectly. Speed is often to blame for mismatched miters, ill-fitting splines, sloppy rabbet cuts, and so on, which usually are beyond "fixing" with fastening, blocking devices, or putty.

THE CORRECT SIZE nail or screw also determines strength of joints. Screws hold better than nails; bolts hold better yet. Use nails three times as long as the stock being joined; length of screws is determined by thickness of the bottom board.

THE WAY WOOD grain runs can determine strength of some joints—mainly butt joints, the weakest of them all. Wood, when it's moistened, expands more across grain than with it. Keep grain directions parallel.

GLUE BLOCKS cut from scrap do two jobs in one: They add more glue line, which, in turn, adds more strength. Cut them square. Coat surfaces with glue and push blocks into joint with sliding motion so they seat properly. Metal angle braces do same job.

Some plants, like this camellia, have a floppy habit of growth and need support to keep them on up-and-up.

GARDENS

Straighten Up Slouching Plants

By Bob Gilmore

MANY GARDEN ornamentals, once they become established, have a habit of growing out of bounds. Although they may not necessarily sprawl all over the landscape they do have a tendency to grow crooked or lean away from the wind; vine-like plants may topple due to their being top-heavy; trees may require a bit of straightening up and even dwarf-like shrubs may flop over unless properly supported.

During the past few years many garden products have been introduced that will prove helpful in keeping your plants where you want them. A rather familiar training post is a redwood stake. These are available in various lengths or you may cut the long sizes to whatever measurement is required. The stakes should be driven well in the ground, especially if a fairly tall ornamental requires support. Regulation green-tinted plant ties should be employed for attaching the plant stems to the stake.

PERHAPS the most economical way of training specimen plants is to use a bamboo stake that has been dyed green. The color of the stake blends pleasantly with the foliage of the plant and is thus not objectionable. As a matter of fact, these bamboo stakes may be used in such a way that they can hardly be seen. Due to their small diameter, bamboo stakes may easily be forced into the ground. They are especially valuable for small plants that have a sprawling habit of growth.

Covering a stucco wall or concrete surface with vinelike plants produces a very attractive appearance and certainly hides the bare surface. However, the vines must be supported or eventually they will tumble of their own weight. A rather ingenious product is a small cement disk about the size of a penny. Embedded in it is a small metal hook that may be bent to hold a stem. The disk is cemented to the stucco or wall and then the stem placed in the loop or hook formed by bending the wire.

FOR SMALL PLANTS that are lazy about growing straight up in the air two metal rods and encircling wire loops will prove ideal. The entire unit is sold in one section. You need simply press the metal rods into the soil, then place the plant

Gladiolus Is an Old Reliable

By Joe Littlefield

GLADIOLUS, a popular, reliable plant in the Long Beach area, should bloom within 90 to 120 days if planted now. Colorful banks of blooms on tall, sturdy stalks will result if the gardener prepares and plants the bulbs properly.

Dip the bulbs in a solution of insecticide spray recommended for control of thrips. Ask your nurseryman or garden dealer for the brand of insecticide that can be used safely.

Dipping insures better thrip control while roots are developing. Plant the bulbs about six inches deep to insure sturdy trunks.

WORK SOME bulb food into the hole for each plant. Group planting, consisting of dozen or more bulbs per group, furnishes colorful masses of flowers.

Most of us prefer to set out young annual plants from flats or pony packs. By this, about three weeks or more of fussing with young seedling plants is saved. However, if you haven't sown seeds of larkspur and scabiosa right where you want them to grow, you haven't had the thrill of watching those plants grow like a young forest and bloom fully. Because they grow tall, sow the seeds at the back part of the flower bed. Then take care of them as you would a newly-sown lawn, till the seedlings are about an inch tall.

YOU'LL GET a more even spacing of the plants if you mix the seeds in a bucket filled three-quarters full of steer manure. When you scatter the manure carefully, the manure acts as a spreader, preventing seeds from bunching together in clusters.

After the seedlings are about an inch long, thin out to about four- to six-inch spacing.

Tall, sturdy gladiolus is result of proper planting.

Tips on Gardening

GARDEN TIPS for the week . . . Peat has the capacity for retaining tremendous quantities of moisture. A mulch of this material tends to keep the surface cool, retards evaporation and protects the roots on hot and windy days.

For pot plans along coastal areas the following will succeed: geraniums, marguerites, petunias and fuchsias. The latter enjoy a cold shower every week or so. This treatment washes off the dust and raises the humidity.

Tomatoes are especially susceptible to damage from the tomato hook worm. You can minimize damage by growing the plants on trellises, thus making it more difficult for worms to get to the fruit.

TIE UP SLOUCHING PLANTS

firmly in the center of the loop made by the metal wires. This is a very neat arrangement and does not in any way detract from the general appearance of the ornamental.

A lightweight netting that looks like a fishnet may be attached to poles sunk into the ground. Vinelike plants such as sweet peas will then attach themselves to the trellis. The material will last for years. At the end of one season's growth it may be taken down and then used the following season.

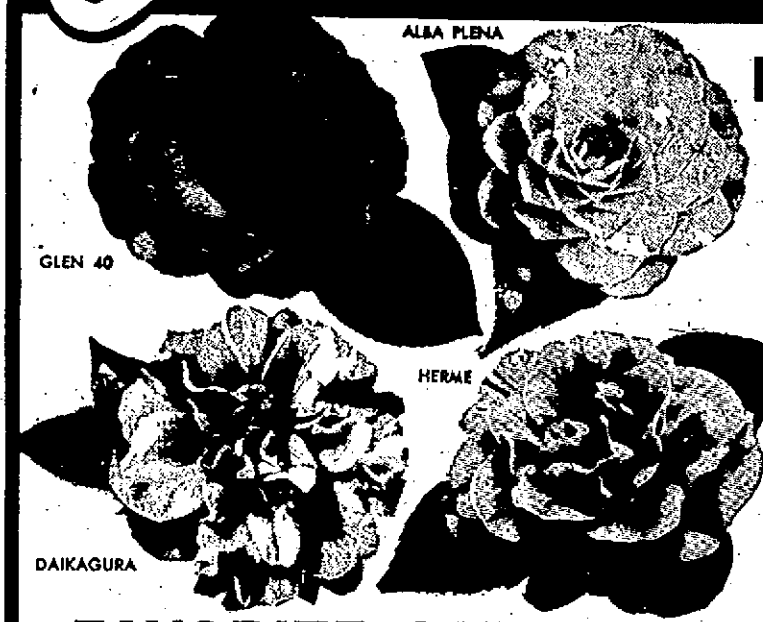

Plant ties made of wire embedded in tar and then surrounded with an attractive green wrapping will securely attach stems to supports. A simple twist of the wrist allows the plant tie to be looped around the stake and the stem and securely fastened. These are available in many sizes and a continuous roll can also be obtained at leading garden supply stores.

Shop for Dwarfs

While you can still plant bare root stock, shop at your nurseryman's for some of the lovely dwarf fruits which produce excellent fruit in a small space. Dwarf forms of apples and pears are widely available. These reach about 8 to 10 feet in height at maturity.

Ancient Tree of Montezuma

By Gladys Diesing

Author's Photo

Close rival in age to California Sequoias, Montezuma cypress of Mexico can be traced back for 2,000 years.

IN THE walled garden of an old Catholic church at Santa Maria del Tule, Oaxaca, Mexico, stands an old, old tree which is estimated to be at least 2,000 years old, making it a close rival of our own Sequoias. This is El Tule, a Montezuma cypress, one of many such old trees found in Mexico, their native habitat. Around the Castle of Chapultepec near Mexico City is a grove of more than 200 aged cypresses, and at Popotla in the valley of Mexico is another tree known as Arbol de la Noche Triste, Tree of the Woeful Night, under which Cortes is said to have mourned the plight of his defeated army. Many of these old trees appear in the legends of the ancient Indian tribes of Mexico who worshiped them as gods or goddesses.

The name cypress is a misnomer as the Montezuma cypress is not a cypress at all but a Taxodium mucronatum, of the same species as the bald cypress of our southern states. It is a tall, loose-branched tree with foliage similar to but sparser than that of our native redwood, giving an airy look to the crown. The trunk with its reddish-brown bark is widely buttressed at the base.

While the Montezuma cypress eventually reaches a size too large for a small lot, it is a beautiful tree to behold and has its place where space will permit. It is occasionally seen in parks and large estates. The tree pictured with this article is growing on the grounds of the Huntington Library in San Marino.

Southland's Short Story

outsize corvina and keep the rest within limits."

"No," said Abel.

I turned to him, amazed at his stupidity. "Abel," I said, "I am not in the habit of making mistakes. If you can ever show me the slightest imperfection in my plan, I'll make a public admission of error. Why," I continued, "you sound as if you thought me no smarter than George." George's face turned red, and Abel returned to his cabin.

GEORGE'S SUPERIORS readily admitted the brilliance of my plan and requested me to proceed. I did, and the results were exactly as I had foreseen. Inside two years not a corvina was left over twenty pounds, and the state reopened the Coachella for fishing and boating.

The Lodge celebrated this event and naturally asked me to be guest of honor.

"I accept," I said. "But you must invite Abel." Abel had not taken advantage of the reopening. Indeed, he still would not get closer than twenty feet to the water. Undoubtedly it was self-abasement for having questioned me, and I wished to show him I bore no grudge.

"Also, I will be expected to make a speech," I said. "I must insist on absolutely no interruption while working on it." The management agreed readily to my two provisions.

That evening I was polishing my speech, entitled "Nature's Balance," which explained the sometimes tragic consequences when this balance is upset by well-meaning but incompetent meddlers. My door flew open and I looked up, annoyed at the management for allowing this interruption. Abel stood in the doorway. One arm was injured, for crude bloodstained bandages showed through the shredded sleeve of his shirt. In the other hand he carried a dip net. In the net, tangled in the mesh but still squirming and tearing viciously at the cords, was a Vanderk Piranha. It was eighteen inches long.

The mail is bringing me so many inquiries about how to grow good dahlias that I think the information I gave last year on proper preparation of the dahlia bed is worth repeating. This should be done in February, even though your plants do not go into the ground for another couple of months.

Spade steer manure into the soil now and use a little bone meal because it requires considerable time to begin its work. At the same time, impregnate soil sulphur into the soil, 2 pounds to 100 square feet (a space 10x10 feet). Soil sulphur begins immediately to release minute quantities of sulphuric acid and, through a phase of decomposition that takes place, this sulphuric acid becomes the working element that releases other mineral elements which are not usually available in our highly alkaline soil. If you will prepare your dahlia bed in this way six weeks prior to planting, you should have marvelous sturdy dahlias in the fall.

Soil should be thoroughly soaked around roots following transplanting. Simple rules assure successful job.

By John Ronson

ONE OF THE MOST important, but less familiar, gardening practices is transplanting. The process is certainly not complicated; it consists simply of moving plants from one growing location to another.

The rules governing transplanting are few, yet they must be followed carefully. Proper adherence to them will make it possible for you to transfer a bare patch of land into a living bouquet . . . in just a few hours.

Not all garden subjects lend themselves readily to being transplanted. Specimens with a single taproot such as a carrot or a parsnip, for example, are difficult to move. It should also be stated that fast growing annuals such as alyssum, Virginia stocks, nasturtium and other comparable plants grow so quickly from seed that transplanting is just not part of their recommended culture.

But for most types of garden ornamentals, transplanting is the way to save time, money and to accomplish better results faster. When and how to transplant and why are essential steps to an orderly and well kept garden.

THE BEST TIME for transplanting is during the coolest part of the day, preferably when the skies are overcast and when evaporation is at a minimum. Exposing the roots to the sun or wind for any prolonged period will lead to disastrous results. The ball of earth surrounding the plant roots must be kept intact, otherwise the roots will be exposed. This condition is usually responsible for the setback so often suffered when seedlings are transplanted.

Before setting the plants in their new position, it is advisable to thoroughly moisten the ground, then cultivate it when mellow. Moisture stored in the ground will move upwards through the root zone by capillary action.

AMATEUR GARDENERS often insist on picking out the largest transplants available. This refers not only to shrubs but also to seedlings such as vegetable and flower plants. This is not necessarily smart and often it may be the wrong thing to do. This is because the younger specimens usually transplant better, suffering less of a shock than the older plants. In addition, you will be wise to choose the bushy specimens, rather than the tall spindly ones.

Make certain that the soil is firmed well around the roots after planting. Otherwise, air pockets may form. This condition will produce a drying of the roots with a constant failure of the plant to absorb moisture from the soil; also, sufficient anchorage for the plant will be lacking. Then water well if the soil is dry and add a peat mulch to the surface to prevent drying.

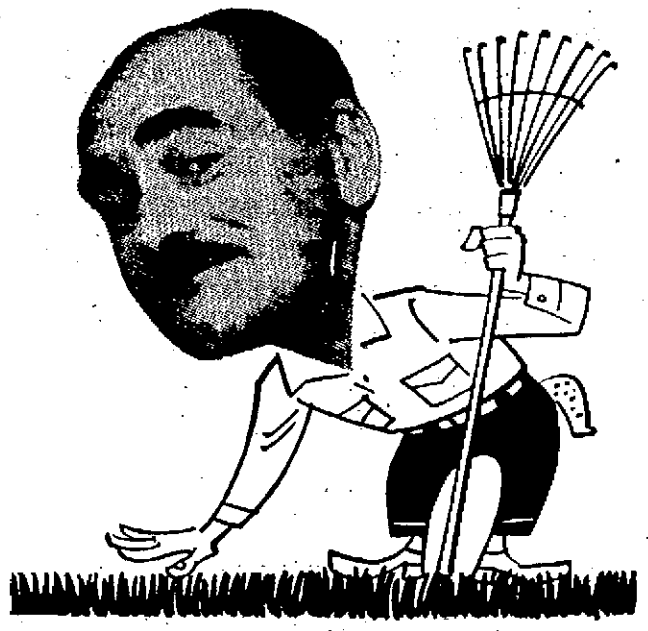

For large plants you should make a water basin around the main trunk. This basin may be filled with water and the water allowed to subside; then fill again and add dry soil to bring the level of the planting hole up even with the surface. Adding dry soil or a mulch should prevent crusting and reduce surface evaporation.

TEDD THOMEY

THAT FRIED chicken aroma which surrounds Eaton's Chicken House is sort of like radar. It helps you zero in on where you're going.

Anybody lucky enough to be driving or walking in the vicinity of 700 E. 45th St. (near Atlantic Ave.) is just naturally guided to Eaton's by that ummmm, good! fragrance.

Eaton's — owned by Charlie Eaton—is a large and decorous structure dedicated to glorifying the American chicken. Thanks to the careful coordination of Eaton, his personable manager-hostess Mary Bower and expert chef Gerry Javier, this restaurant puts out a $2.60 chicken dinner which is so glamorous that it causes Long Beach mamas and grandmamas to cheerfully admit they can't do as well.

THE PRICE includes choice of chicken broth, cream of tomato or cream of mushroom soup, or a giant tossed green salad with choice of dressing. The golden brown, disjointed and super-meaty chicken is served in stainless steel pans which keep it hot at the table. It is accompanied by creamy whipped potatoes with absolutely perfect old-fashioned chicken gravy and steaming hot biscuits with butter, honey and apple butter. Also included is your choice of Sanka, tea, coffee, milk, buttermilk or Postum and your choice of numerous elaborate desserts, from pies to custards and angel cake.

The chicken dinner can also be ordered a la carte for $2. A child's portion is $1.85. In addition, Eaton's features such complete dinners as the Toad in the Hole ($3.40), a filet mignon in a mammoth baked potato, and broiled stuffed jumbo shrimp ($2.75).

Fred Collins, an outstanding mixologist, presides over Eaton's beautiful cocktail lounge. Large banquet facilities are on the second floor, available for service clubs or private parties. Luncheon meetings are accommodated as well as dinner groups. The restaurant is open from noon to 10 p.m. Sundays; 4:30 to 10 p.m., daily.

55 facts you should know about the food you eat—page 8

LLEWELLYN E. THOMPSON, JR.—Our most important ambassador page 12

PIONEER PILOT Ruth Nichols, shown with Colonel F. G. Hook, has been flying since 1924, has set several distance and altitude records. Recently, with Colonel Hook as co-pilot, she became the first woman to fly above 50,000 feet.

I'll always remember . . .

'Get back into the air'

by RUTH NICHOLS

To the public, I suppose I often have seemed to be the original "flying fool." While flying over 140 different models of aircraft, I have piloted a plane in a plaster cast and steel corset, too impatient to wait for bones to knit from the last crash. I have frozen my tongue sucking oxygen at 60 below zero, six miles up. I have escaped twice from burning planes. I have clung to a life raft in cold, mountainous seas. And after each disaster there came the command from something deep within me: Get back into the air . . .

Recently I had to try my hand at flying a twin-engine jet plane taking off from Westchester Airport (N.Y.). I was among a small group of aviation enthusiasts who went out to inspect the new plane, a French Mauraine-Saulnier.

The French pilot was delighted when he found I could speak his language, aeronautically and otherwise. We were off with a whoosh, up in a flash and the pilot invited me to take over the controls.

Never before, even in those moments of heady exhilaration during my early flights, have I experienced the sensation of complete and incredible freedom that came as we streaked through the upper air in complete silence — no propeller sound, no vibration, only the glorious feeling of being suspended in space.

From a great height I looked back at the adventures of my life up to now, the heavenly highs and dismal lows, the eternal struggle to go on and up again, the fears, the doubts, the uncertainties — and all at once they seemed to fall into a pattern.

After years of asking myself why I was compelled to batter my body and spirit with this insatiable urge to fly, I seemed to find the answer. In this way only could I weld the two sides of my nature — the adventurous Viking spirit of my father and the humanitarianism of my Quaker ancestors. Through flight came joy, new perspectives, new frontiers of the mind and heart for the people of the earth.

When finally I depart this earthly sphere for good, I should like it to be in a final burst of flight, farther and higher than any human ever has gone before, somewhere in the infinite mystery of outer space, where at least I can see where I am going . . . ■

On Parade

On Monday a subject vital to our health and national welfare takes the spotlight when the National Food Conference meets in Washington, D.C. Here's what Charles B. Shuman, Conference Chairman and President of the American Farm Bureau Federation told PARADE:

"Americans need to eat better to live better. Many of us have drifted away from the traditional custom of parents and children eating together, overlooking the importance of the mealtime ritual in building family ties. PARADE's articles (pp. 6-9) will contribute to a better informed and healthier nation."

Today's cover consists of two photos by Peter Schmid paired to make a remarkable picture — quite apropos of Editor Jess Gorkin's article on U.S. Embassy conditions in the Soviet Union (pp. 12-14). To make the composite, Schmid's photo of U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson, Jr., was superimposed on a shot of policemen walking in Red Square.

One of the things that impressed Gorkin during his recent visit was the fact that American youngsters in Moscow haven't a decent place to play. One of their pastimes is walking the wall of the Embassy's rear yard, as shown below.

An information-packed article about your baby's care, feeding, growth and fun.

Can You Teach Your Baby To Talk?

You're a speech teacher long before your baby says his first word! "Mothers start influencing a child's speech from the day he is born," says Flora Rheta Schreiber in a fascinating new book, Your Child's Speech (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1956). "Mother's arms, the tone of her voice, the aura of warmth she creates—these affect the way a child breathes and eats. They also affect the way he makes sounds and learns to speak." Through food, baby first finds pleasure and makes happy gurgling noises called "comfort" sounds! Soon he murmurs vowel sounds as he plays.

● Teaching tips: As you hand baby a toy dog, say its chief sound—"awg"—then say "dog." He gradually mimics your words and your tone (is it sweet and low or twangy and high?). Don't try to hurry baby's talking. Early or late—when his ear, mind and muscles are ready—a healthy, happy baby will talk.

● It's a tossup who's having more fun—father or baby! Just remind Dad: No roughhouse on a full tummy or right before bedtime.

● When you're "expecting"—why do you sometimes get special cravings for certain foods? You'll find the answer to this and hundreds of other questions in Heinz authoritative new book, "The ABC's of Prenatal Care." For your free copy, send your name and address to Heinz Baby Foods, Box 28, D-23, Pittsburgh 30, Pa.

● There's twice as much protein in Heinz exclusive new High-Protein Cereal than in regular baby cereals. Let your baby enjoy this nourishing dish with the pleasant nut-like taste soon. To fix it, just mix with milk or formula.

● Why does Heinz have exclusive baby-food kitchens in the nation's garden spots, right where the finest fruits and vegetables grow? So Heinz specialists can select the pick of each crop and pack it at flavor peak. That's how Heinz Baby Foods get their famous better color, perfect texture and finer flavor.

● Baby's face in the mirror is good company! Put him where he can laugh and play with his copy-cat friend.

● Delicious new time-saver: Strained Potatoes in a jar. They taste just like baby's buttery baked potato—but let you forget that daily baking-peeling-mashing chore! Fluffy, smooth Strained Potatoes—a Heinz Exclusive—are a fine source of energy (which your baby needs in his business!), plus Vitamin B_1, Niacin and Vitamin C—for his glowing good health. Later on, Strained Potatoes encourage baby's first tries at self-feeding; they don't go sliding off his spoon!

IN THE PULPIT, the Rev. Rankin Shrewsbury begins service. Only 36, he is the pastor of Daytona Beach's oldest church.

BEHIND THE WHEEL, racing minister receives a trophy for setting speed record. At age 10, he drove a model T Ford.

This minister sets speed records

But religion is first with the Florida champ

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.

For the Rev. Rankin L. Shrewsbury, pastor of the First Congregational Church here, religion comes first—but auto racing runs a close second. In his few spare moments from the pulpit, the "sky pilot" pilots stock cars—and sets records at the wheel.

Two of his records are at stake in the International Safety and Performance Trials now being conducted here by the National Association for Stock Cars. Rev. Shrewsbury set the first as an unknown two years ago, borrowing a Ford Thunderbird and hitting 128.196 m.p.h. Last year, in a borrowed Pontiac, he was clocked at 139.9 m.p.h. This year, in a Pontiac again, he will try to beat his old mark.

The minister has been driving since he was 10, worked his way through seminary as a mechanic. He sees nothing unusual in his choice of hobby, thinks supervised racing is good for teenagers because it teaches safety as well as skill and has a moral lesson. "The good, safe driver," he says, "is the one who practices the Golden Rule." ■

WITH HIS FAMILY, the minister poses for a camera portrait. Besides church duties, he heads a mental-health association.

ON THE TRACK, Rev. Shrewsbury flashes by finish. This year, he was chosen city's "Young Man of the Year"—as a minister, not as a racer.

A new look at your food habits

THE AUTHOR, an anthropologist, is a leading observer of U.S. family life.

by MARGARET MEAD
Professor of Anthropology, Columbia University

Editor's note: Tomorrow President Eisenhower will open the National Food Conference in Washington. The conference of physicians, nutritionists and business leaders aims at reawakening the public to diet essentials. In timely recognition of this objective, PARADE presents the article below. Also see the special article starting on page 8.

Twenty years ago, it was said that one-third of America's people were ill-fed. Since then, there has been a tremendous change in nutrition. We have become a people rich in easily available good food. And still most people worry about what to eat, when to eat, how to eat and how much to eat.

When it comes to food, Americans are confused — needlessly confused and even sometimes dangerously confused. Nutrition has to do simply with a balanced diet for health's and enjoyment's sake. Yet Americans often decide what to eat not on the basis of what they like or what's good for them, but on the basis of attitudes having little to do with food.

Thus, the question of eating becomes bound up with questions of good and evil, duty and punishment, parents and children, love and hatred, beauty and health.

The Housewives' Dilemma

Think of the confusions surrounding the ordinary housewife:

She is urged to show her love for her family by feeding them lavishly on things they love. At the same time, she is supposed to show her love for them by remaining slim and girlish. She is told that, if she wants her husband to live long, she should be sure he doesn't overeat. If she is concerned about her children's growth, she should limit sweets and be sure the youngsters get plenty of proteins. But if she wants to show she loves them, she should feed them cookies and cake.

What causes these contradictions? They are not so hard to understand when we go back into history. America's attitudes toward food have remained the same, while our actual food situation has shifted from too little and too poor in quality to adequate supplies.

From our New England ancestors we've inherited a grim attitude toward food: if you eat enough food that is good for you, but doesn't taste good, then you can eat a little of the food that tastes good, but is not good for you. Much of this attitude lingers on; things that taste good, really good, are suspect.

In the Southeast a different attitude prevailed. A person could say, "I don't like onions" or "onions don't like me," and the loving mother and wife would listen. It was considered bad form to force people to eat food with which they were not on good terms.

California and parts of the Southwest presented a third picture. Vegetables and salads and brown bread became accepted by people who had moved from the East and wanted to enjoy the food and climate of a land of sunshine.

Then immigrants brought with them their own national attitudes towards food: Swiss children were made to eat a little of everything, to be good citizens. German children had to finish everything on their plates or expect the leftovers back again and again. French children were overstuffed and then required to learn moderation, on which enjoyment of food was believed to depend. Italian children were lovingly urged to eat and eat and be strong.

Finally, appetizing pictures of food, glowing with color and described in colorful terms like crispy, golden, bright red, have had a great influence also. Men and children wanted the kind of food they saw in pictures; women served food that looked like the pictures. People came to trust their eyes as much as their sense of taste.

So the aim of the modern housewife has come to be to make food look — and to some extent, taste — like something it isn't. Then she can appear to be the kind of housewife who simultaneously provides nourishing food, delicious food and food with not too many calories. Nutrition and eating have grown poles apart.

How, in this maze of contradictions, can we make sure that children develop good eating habits and that their parents eat enough — and not too much — of good, nourishing food? Research on the psychology of eating habits has shown that the best way is to clear away the thicket of attitudes that are not directly related to food.

Five Important Pointers

These are things to remember:

- Food should not be used as a reward or bribe, or be withheld as punishment.
- Food should not be used to prove to children that you love them after you have been cross and irritable to them.
- Food should not be depended upon to bring home a husband who feels his wife has grown tired of what he has to say.
- Food should not become a battleground, pitting mother against child.
- The more ways food is used to do something besides give straightforward, hearty enjoyment, the more the danger that children will develop wrong eating habits, that adults will undereat or overeat. The most sensible attitude toward food is a simple enjoyment of good nourishing meals and a developed sense of how much is enough. Psychology has shown that this attitude develops in families which enjoy together a varied but balanced diet and do not clutter up meals with emotional scenes.

In today's world, where there is so much variety in food, a wide-ranging appetite is a safeguard. Very narrow food likes can be dangerous, but a few dislikes don't matter very much. But genuine enjoyment of food for itself is the best guarantee of making good food choices. ■

55 important facts you should know about food

Confused about what foods are best for you? Here is an experts' primer of straight talk about diet and health

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

As Dr. Margaret Mead points out on page 6, the U.S. is a land where food is plentiful — and yet Americans have astonishing eating problems. One family in three, for instance, fails to get the right amount of calcium. One in four is short of vitamin C. One in six doesn't get enough vitamin A.

What causes these deficits in diet? Not shortages of food, in a land of bumper crops. Not shortages of funds, in a land as rich as ours. The main reason is a shortage of information — in spite of millions of words published annually about food.

Many Americans simply don't know what to eat. Some are slaves to outdated ideas about food left over from history. Others cling to misguided beliefs which have no basis in science. Some skip from fad to fad. Most, perhaps, are just plain confused.

What are the facts about the food you eat? Authorities at the National Food Conference, meeting tomorrow in Washington, will try to spell them out. Here, in advance, are the basics suggested to PARADE by nutrition experts. They outline the fundamentals of diet and set the record straight about food fads. Taken together, they add up to 55 important facts about food every American should know.

"HARMFUL" FOODS — Do they really injure your health? This is how experts answer:

1) Mixing starches, proteins and fats at the same meal is not harmful. In fact, it is practically impossible to avoid doing this in a well-balanced meal.

2) There is no sound evidence that eggs, butter and milk cause hardening of the arteries or heart trouble.

3) White bread is not harmful to the body. Many white breads are enriched with milk nutrients.

4) Salt is not fattening. It serves merely to retain fluids in the body. And iodized salt is vital in preventing goiter, a disease of the thyroid gland.

5) There is no universally accepted evidence that chemicals used in processed foods are harmful. These chemicals still are under careful study.

Which bread is more healthful, white or whole wheat?

"HEALTH" FOODS — Are they really more valuable than other foods? Here's what experts say:

6) Yoghurt is nutritionally as valuable as the milk from which it was made.

7) The "magic" attributed to blackstrap molasses is unfounded. Nutritionally, it is no more valuable than diluted sugar sirup.

8) Soybeans are a good source of protein, but the idea that they have special life-giving properties is not accepted.

9) Vegetable juices contain no more nutrients than the vegetables from which they were taken.

10) Nutritionally, honey is equal to ordinary refined sugar, but no available evidence indicates it is better.

FOOD IN OTHER FORMS — Are our soils depleted? What damage is done by fertilizing, processing, freezing, cooking? The experts tell you:

11) Overall, U.S. soils do not yield second-rate food. Soils vary, and Americans eat foods grown in many areas — thus benefiting from "trace elements," or minerals, which occur in those areas.

12) Chemical fertilizers and insecticides, when used scientifically, produce foods fully as nutritious as those produced by so-called "organic" fertilizers.

13) Frozen foods have essentially the same nutritional value as fresh foods.

14) In canning, the vitamin content of food is preserved to a large extent.

15) Canned citrus juices are likely to have more uniform vitamin-C content than fresh citrus fruits. That's because canners must meet rigid standards and the content of their products can be controlled.

16) Prolonged cooking of foods is likely to destroy their vitamin content.

17) Boiling vegetables and fruits in large amounts of water does wash out vitamins. Vegetables should be prepared with a minimum of water; the water left should be used in soup.

WHAT TO EAT WHEN — Should your intake change with age? Are bedtime snacks harmful to digestion? Can dieting damage your health? The experts say:

18) If you reach your proper weight at age 25, you must decrease your intake 10 per cent every decade to age 55 to maintain proper weight.

19) Dieting without medical supervision can lead to sickness and even endanger life.

20) An excess of one type of food can lead to trouble.

21) A pound of body fat taxes your circulation just as though it were a 1-lb. sack of sand.

Oils, fats and greens: how often should you eat them?

22) A fat man breathes two or three times more per minute than a thin man. That's one reason his heart and lungs are likely to "wear out" sooner.

23) Except for growing children, midnight icebox raids can lead to obesity.

24) A good substantial breakfast can help you work better in the morning and cut down irritability.

25) A good, filling dessert actually can help your waistline — by decreasing desire for snacks.

26) Heavy eating before bedtime may tax the digestive system and bring on discomfort.

27) A pregnant woman does not need additional calories during the first five months of her pregnancy.

28) A nursing mother does need enough calories for her own nutrition, plus enough to replace the milk nutrients taken by the baby.

FOODS TO GROW ON — How much food does your child need? Which ones furnish the essentials? What does balanced diet do for his hea ? The experts say:

29) A growing girl aged 10 to 12 needs almost twice as much food as her grandmother, aged 55 or older.

30) A growing boy aged 15 to 19 requires as much food as a 35-year-old heavy laborer.

31) Milk and cheese, which provide calcium, are needed for bone strength and tooth development. After age 16, milk products probably are not so important as in earlier years.

32) Most cheese is on a food-value par with milk. Cheeses supply much the same nutrients and can be used as a milk substitute.

33) Soft ice cream supplies most of the value of milk but does not have milk's butterfat content.

34) Leafy vegetables — lettuce, spinach, cabbage — are the most important source of vitamin A, which helps to keep your child's skin smooth and aids vision. They also supply some vitamin C and minerals.

35) Roughly the same nutrients are present in other vegetables. Potatoes also help maintain the body's acid-alkali balance.

36) Meat, fish and fowl are important sources of protein, fat and the B vitamins, which are valuable in preventing diet diseases like beri-beri.

37) Vitamin C, found mainly in citrus and other fruits, is needed to help maintain your child's blood vessels, build healthy gums and keep the body's glandular network functioning properly.

38) Vitamin C also is found in cabbage, other leafy vegetables, bananas, cherries and apples.

39) The sugars in these fruits are just as valuable to the body as refined sugar.

40) Cherries contain the highest percentage of natural sugar — about 20 per cent of total volume. Apples contain 18 per cent, most other fruits 10 to 12 per cent.

41) In addition to vitamin B, meats contain iron, important to the manufacture of red blood cells.

Here's where you get iron, calcium and protein. How important are they in adult diets?

42) Meat juice is nutritionally less valuable than meat itself, in spite of stories about its healing powers.

43) Pork is the highest in vitamin B-1 content of all meats.

44) Mineral content in the meat of young animals is higher than in meat of older animals. This is why lamb chops are a highly recommended item of diet.

45) Fatty beef can contain more calories than lean pork.

46) Nuts contain high-quality nutrients. Walnuts are highest in certain valuable unsaturated acids.

Is much nutrition destroyed when these are cooked?

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Is fish really "brain food"? On the subject of long-cherished beliefs, the experts say this:

47) Fish is a valuable food, but it will not make you any smarter.

48) Such bizarre food combinations as ice cream and pickles are not harmful.

49) Warm milk at bedtime may taste good, but it has no special curative powers.

50) Spinach contains iron and some vitamin A, but otherwise has no special virtues.

51) Alcoholic beverages have little effect in cooling or warming the body.

52) Large quantities of cool drinks in hot weather do not affect body temperature significantly.

53) Good-quality hot dogs and hamburgers are better for children than sweet carbonated drinks.

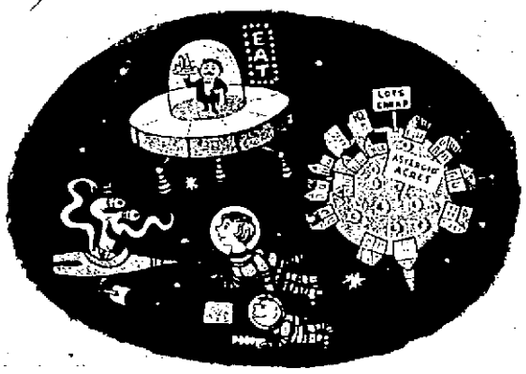

MOST IMPORTANT OF ALL: Asked to sum up their findings on two additional facts, the nutrition experts suggest you remember these above all:

54) Good nutrition depends on balance — of what the experts call "The Basic Seven."

55) These include meat, fish and poultry; whole grain and enriched flour products; leafy green vegetables; yellow vegetables; citrus and other fruits; dairy products; oils and fats. Some of each of these should be included in your diet every day for the best possible eating in terms of your health. ■ memo:

to U.S. CONGRESS AND NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV from JESS GORKIN, EDITOR OF PARADE

subject U.S. Embassy in Moscow

EDITOR GORKIN (standing) gets first-hand briefing as Ambassador Thompson shows areas outside Moscow closed to U.S. personnel.

I recently overheard two American boys living in Moscow say to each other:

"Tim, how much longer do you have to stay here?"

"Eight months more, Mike."

"Boy, are you lucky! We still have 13 months to serve in this jail."

Tim and Mike, both 12, are the sons of American Embassy personnel assigned to Moscow for two years. What the kids say reflects the view of virtually all Americans stationed here under the most adverse and restricted conditions. Aside from the presence of secret police and travel restrictions, living is extremely difficult because of below-par housing and insufficient recreation facilities for children and adults.

The 10-story Embassy building on Tchaikowsky Street is only about five years old. But it looks ancient. The brick walls are crumbling, floors squeak and the plaster is cracking. The only items sure to be replaced are the many microphones the Russians conceal in the building.

This "new" edifice was constructed in a hurry by order of Josef Stalin. Shortly before his death, he reportedly glanced through his Kremlin window one day and noticed the Stars and Stripes flying from the U.S. Embassy across Red Square. Stalin gave the order to "clean up the scenery"—which meant moving the Embassy to its present site, well out of optical range. The Soviets were in such a hurry that they used Red Army troops for construction gangs which worked in shifts around the clock—even in the dread cold of the Russian winter.

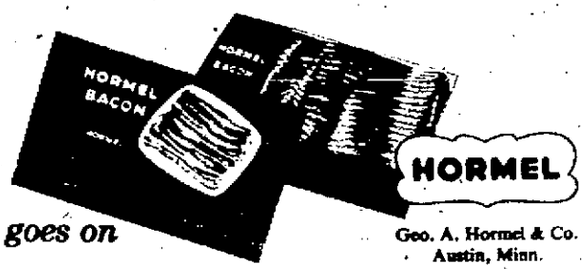

Llewellyn Thompson, Jr., our able ambassador (see cover) is in no official position to attack this difficult question. But he, and others, are aware of the answer to this morale—and prestige—problem. What is it? Turn to page 14.

CLIMBING GATE at rear entrance of U.S. Embassy (above) is a dangerous pastime, but these American youngsters prefer it to playing in the yard. Muddy sandbox (below) is hardly satisfying to Embassy children who have to play in the barren-looking yard with prison-like wall.

Who Says The Pope CAN'T BE WRONG?

"The Pope," Bill Brown declared, "is just a man—like you and me. How can you Catholics believe he can't be wrong?"

Bill's challenge came as no surprise to his Catholic friend, Ed. Johnson. For Ed. knew, as most Catholics do, that the doctrine of Papal infallibility sounds presumptuous and incredible to people who do not understand it.

"Remember, Bill," he replied, "what Christ promised Peter? . . . that His church would be divinely protected against error — that 'the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' That promise, Bill, was to the first Pope, and all the Popes have been his direct and lawful successors, heirs to the same promise."

But, Ed. went on to explain, Christ did not make Peter incapable of human error. And Papal infallibility does not mean that the Pope is always right in all things. It does not mean his freedom from all human shortcomings. Nor does it make him an unerring authority on science, the state of the nation, or how to build a house.

"The Pope," Ed. continued, "is divinely preserved from error only when acting in his official capacity as successor to St. Peter, and promulgating to the whole Church a decision on a matter of faith and morals. Even then, three conditions must apply:

"(1) The Pope must be speaking ex cathedra . . . that is, from the Chair of Peter, in his official capacity; (2) the decision must be for the whole Church; (3) it must be on a matter of faith and morals."

The Pope, of course, has no authority to introduce a new doctrine. He is not the author of revelation—only its interpreter and expounder. He has no power to distort a single word of Scripture, no more right than you or I to break a divine law. His function is to protect and preserve divine truth and hand it down unchanged to future generations.

"Today, Bill, as you know," Ed. Johnson concluded, "the Christian world is divided by numerous differences of doctrine. It is a great assurance for Catholics to be able to depend upon the teaching and interpretation of one whose office is of apostolic origin and divinely protected against error."

New program could be 'a real step toward easing tensions'

Tackling the problem of poor living conditions, low morale and the prestige of U.S. Government personnel and their families in Moscow should receive top priority. As one Embassy official told me: "If the Kremlin will cooperate in alleviating this situation, it certainly could be interpreted as a real step toward easing tensions between ourselves and the Soviet Union." Last month's U.S.-Russian agreement on cultural and other exchanges was such a step. This would be another.

Here are four possible approaches:

1) A recreation center for U.S. personnel is basic. Today, the 45 American children must play in the rubbish and mud of the walled-in yard at the rear of the Embassy building.

Twenty miles from Moscow, the Embassy has a "country home" for recreation. Even though it is totally inadequate, it is booked for weeks in advance by fun-starved Americans.

Two difficult hurdles stand in the way of the recreation center. To build it, we must obtain a long-term lease from the Russian government and an appropriation from the U.S. Congress.

Closet-sized Rooms

2) Better living quarters are urgently needed. In addition to the apartments in the Embassy building, some staff members live in America House — a former funeral home located next to a cement factory. This building has a few residential cubicles about the size of "walk-in" closets in the United States. The Kremlin refuses to allow the 85 members of the American Embassy to rent living quarters elsewhere in Moscow.

3) Travel restrictions should be lifted. In addition to their unique housing problem, American Embassy personnel are confined to a 25-mile radius of the Soviet capital — and even parts of this zone are closed to them. Excellent recreation areas are within the closed zone. In order to travel outside the proscribed area, Embassy personnel must submit a note to the Soviet Foreign Office and follow a prescribed route. On one occasion, an Embassy group was given permission to drive to a nearby town. En route, policemen were noticed at various points along the road. Suddenly the car had a flat tire and the driver stopped to fix it. Within a few minutes two police cars sped up to see why the Americans had not passed the next check point within the expected time.

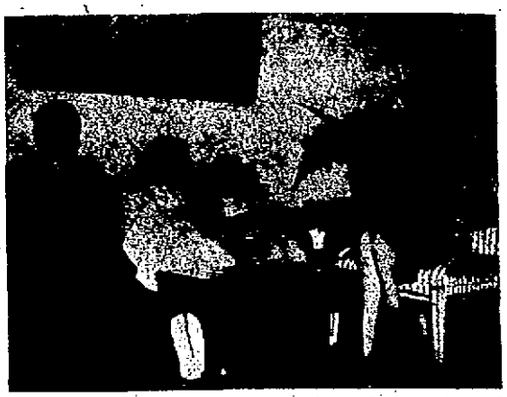

4) Constant check by Soviet secret police is a real harrassment. Embassy staff members are followed wherever they go — even shopping. In recent years, hidden microphones have been discovered at the Embassy. This unremitting watchfulness applies to all U.S. embassies in Iron Curtain countries.

Ambassador Thompson is greatly concerned about his hard-working staff. He knows that the lack of recreation and other diversion is extremely hard on morale, but he cannot make headway against the faceless, tone-deaf Soviet bureaucracy.

The Ambassador himself lives at Spaso House, formerly the home of a wealthy pre-revolutionary Russian merchant. The house has handsome appointments, including a ballroom suitable for entertaining. Three times a week his garden and ballroom are used for kindergarten and on other occasions for ballet class.

No stranger to Russia, Thompson was in Moscow during the dark days of World War II when Hitler's armies hammered at the city's gates. He was then secretary and consul in the Embassy and the fact that he stayed behind when other Embassy officials moved to Kuibyshev, the provisional capital, greatly impressed the Russians.

Today, at 53, career diplomat Thompson fights the cold war with quiet determination. He begins his day at Spaso House listening to an early morning BBC broadcast and reading the State Department daily news bulletins. He next takes a lesson in the Russian language — even though he speaks it fluently. He usually winds up his day at the office at 7:30 p.m., after which he may attend a reception or visit with other diplomats. The Thompsons have two daughters, Jenny, 8, and Sherry, 4. Mrs. Thompson's daughter by her first marriage goes to school in the States.

FAMILY GROUP in Spaso House includes Ambassador and Mrs. Thompson, daughters Jenny and Sherry. Sprawling 21-room official residence is hard to heat in the winter.

Thompson is soft-spoken, almost self-effacing in his manner, and the State Department considers him one of its top-flight diplomats. He has shown unusual ability to deal with difficult situations in his previous posts: Ceylon, Switzerland and Austria.

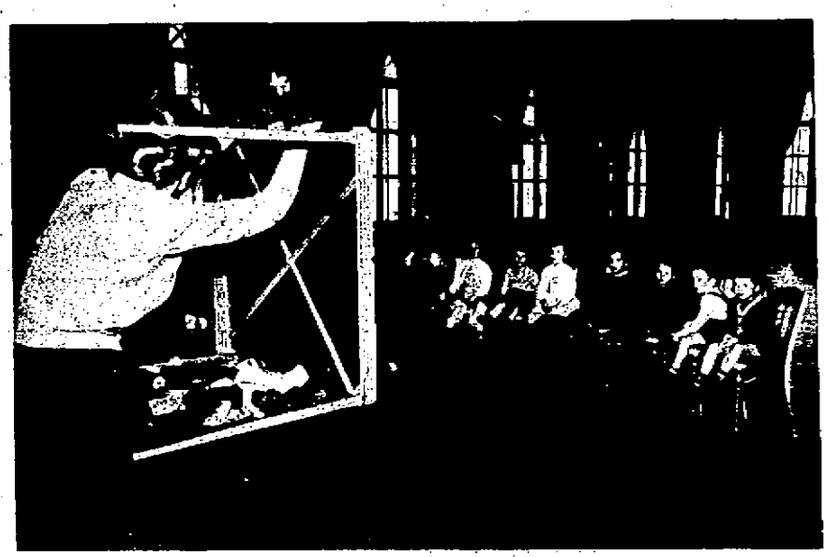

There is no question he could do an even more effective job in Moscow if the numerous harrassing situations were reduced. The United States would like to abolish all restrictions for Embassy personnel on a reciprocal basis. But the Kremlin will not agree.

The following statement by Senator Homer Capehart of Indiana underscores the need for action:

"When visiting Moscow last fall, I was shocked by the unpleasant living conditions endured by our Embassy personnel and their families. Overcrowded apartments, dilapidated buildings, restrictions on travel, lack of recreational facilities, constant surveillance — these are just a few of the factors that plague our nation's official representatives in Moscow. Inevitably, this prison-like life takes its toll of the spirit and energy of our people in this key post. An adequate recreation center, for example, would be a good place to start.

"I sincerely hope immediate steps will be taken — in Moscow and Washington — to provide some relief for our official family in Moscow. Their welfare should be the concern of all Americans." ■

BLONDE GOVERNESS improvises Punch-and-Judy show for pre-school youngsters. Ballroom of Spaso House also is used for parties, ballet lessons, church services.

BACKYARD GARDEN of Spaso House is setting for a game of ring-around-the-rosy. Children have West German governesses. Older children attend overcrowded school.

ERIN O'BRIEN is her real name

Movie moguls said she had 'no talent'—

HOLLYWOOD.

Most talent pickers here have terrible batting averages. Through the years studio executives have "passed over" stars like Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe, Kim Novak, Bing Crosby, Spencer Tracy, Cary Grant.

The latest example of their "no talent" classification is Erin O'Brien, a 23-year-old, dark-haired Irish beauty who was born here, but had to go to New York to be discovered.

Erin, the first of Vincent and Betty O'Brien's 14 children, has a naturally lyrical voice. As a youngster she performed regularly with the Long Beach Philharmonic Orchestra. After graduation from St. Anthony's parochial school, she became one of the famous Walter Schumann Voices. But true to the Hollywood tradition of missing what lies under its nose, this colleen was consistently ignored — until last year.

In New York, on Arthur Godfrey's talent scout TV program, she sang one number, Only a Rose. She won hands down, and was signed for a week on the Godfrey morning show. From there, she went to Steve Allen's program — and fame. TV had discovered her.

Erin made so much news, that a well-known dramatic actress, Erin O'Brien Moore, demanded that Erin change her name. "How can you force me to change my real name?" Erin asked justifiably.

"My lucky break," says Erin, "was meeting Liberace. He talked his manager, Seymour Heller, into managing me. Since then, I've been off to the races."

"Not Enough Experience"

Heller turned down a six-month NBC-TV contract and submitted Erin for the lead in Warner Brothers' Marjorie Morningstar. "She doesn't have enough dramatic experience to play Morningstar," said director George Cukor, "but she's much too talented and beautiful not to be put under contract."

Ironically, the very same people who had ignored Erin O'Brien before now signed her for leads in TV westerns (Colt 45, Maverick and Cheyenne). A few months later her salary mounted to $500 a week; she was awarded the movie role of Andy Griffith's college girl friend in Onionhead; and Coral Records signed her to a contract. She has guested for top TV shows with George Gobel, Art Linkletter and Bob Hope.

Erin O'Brien finally has made the grade. But, success has its price. For Erin, it is her singer husband Jim Fitzpatrick and their two sons. This year between TV, stage, recording and motion pictures, she'll have little time with her "boys." "But in this business," says manager Heller, "an entertainer's got to strike while the iron is hot. Beauty doesn't last forever, not even with the luck of the Irish." ■

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

Start today's recipe with a sure favorite — chopped lean beef (familiarly known as hamburger). But serve it dressed up in a brand-new way with crisp poppy-seed pastry and a velvet-smooth sauce enlivened with sharp cheese and mustard. It's a dish to remember for year-round enjoyment. Begin dinner with hearty, piping-hot tomato soup. To accompany the High-Hat Hamburgers choose two colorful vegetables such as broccoli and carrots. Instead of salad, serve radishes and scallions (spring onions). And for dessert: lemon tapioca cream and packaged cookies.

ROLL PASTRY dough to ¼" thickness; cut six 5" circles. Coffee-can top is a perfect cutter.

RECIPE FOR HIGH-HAT HAMBURGERS

Pastry:

2 cups sifted enriched flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
½ cup milk (about)
poppy seed

Meat Balls:

1½ lbs. ground beef
¾ cup rolled oats, uncooked
½ cup chopped onion
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ cup milk

Sauce:

1 tall can (14½ oz.) evaporated milk
½ lb. sharp cheddar cheese, cubed
¼ teaspoon dry mustard

For the pastry: Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add milk, stirring only until flour is moistened. Roll out to ¼" thickness; cut six 5" circles. Brush lightly with more milk; sprinkle with poppy seed. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in hot oven (425°) 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown.

For the meat balls: Combine all ingredients; shape into 12 balls; chill. When ready to cook, roll in flour; brown in hot fat over medium heat. When browned, simmer over low heat about 15 minutes.

For the sauce: Scald milk over low heat. Add cubed cheese and mustard. Continue cooking about 5 more minutes, stirring to blend well.

To serve: Place meat balls on pastry circles and top with cheese sauce.

PARADE QUIZ

What's your leisure-time IQ?

by EARLE F. ZEIGLER
Dept. of Physical Education for Men,
University of Michigan

With more leisure time on our hands than ever, many Americans nevertheless troop to work on Monday morning and wonder: "Am I really getting as much fun out of my week ends — and evenings — as I should?"

Today's quiz should help you answer that question. On the right are four questions in each of five scientifically recognized categories of recreation. Question No. 1 in each category seeks to find if you are the spectator type, No. 2 if you engage more actively, No. 3 if you are a whole-hearted participant and No. 4 if you are an outstanding participant.

Answer yes or no to each question. Only yes answers count, and score as follows: 1 point for Question No. 1 in each category; 2 points for Question No. 2; 3 points for No. 3; 4 points for No. 4. A no answer counts nothing.

Put down your total number of points below each category then rate yourself in the box on the opposite page. Give the test to the whole family—and see who is using leisure time best.

4 Have you recently been elected an officer or committee chairman for any civic or social club?

COMMUNICATION

2 Do you stick up for a point of view even though it may mean a difference of opinion with a friend?

3 Have you, in recent months, written to an editor or public official expressing your opinion?

4 Have you given a talk lately or led a discussion at any church, school or civic meeting?

YOUR SCORE: _____

CULTURAL

2 Have you read at least three books or attended three concerts or art shows in the past year?

3 Do you paint, sketch, sing, play an instrument or otherwise perform "creatively"?

4 Have you ever entered any musical or other "art" competition?

YOUR SCORE: _____

SPORTS

2 Do you faithfully follow at least one team or athlete, rejoicing in victory and fretting over defeat?

3 Do you take part at least once a week in one or more active games or sports?

4 Are you considered one of the better players in any sport among opponents your age or younger?

YOUR SCORE: _____

HOBBIES

2 Can you intelligently discuss someone else's hobby, though you don't follow it yourself?

3 Do you more-or-less faithfully spend time on a hobby of your own?

4 Have you received a prize or any other recognition for a hobby?

YOUR SCORE: _____

How You Rate

In each category a score of 7 to 10 is superior, 4 to 6 is good, 2 to 3 is fair, 0 to 1 poor. See in which categories you're weak, and aim to improve.

Now add up all your points. From 35 to 50 — you're getting nearly every second of fun out of your leisure time. From 24 to 34 — you're using spare time wisely, knowing when to quit for more business-like things. From 14 to 23 — you either have too much interest in one kind of recreation or are only a passive spectator in all types. Less than 13? Wake up — and live! ■

She's been married 14 times

Beverly Shufflebarger

by PATRICK DALTON

Beverly Shufflebarger, a small, gray-eyed blonde from Norfolk, Va., maintains that it's easy for any girl to catch a husband.

At 48, Beverly has hooked 14. She married her first in Oakland, Calif., when she was 16; she divorced her last a few weeks ago in Los Angeles.

Well on her way to becoming the world's champion divorcée, this wispy woman insists she will try one more marriage, her 15th. If that doesn't work, she'll call it quits.

"The problem," she recently explained to me in her lawyer's office, "is not in finding a husband. Any girl can do that. Husbands are a dime a dozen. The trick is to stay married. Somehow I just haven't been able to manage that. I've really tried. But I seem to marry the wrong men. I have two sisters who are happily married, but I can't seem to make it. Yet, I'm just as normal as they are."

None of Beverly Shufflebarger's 14 marriages has lasted more than two-and-a-half years. They range from one night to 30 months, have been lived in Key West, Yuma, Cleveland, Wilmington, Oakland, Tucson, Pasadena, practically every section of the country. In her 14 marriages, Beverly has known 12 husbands. "Two of them married me twice. The second time, each was worse than the first. I guess there's a quality in me that simply brings out the beast in men."

Where does this reed of a lady (5' 1", 90 lbs.) manage to meet prospective husbands?

How to Locate Husbands

"Most of all," she says, "on the job, in eating places or churches, although one of my husbands was a good friend of another husband of mine. I've worked," Beverly confides, "as a restaurant hostess, as a hat-check girl in a night club ("I later married the owner") and as a saleswoman. When I hear about a woman who can't find a husband, I know that she's simply working in the wrong job.

"All men want to get married. They've got it on their minds. Take Mr. Christopher, one of my early husbands. I met him in Philadelphia in a Western Union office. We were both sending telegrams. He struck up a conversation and invited me next door for a cup of coffee. Then, while we were drinking it, he suddenly said, 'I think you're awfully cute. Why don't we go to Wilmington, Del., and get married?' I said, 'Okay!' And that's how it happened. It only lasted a night; but that should give you a small idea of how anxious most men really are to get married."

Although several of her husbands have held well-paying jobs — one was a welder, another an engineer, another a real-estate agent — Beverly received alimony from only three. One paid $25 a month for six months, another $25 a week for three months. A third paid $25 a month for one year.

Once she divorces a husband, Beverly drops him completely, except for using his name. She remembers most of her married names: DeMilo, Monroe, Colton, Howard, Mangone, O'Malley, Christopher, Rosecrans, Avery, etc., but only nine or 10 of the husbands that go with them. "Oh!" she exclaims, "how I used to mope over those men. Now I just banish them from my memory."

Having married men of different religions, nationalities and pursuits, Beverly says she is prepared to make only one generalization about husbands. "At the start," she says, "they're all kind and considerate. But after a few months, they begin to act as if they're trapped. That's what happened to me. Maybe if I'd had children, it would have been different."

Luck of a Loser

Beverly Shufflebarger dresses demurely, uses make-up sparingly, talks softly. There is nothing forward or provocative in her behavior. When she admits that in addition to her marriages she also turned down 60 other marriage proposals in the past 32 years, she does so modestly. She asserts that she's always been honest with her husbands, informing each of his small army of predecessors.

She seems genuinely aggravated about the failure of her marital attempts and doesn't like to discuss them. "I'm just an unlucky woman," she says. "My parents separated when I was four. I was raised by my grandmother and never knew what a happy home life really was."

Has she ever been told, I asked Beverly, that her compulsion to marry in such haste and quantity might be neurotic?

"Yes," she admitted. "A doctor told me once that I was a glutton for punishment. And the judge who granted one of my divorces said, 'Marriage is a bad habit with you, and I don't think you'll ever break it. You're the only 12-time loser I ever heard of. It's a disgrace.' That judge was so mean, he made me cry. Somehow, all the men I get mixed up with are mean." ■

Foreign students help others understand us

by JAMES M. DAVIS
Director, International Center, University of Michigan

Dr. Davis is one of the planners of International Students Day, which occurs Thursday at Lansing for the 4,000 foreigners attending Michigan schools of higher learning.

I was on a round-the-world trip, visiting young people in 25 countries who had studied at American schools. Before I left Ann Arbor, a Japanese government researcher working for an advanced degree at the University of Michigan asked me to look up his mother, wife and two small children in Tokyo.

While visiting his family in Japan, I told them, through an interpreter, of their loved one's work, how he was living and spending his time.

His family were extremely polite. They nodded, they smiled. In their hospitality, I sensed a genuine warmth. Yet somehow I felt that they were not too interested in my report. I was a bit puzzled, until his petite wife explained.

"You see," she said, graciously, "we already know what you tell us. He writes three times a week. In fact, we know more about his present activities than we did about his work here in Tokyo."

Once again, sitting with this family which treated me almost as a member, I was struck with the value of our International Exchange Service.

Letters this Japanese researcher was sending home had paved the way for friendship between an American and his kin. More than 40,000 foreign students in our schools are writing home each week to eager audiences.

Each year between 15,000 and 20,000 of these American-trained people return home, often to positions of responsibility and influence. They may not applaud everything American, but certainly they understand our motivation and sincerity of purpose.

Their opinions of us will count more than those of the professional diplomats, who think in terms of balances of power rather than the mutually common urge for neighborliness among the world's free peoples.

Our exchange student program is a fractional investment in dollars and cents. But its dividends are priceless. How else can you value America's future? ■

SOME CREATURES OF THE FAR NORTH CHANGE THEIR COLORED SUMMER COATS TO WINTER ONES OF WHITE

THIS COLOR SWITCH IS EFFECTED BY THE INCREASE AND DECREASE OF DAYLIGHT HOURS

WITH EACH SUCCEEDING FALL DAY, THE ANIMAL RECEIVES LESS LIGHT THROUGH HIS EYES...

AND THE PITUITARY GLAND IN HIS HEAD STOPS PRODUCING THE CHEMICAL WHICH CONTROLS COLOR PIGMENT

SO WHEN THE SUMMER FUR IS SHED, IT IS REPLACED BY WHITE HAIR

IN SPRING, AS THE DAYS GROW LONGER, THE PROCESS TAKES PLACE IN REVERSE

THE PROTECTION AFFORDED BY A WHITE COAT HELPS ANIMALS TO AVOID ENEMIES AS THEY SEEK A LIVELIHOOD IN THE SNOW COVERED TUNDRAS AND FORESTS OF THE NORTH

WEASELS, HARES, PTARMIGANS LEMMINGS, ARCTIC FOXES CHANGE TO WHITE EACH FALL
